

Thomas B. Shafte.

A. D. Medbury.

COLLEGE HANDBOOK OF COMPOSITION

BY

EDWIN C. WOOLLEY, PH.D.

AUTHOR OF WOOLLEY'S HANDBOOK OF COMPOSITION

AND

FRANKLIN W. SCOTT, PH.D.

FORMERLY HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

REVISED 1930

D. C. HEATH AND COMPANY

BOSTON

NEW YORK

CHICAGO

ATLANTA

SAN FRANCISCO

DALLAS

LONDON

COPYRIGHT, 1928,
BY ISABELLE WOOLLEY BARTLETT
AND FRANKLIN W. SCOTT

3 E 0

PRINTED IN U. S. A.

PREFACE

The College Handbook of Composition is a new member of the Woolley family, built on a new plan to serve a purpose somewhat different from that of any other member of the group. Like the original Woolley Handbook, it is designed to be used by students of composition for reference, at the direction of the instructor, in case of errors in themes, and for independent reference by persons who have writing of any kind to do and who want information on matters of grammar, spelling, punctuation, paragraphing, manuscript-arrangement, or letter-writing. The rules that make up the principal features of the book are, therefore, very much the same, for more than twenty years of continuously successful use and a large progeny of imitators have proved them to be fundamental and trustworthy guides to all who are engaged in writing.

But the rules have been considerably modified. Some changes were made when the Handbook was revised in 1919, and more were introduced in the New Handbook of Composition published in 1926 to adapt the rules to such modifications in the use of English as have been established beyond question in the time since the first Handbook was published. The present manual goes still farther by eliminating some rules that have come to seem too rigid; others have been somewhat softened; and a number of new ones have been added. These changes indicate a liberal attitude towards current usage as established by masters in the art of writing, but no departure from the general principle that the student should observe many rules of usage which may on occasion be ignored by accomplished writers.

The tendency to minimize the amount of rhetorical theory in the elementary course in composition has in many places led to the omission of a rhetoric text. But in almost all cases this has not been found satisfactory, because there has generally been felt a need of a minimum of theory on which to base rules of practice. The College Handbook may be used not only as a handbook of composition but also as an outline of the principles of rhetoric and composition so arranged as to present and illustrate the principles on which the rules are based. Those courses requiring only a minimum amount of rhetorical theory with a maximum of practice may therefore be based on this book without the addition of any other text. The rules are so grouped that together with brief statements of rhetorical principles they constitute a succinct but comprehensive treatment of unity, coherence, and emphasis as applied to the sentence, the paragraph, and the whole composition. In connection with the study of the sentence special attention should be directed to Appendix D, which presents a somewhat detailed study of connectives. Paragraph development is fully illustrated, and a fully illustrated section on outlining lays emphasis on the importance of careful organization in the whole composition. Diction and the qualities of style are given adequate attention.

Examples to illustrate the rules have been chosen to present as wide an application as possible, and in a large number of cases have been drawn from the writings of well-known authors. Each principal section of the book is followed by a generous number of exercises, so placed that they are immediately accessible but not obtrusive. Spelling, punctuation, grammar, and pronunciation are given the practical consideration shown by many years of experience to be most often needed by students.

Composition involves much more than the writing down of facts and ideas in orderly fashion. The gathering of material is often a nightmare to students, instructors, and librarians alike. To make this task as easy and effective as possible full directions are given for the use of the library, the taking of notes, the evaluating of sources, and the proper methods of documentation by means of footnotes. For those who aspire to get their writings into print directions are given for marking manuscript for the printer, and for reading and marking proof sheets — all the chores the writer must perform if he is to get his ideas decently in order on the printed page.

For such virtues as this volume may possess more credit is due to Mrs. Evelyn Tripp Berdahl than this general acknowledgment of her helpfulness can indicate; and our joint indebtedness to numerous members of the Department of English in the University of Illinois, where we both labored and learned for years, is here gratefully recorded.

F. W. S.

NEW YORK CITY

April, 1928

CONTENTS

	PAGE
THE USE OF THE LIBRARY	1
THE WORD	27
GOOD USAGE	27
PRECISION	34
EFFECTIVENESS	35
BREVITY	37
SINCERITY AND NATURALNESS	39
FIGURES OF SPEECH	44
GRACE OF STYLE	47
EXERCISES	51
THE SENTENCE	59
UNITY	59
COHERENCE	71
EMPHASIS	105
EXERCISES	109
THE PARAGRAPH.	116
DIVISION INTO PARAGRAPHS	117
LENGTH OF PARAGRAPHS.	122
UNITY	123
COHERENCE	125
EMPHASIS	128
PARAGRAPH DEVELOPMENT	130
EXERCISES	134
THE COMPOSITION AS A WHOLE	140
UNITY	140
COHERENCE	142
EMPHASIS	148
OUTLINES	150
EXERCISES	158
GRAMMAR	166
GRAMMATICAL AGREEMENT	166
MATTERS OF CASE	170

	PAGE
ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS	173
MATTERS OF VOICE	175
MATTERS OF MODE	175
MATTERS OF TENSE (including "shall" and "will")	176
EXERCISES	181
 PUNCTUATION	 184
THE COMMA	188
THE SEMICOLON	199
THE COLON	201
THE QUESTION MARK	202
THE EXCLAMATION MARK	203
THE DASH	203
PARENTHESES	205
BRACKETS	207
QUOTATION MARKS	208
THE APOSTROPHE	216
THE HYPHEN	218
MISCELLANEOUS RULES	219
EXERCISES	221
 SPELLING	 225
WORDS COMMONLY MISSPELLED	230
EXERCISES	240
 MECHANICS	 246
LEGIBILITY	246
ARRANGEMENT OF MANUSCRIPT	250
ALTERATIONS IN MANUSCRIPT	251
WRITING VERSE	252
EXTENDED QUOTATIONS OF PROSE	253
TABULATED LISTS	254
SYLLABICATION	255
ABBREVIATIONS	257
REPRESENTATION OF NUMBERS	259
CAPITALS	262
ITALICS	267
EXERCISES	269
 PREPARATION OF COPY FOR THE PRINTER AND CORRECTION OF PROOF	 271

CONTENTS

ix

	PAGE
LETTER WRITING	276
THE HEADING	276
THE INSIDE ADDRESS	280
THE COMPLIMENTARY CLOSE	284
THE SIGNATURE	285
LITERARY STYLE	287
FORMAL NOTES IN THE THIRD PERSON	290
SUNDRY MECHANICAL DIRECTIONS	291
THE ENVELOPE	296
APPENDIX A: GLOSSARY OF MISCELLANEOUS FAULTY EXPRESSIONS	299
APPENDIX B: GRAMMATICAL VOCABULARY . .	337
APPENDIX C: LIST OF WORDS OFTEN MISPRO- NOUNCED	361
APPENDIX D: CONNECTIVES	370
INDEX	380

TABLE OF CONTENTS IN DETAIL

[Bold-face numbers refer to sections or rules; other numbers refer to pages.]

	PAGE
THE USE OF THE LIBRARY	1
GENERAL INFORMATION 1 — Card catalog 1 1 — Call slip 2 2 — Systems of classification 3 2
REFERENCE BOOKS 4 4 — General reference books 4 — Dic- tionaries 4 — Synonyms and antonyms 5 — For special subjects 5-11 — Miscellaneous 11 — Guides to reference books and the use of the library 12
MAGAZINES 5 12 — General 13 — Of current events 13 — Book reviews 13
MAGAZINE INDEXES 6 14
USE OF REFERENCE BOOKS 7-8 14-17 — Taking library notes 9 17
BIBLIOGRAPHIES 10-11 19-22
FOOTNOTES 14 22 — Place 15 23 — Form 16 23 — Text with footnotes 17 24 — Abbreviations in footnotes 18 25
THE WORD	27
GOOD USAGE 27 — The standard 19 27 — National usage 27 — Provincialisms 20 27 — Technical words 21 27 — Foreign words 22 27 — Idiomatic expressions 23 28 — Use of prepo- sitions 23a 28 — Modifiers in double capacity 23b 29 — Faulty idioms 23c 30 — Present usage 30 — Obsolete and archaic words 24 30 — New words 25 30 — Reputable usage 30 — Defined 26 30 — Colloquialisms 27 31 — Contractions 27a 31 — Colloquial abbreviations 27b 31 — Improprieties 28 32 — Barbarisms 29 32 — Slang 30 33 — Extemporized words 31 33
LEARNING GOOD USAGE 33 — The means 32 33
PRECISION 34 — Confusing words 33 34 — Words of similar meanings 34 34 — Vague or ambiguous words 35 35
EFFECTIVENESS 35 — Specific and concrete words 36 35 — Forceful verbs 37 36 — Tone 38 37
BREVITY 37 — Tautology 39 37 — Pleonasm 40 37 — Wordi- ness 41 37
SINCERITY AND NATURALNESS 39 — Triteness 39 — Trite ex- pressions 42 39 — Hackneyed expressions 43 40 — News- paper mannerisms 44 40 — Nicknames 44a 41 — Verbal ornaments 44b 41 — Obtrusive novelty 44c 41 — Affecta-

tion 42 — High-flown language 45 42 — Poetic and legal diction 46 42 — Historical present 47 42 — Initials and blanks 48 43 — "The writer" and "we" for "I" 49 44

FIGURES OF SPEECH 44 — Definition 50 44 — Originality 50a 45 — Spontaneity 50b 45 — Good taste 50c 45 — Truth in figures 50d 45 — Overuse 50e 45 — Detailed figures 50f 46 Incongruous figures 51 46 — Incomplete figures 52 47

GRACE OF STYLE 47 — Euphonious words 53 47 — Rhyme and alliteration in prose 53a 47 — Cacophony 53b 48 — Rhythm in prose 54 48 — Absolute phrases 55 48 — Absolute pronouns 55a 48 — Latinistic phrases 55b 48 — Use in two senses 56 49 — Awkward repetition 57 49 — Awkward avoidance of repetition 58 49 — Repetition of "that" 59 50 — Repetition of forms 60 50

EXERCISES 51-58

THE SENTENCE 59

UNITY 59 — One complete thought 61 59 — Unconnected thoughts 62 59 — Unity by division 62a 59 — By subordination 62b 59 — By filling gaps 62c 60 — Stringy construction 63 60 — "So," "then," "also" to unite verbs 64 62 — "So" habit 65 62 — Two "buts" or "fors" 66 63 — Overlapping dependence 67 64 — Straggling sentences 68 65 — Run-on sentences 69 66 — Thoughts chopped up 70 67 — Frequent parentheses 71 67 — Comma fault 72 68 — Period fault 73 68 — Participles for verbs 74 71

COHERENCE 71 — General principle 75 71 — Reference 71 — Uncertain reference 76 71 — Weak "this" and "that" 77 72 — Remote reference 78 72 — Reference to obscure word 79 72 — Reference to unexpressed word 80 73 — Reference to whole statements 81 73 — Antecedent in parenthesis 82 74 — Indefinite "you" 83 74 — Indefinite "they" 84 74 — Indefinite "it" 85 74 — Confusing "it" 86 75 — Indefinite "that" and "those" 87 75 — Dangling modifiers 75 — How avoided 88 75 — Dangling participial phrases 88a 76 — Dangling gerund phrases 88b 77 — Dangling infinitive phrases 88c 78 — Dangling elliptical clauses 88a 78 — Allowable dangling modifiers 89 79 — "Due to," etc. 90 79 — Order of members 79 — Position of modifiers 91 79 — Position of "only," etc. 92 80 — Misplaced clauses 93 80 — Relative clauses 94 81 — Squinting modifiers 95 81 — Separate coordinate modifiers 96 82 — Split infinitives 97 82 — Smooth order 98 82 — Illogical construction 83 — Sentence elements omitted 99 83 — Confused structure 100 84 — Uncompleted structure 101 84 — Sentences as complements 102 84 — "When" or "there" clause for predicate noun 103 85 — "Because" clause for noun clause 104 85 — Logical agreements 105 85 — Quoted sentences as part of sentence 106 87 — "Other" or "else" in "than" or "as" clause 107 87 — More of the same 108 88 — "Of" with superlative 109 88

—Incorrect omissions 89 — Words in double capacity 110 89 — Auxiliaries and copulas in double capacity 110e 90 — “Than” or “as” clause in double capacity 110d 90 — Other modifiers in double capacity 110e 91 — Nouns in double capacity 110f 90 — “As to,” etc. in double capacity 110g 91 — Awkward omission of “that” 111 91 — Omission of articles and possessives 112 91 — Omission of prepositions 113 92 — Omission of standard of comparison 114 93 — Parallelism 93 — Of analogous elements 115 93 — Clearness of coördination 116 95 — Repetition of subordinating conjunctions 117 96 — Repetition of auxiliary verbs 118 97 — Repetition of prepositions 119 97 — Repetition of the infinitive sign 120 98 — Correlatives 121 98 — Misuse of coördinating conjunctions 122 99 — “And which” construction 122a 99 — “Which and” construction 122b 100 — Incorrect parallelism 123 101 — Incongruous substantives 124 101 — A, b, c, series 125 102 — Unnecessary shifting 102 — Of subject 126 102 — Of voice 127 102 — Of mood 128 103 — Of tense 129 103 — Of number 130 103 — Of person 131 103 — Miscellaneous rules 104 — Coherence by connectives 132 104 — Coherence by summarizing words 133 104 — Omission of unnecessary words 134 105

EMPHASIS 105 — General principle 135 105 — Transposition 136 105 — Parenthetic position of modifiers 137 105 — Parenthetic position of “therefore,” etc. 138 106 — Strong close 139 106 — Climactic order 140 107 — Upside-down subordination 141 108 — Balanced sentence 142 108 — Proportion 143 109 — Excision 144 109 — Repetition 145 109

EXERCISES 109-115

THE PARAGRAPH 116

PARAGRAPH INDENTION 146 116 — When numbered 147 116 — Irregular indention 148 116 — Incorrect indention 149 116 — Incorrect spacing 150 116

DIVISION INTO PARAGRAPHS 117 — An aid to clearness 117 — Fundamental principle 151 117 — Paragraphing distinct parts 152 117 — Introductory and concluding paragraphs 153 118 — Paragraphs of transition 154 118 — Paragraphing direct quotations 155 118 — Indention of dialogue 156 119 — Indention after quotations 157 120 — Indention within sentences 158 120 — Grouping related parts 159 121 — Paragraphing without change of topic 160 122

LENGTH OF PARAGRAPHS 122 — Paragraphs too long 161 122 — Over-frequent paragraphing 162 123 — Paragraphing for emphasis 163 123

UNITY 123 — General principle 164 123 — Topic sentence 165 125

COHERENCE 125 — Arrangements of sentences 166 125 — Transitional words and phrases 167 126 — Filling gaps

168 126 — Repetitions of words	169 127 — Connections by position	170 127 — Parallel construction	171 128
EMPHASIS	128 — By proportion	172 128 — By position	173 129 — Parallel construction
174 130	PARAGRAPH DEVELOPMENT	130 — Methods of development	175 130
EXERCISES	134-139
THE COMPOSITION AS A WHOLE			140
UNITY	140 — The general principle	176 140 — Relevancy shown by expressions	177 141 — By limiting the subject
178 141	COHERENCE	142 — The general principle	179 142 — Misplaced passages
180 144 — Coherent beginning	181 144 — Distinct introduction of new parts	182 145 — Connectives before contradictions	183 146 — Shift of tense in narrative
184 147 — Shift of point of view in narrative	185 147 — Shift of tense in description	186 148 — Shift from "I" to "one," etc.	187 148
EMPHASIS	148 — General principle	188 148 — Transitional phrases	189 148 — Proportion
190 149 — Position	191 149 — Suspense	192 149 — Climax	193 150
OUTLINES	150 — Definition	194 150 — Topic outlines	150 — Sentence outlines
151 — Numbering and lettering	195 153 — Alignment	196 153 — Introduction and conclusion	197 154 — Body in discussion
198 154 — Overminuteness	199 154 — Illogical practices	154 — Lone subtopic bad	200 154 — Subheads and governing topic
201 156 — Overlapping topics	202 156 — Coördination	203-205 157-158
EXERCISES	158-165
GRAMMAR			166
GRAMMATICAL AGREEMENT	166 — Agreement of subject and verb	206 166 — Watch intervening words	206a 166 — Number not affected by "with," etc.
206b 166 — Number affected by "and"	206c 166 — Singular verb with "or" and "nor"	206d 167 — Agreement with singular and plural substantives	206e 167 — Number with "there is" and "there are"
206f 167 — Number with collective nouns	206g 167 — Number with quantitives, sums, multiples	206h 168 — Agreement and predicate noun	207 168 — Number with "each," "every," etc.
208 169 — Agreement of adjective or pronoun with substantive	209 169
MATTERS OF CASE	170 — Subject in nominative case	210 170 — "Who" with "he says"	210a 170 — "Who" and preceding words
210b 170 — Predicate substantive with finite verb	211 170 — Subject and predicate complement of infinitive	212 171 — Case of its object	213 171 — Case after pure conjunctions
214 171 — Case of appositives	215 171 — Substantive after "than" or "as"	216 172 — Pos-

CONTENTS IN DETAIL

XV

PAGE

sessive with inanimate things 217 172 — Possessive in objective sense 218 172 — Possessive with gerund 219 173

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS 173 — Adverb or predicate adjective 220 173 — Comparative and superlative degree 221 174 — Some adjectives incapable of comparison 222 174 — Adverb or factitive adjective 223 174

MATTERS OF VOICE 175 — Misuse of Passive 224 175

MATTERS OF MODE 175 — The subjunctive 225 175

MATTERS OF TENSE (including "shall" and "will") 176 — To indicate simple future 226 176 — To indicate determination 227 176 — "Shall" and "will" with "like" etc. 228 177 — In questions 229 177 — In indirect quotations 230 178 — In contingent statements 231 178 — Tense of statements permanently true 232 178 — Undated past tense 233 179 — Confusion of past and present 234 179 — Past for past perfect 235 180 — Sequence of tenses 236 180 — Relation of subordinate and principal verbs 237 180 — Anachronous participles 238 181

EXERCISES 181-183

PUNCTUATION 184

PUNCTUATION BETWEEN CLAUSES 239 184 — Comma sufficient 239a 184 — Semicolon needed 239b 185 — Between long or punctuated clauses 239c 186 — Period between clauses 239c 187 — To show weight of clauses 240 187

THE PERIOD 241 188

THE COMMA 188 — Uses of the comma 242 188 — In direct address 242a 188 — With apposition 242b 188 — With absolute phrases 242c 188 — With parenthetic members 242d 189 — In names, dates, etc. 242e 190 — With words in pairs 242f 190 — With coordinate conjunctions 242g 190 — With subordinate clauses 242h 191 — With introductory adverbial phrases 242i 191 — To prevent mistaken junction 242j 192 — With consecutive adjectives 243 193 — In an a, b, and c series 244 193 — With restrictive and non-restrictive clauses 245a 193 — With restrictive and non-restrictive phrases 245b 194 — With "yes," "no," etc. 246 195 — With interjections 247 195 — Before quotations 248 195 — Unnecessary commas 249 195 — Misuse of comma before a series 250 195 — Misuse of comma after a series 251 196 — Misuse before a substantive clause 252 196 — The comma fault 253 197 — Consistency 254 198

THE SEMICOLON 199 — Between clauses 255a 199 — Before "so," "therefore," etc. 255b 199 — Before "and," "but," etc. 255c 200 — Between involved sentence members 255d 200 — Instead of a comma 255e 200 — Improper use instead of a comma 256 201

THE COLON 201 — As a sign of introduction 257 201 — After the salutation in letters 258 202 — In titles, references, etc. 259 202 — Not used before informal series 260 202

THE QUESTION MARK 202 — With direct, not indirect, questions 261 202 — With conjectural statements 262 202

THE EXCLAMATION MARK 263 203

THE DASH 203 — To make interruptions 264a 203 — For parenthesis marks 264b 203 — With summarizing expressions 264c 203 — Before afterthoughts 264d 203 — To set sentence-elements apart 264e 203 — Before appositives 264f 204 — With commas 265 204 — Indiscriminate use 266 205

PARENTHESES 205 — With indirectly related material 267 205 — With other punctuation marks 268 205 — Incorrect use of commas with parentheses 269 206 — Misuse 270 207

BRACKETS 207 — With interpolations 271 207

QUOTATION MARKS 208 — For direct quotations 272 208 — Misuse within quotations 274 208 — With "said he" etc. interpolated 275 208 — With "said he" excluded 275a 209 — Mark preceding "said he" 275b 209 — After "said he" 275c 209 — Semicolon with interpolation 275d 209 — Comma after interpolation 275a 209 — Relative positions of quotation marks and other marks 276 210-211 — Quotation marks with titles 277 211 — Within quotations 278 212 — Quotations within quotations 279 212 — Author's words in indirect quotation 280 212 — Quoted sentences in a context 281 212 — Technical terms 282 213 — To apologize for slang 283 213 — No apology needed 283a, b, c — Not used to enclose title of composition 284a 214 — With proper names 284b 215 — With proverbs 284c 215 — With coined words 284d 215 — For labeling humor 284e 215 — With quotations in form only 284f 215 — Without good reason 284g 216

THE APOSTROPHE 216 — To indicate possessive case 285 216 — Position in possessive singular 286 216 — With nouns ending in "s" 287 216 — Misuse with possessive pronouns 288 217 — With possession of inanimate objects 289 217 — With contractions 290 217 — In forming plurals 291 217

THE HYPHEN 218 — Joining two or more words before a noun 292 218 — Not to join adverb in "ly" to adjective or participle 293 219 — In writing fractions 294 219 — With compounds of "fellow," "father," etc. 295 219 — With compound numerals 296 219 — When dividing a word at end of line 297 219

MISCELLANEOUS RULES 219 — Punctuation with "such as" 298 219 — Introducing examples or explanations 299 220 — No punctuation at beginning of line 300 221

EXERCISES 221-224

SPELLING 225

PRONUNCIATION AND SPELLING 301 225 — Doubling final consonants 302 226 — No doubling with receding accent 303 226 — Adding "k" to "c" 304 227 — Dropping final "e"

305 227 — "Ce" and "ge" with "ous" and "able" 306 227 — Ending in "y" after consonants 307 227 — Verbs in "y" after consonant 308 227 — "Y" after consonant and before suffix 309 227 — "Ie" before "ing" 310 228 — Adjectives in "n" before "ness" 311 228 — "L" before "ly" 312 228 — Plurals in "s" and "es" 313a 228 — "Leaf," "thief," etc. 313b 228 — Nouns in "o" 313c 228 — Plurals of letters, symbols, etc. 313d 228 — Plurals of some foreign nouns 313e 229 — Present third person singular in "s" and "es" 314 229 — Three verbs ending in "eed" 315 229 — "Receive," "believe," etc. 316 229 — Principal and principle 317 229 — "Oh" and "O" 318 229

WORDS COMMONLY MISPELLED 319 230-238 — Words not to be united 320 239 — Expressions to be written as single words 321 239

EXERCISES 240-245

MECHANICS 246

LEGIBILITY 246 — Space between lines 322 246 — Space between words 323 246 — Space after period 324 246 — Space in typewritten copy 325 246 — Crowding of punctuation 326 246 — Crowding the page 327 246 — Gaps between letters 328 247 — Writing "and" 329 247 — Dotting "i's" and "j's" 330 247 — Placing dots and crosses 331 247 — Crossing "t's" 332 247 — Forming quotation marks 333 247 — Writing Roman numbers 334 247 — Making letters simple 335 250

ARRANGEMENT OF MANUSCRIPT 250 — Writing materials, etc. 336 250 — Numbering pages 337 250 — Placing the title 338 250 — Top margin 339 250 — Left margin 340 250

ALTERATIONS IN MANUSCRIPT 251 — Insertions 341 251 — Erasures 342 251 — Transpositions 343 251 — Indicating paragraphs 344 251 — Canceling paragraph divisions 345 251

WRITING VERSE 252 — Run-over lines 346 252 — Grouping verse into lines 347 252 — Verse set apart on a page 348 252

EXTENDED QUOTATIONS OF PROSE 349 253

TABULATED LISTS 254 — Indention 350 254 — Tabulated matter set apart on a page 351 254

SYLLABICATION 255 — Divide words only between syllables 352 255 — Follow pronunciation 352a 255 — Prefixes 352b 256 — Suffixes 352c 256 — Doubled consonants 352d 256 — Digraphs 352e 256 — Final "le" 352f 257 — Monosyllables 353 257 — Syllables of one letter 354 257 — Awkward and excessive division 355 257

ABBREVIATIONS 257 — Generally objectionable 356 257 — Right in some places, wrong elsewhere 357 258 — Titles 358 258

REPRESENTATION OF NUMBERS 259 — Dates, folio, and house numbers 359 259 — Sums of money 360 259 — When to spell numbers 361 260 — Ages, hours, 362 261 — Avoid "st," "nd," etc. with numerals 363 262 — Parenthetic repetition of sums of money 364 262

CAPITALS 262 — Proper nouns 365 262 — Not seasons 365a 263 — Not cardinal points 365b 263 — Family relatives 366 263 — Titles of persons 367 263 — Common noun elements of proper names 368 264 — Names of races and languages 369 264 — Literary titles 370 264 — First word of a sentence 371 264 — First word after "he said," etc. 371a 264 — "He said," etc. 371b 265 — Quoted sentences with beginning omitted 371c 265 — First word in each line of verse 372 265 — "I," "O," "oh" 373 265 — Salutations and closes of letters 374 266 — After a semicolon 375 266 — After a colon 376 266 — Series of short questions in a sentence 377 266 — Do not use capitals without reason 378 267

ITALICS 267 — How to indicate 379 267 — Titles of books, etc. 380 267 — "The" in titles 381 267 — Titles of periodicals 382 268 — Ships 383 268 — Words as words 384 268 — Foreign words 385 268 — Latin words in footnotes 386 268 — For emphasis 387 269 — Not for humor 388 269

EXERCISES 269-270

PREPARATION OF COPY FOR THE PRINTER AND CORRECTION OF PROOF 271

COPY DEFINED 389 271 — Qualities required 390 271 — Technical practices 391 271 — Sample of marked copy 391 272 — Inserting matter in copy 392 273 — Sending manuscript 393 273 — Galley proof 394 273 — Page proof 395 274 — Proofreader's marks 396 275

LETTER WRITING 276

THE HEADING 276 — The address 398-402 276, 277 — The date 403 277 — Punctuation 412 279

THE INSIDE ADDRESS 280 — Essential to complete letter 413 280 — Position 414-416 280 — When omitted 417 281 — Avoid name without address 418 281 — Avoid abbreviation 419 281 — Punctuation 420 282 — Salutations in business letters 421 283 — In friendly letters 422 283 — Improper salutations 423 283, 424 284 — Avoid abbreviations 425 284 — Punctuation 426 284 — Position 427 284

THE COMPLIMENTARY CLOSE 284 — In business letters 428 284 — In friendly letters 429 285 — Vulgar closes 430 285 — Position and punctuation 431 285 — Position of preceding words 432 285 — The Signature 285 — Positions 433 285 — Signature in business letters 434 286 — In social notes 435

CONTENTS IN DETAIL

xix

PAGE

286 — Literary style 287 — Certain vulgarisms 436 287 —
Use of "I" 437, 438 289 — Specimen business letter 289 —
Specimen friendly letter 289

FORMAL NOTES IN THE THIRD PERSON 290 — Use third person
439 290 — Use present tense 439 290

SUNDRY MECHANICAL DIRECTIONS 291 — Ink, etc. 440 291 —
Paper 441 291 — Margins 442 291 — Flat sheets 443 292 — Four-page sheets 444 292 — Folding and enclosing four-page sheets 445 292 — Flat sheets of note size 446 292 — Flat sheets of commercial size 447 292 — Addressing the envelope 449 296 — Attaching the stamp 451 297

APPENDIX A: Glossary of Miscellaneous Faulty Expressions . 299

APPENDIX B: Grammatical Vocabulary 337

APPENDIX C: List of Words Often Mispronounced 361

APPENDIX D: Connectives 370

INDEX 380

COLLEGE HANDBOOK OF COMPOSITION

THE USE OF THE LIBRARY

GENERAL INFORMATION REGARDING THE LIBRARY

The college student or any one else who has writing to do must know how to use a library. First of all he should know how to use the card catalogue. He will also find it valuable to know the system of classifying books in his library and to become familiar with general reference books and magazine indexes.

1. The card catalogue is the index of the library and it lists on 3×5 -inch cards every book contained in the library. These cards are filed alphabetically according to author, title, and subject in a cabinet of small drawers which are labeled to indicate their contents.

Card
catalogue

An author card has as its heading the surname of the author. (A heading is the word, phrase, or name at the top of the card by which the card is filed.) An author card is made for every book the author of which is known, whether the authorship is individual or group. An exception occurs in the case of work by so many different authors that their number is prohibitive for entry.

A title card has as its heading the title of the book and is filed according to the first word of the title not an article. Works with titles likely to be remembered, anonymous works, and periodicals have title cards.

A subject card has as its heading the name of the subject treated in the book. (The headings for subject cards in most libraries are in red type.) When a student is looking for a book by an author with a common surname, whose forename he does not know, he will save time by looking under the subject of the book rather than under the author's name, for there may be many cards by authors of the same surname. As a rule all works, with the exception of fiction, plays, and poems, have subject cards.

In addition a work may be entered not only under author, title, and subject, but also under the name of the editor, translator, or compiler.

From the information on the card the student may be able to decide whether the book will be of value to him. The card will usually contain such information as the dates of the author's birth and death, the name of the publisher, the number of pages in the book, the size of the book, and an outline of its contents.

Call slip

2. When the student has found the card for the book he desires, he should write on the call slip furnished by the library, the call number, which is printed or typed in the left-hand corner of the card, the author's name, the title, and the volume number if the work is in several volumes. (A separate slip should be made out for each book.) The slip should then be presented at the loan desk.

Systems of classification of books

3. The student is permitted to consult books on the shelves in the reference room (see Rule 4), and in many libraries he is allowed to look up books anywhere in the library. This privilege is often of benefit, for in searching for a book, the student may find books that he might otherwise overlook. He should, therefore, know the system of classification in his library. The books in general libraries are arranged according to subject matter; for instance, all the histories of England will be placed together. Either the Library of Congress system or the Dewey Decimal system is commonly used. According to the former, all knowledge is divided into twenty parts, and each part is indicated by a letter of the alphabet, with arabic numerals and additional letters for subdivisions. The main classes are:

- A General works — Polygraphy
- B Philosophy — Religion
- C History — Auxiliary sciences
- D History and topography (except America)
- E and F American history
- G Geography — Anthropology
- H Social sciences
- J Political science
- K Law
- L Education
- M Music
- N Fine arts
- P Language and literature
- Q Science
- R Medicine
- S Agriculture — Plant and animal industry
- T Technology
- U Military science
- V Naval science
- Z Bibliography and Library science

The Dewey Decimal system divides all knowledge into ten parts, and gives each part a number. These main classes are each divided into nine subdivisions, which are further divided into nine sections each. Further divisions are indicated by a decimal point and additional numerals. The main classes are:

000 General works	500 Natural science
100 Philosophy	600 Useful arts
200 Religion	700 Fine arts
300 Sociology	800 Literature
400 Philology	900 History

REFERENCE BOOKS

Reference
books

4. A reference book is a book that contains a great deal of information in a small space and that is so planned that the facts can be found quickly; dictionaries and encyclopedias are typical reference books. These books as a rule are kept together in a separate room and cannot be taken from the library. The following lists include important reference books frequently used.

General Reference Books

Encyclopædia Britannica. (14th edition, 1910-1911. 29 vols.) Material of value only to the specialist has been much condensed in this edition.

New International Encyclopedia. (Latest edition 1922, 24 vols. Supplement, 1930. 2 vols.)

Encyclopedia Americana. 1918-1920. 30 vols. (Revision 1922.)

New International Year Book. 1907-. Forms an annual supplement to the New International Encyclopedia.

Americana Annual. 1923-. Annual supplement to the Encyclopedia Americana.

Dictionaries

New Century Dictionary. 1927. 3 vols.

New English Dictionary. 1888-1928. 10 vols. (Also referred to as Murray's Dictionary or the Oxford Dictionary.) A monumental work. Especially valuable for derivations and the changes in the meanings of words.

New Standard Dictionary. 1913.

Webster's New International Dictionary. 1928. Reprint of 1909 edition, with prefatory list of new words.

Synonyms and Antonyms

- ALLEN, F. S. Allen's Synonyms and Antonyms. 1921.
Words characterized as "affected," "bookish," "rare," etc. No definitions.
- CRABB, GEORGE. Crabb's English Synonymes. 1917. Distinctions in meaning given.
- FERNALD, J. C. English Synonyms and Antonyms. 1914. Distinctions in meaning given. Use of prepositions.
- ROGET, P. M. Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases. 1925. Valuable for enlarging the vocabulary.

Reference Books for Special Subjects

Agriculture

- Agricultural Index*. 1916—.
- BAILEY, L. H. Cyclopedia of American Agriculture. 1907—1909. 4 vols.
- United States Department of Agriculture Publications.
For example, the Yearbook and the Experiment Station Record.

Allusions, Proverbs, Quotations

- ALLIBONE, S. A. Poetical Quotations from Chaucer to Tennyson. 1891.
- Prose Quotations from Socrates to Macaulay. 1889.
- APPERSON, G. L. English Proverbs and Proverbial Phrases. 1929.
- BARTLETT, JOHN. Familiar Quotations. 1914.
- New and Complete Concordance . . . of Shakespeare. 1910.
- BENHAM, W. G. Book of Quotations, Proverbs and Household Words. 1924.
- BREWER, E. C. Dictionary of Phrase and Fable. 1923.
- Reader's Handbook of famous names in fiction, allusions, references, proverbs, plots, stories, poems. 1898.
- CRUDEN, ALEXANDER. Complete Concordance to the Holy Scriptures. 1916. A good desk concordance.
- GERWIG, HENRIETTA. Crowell's Handbook for Readers and Writers. 1925.
- HOYT, J. K. New Cyclopedia of Practical Quotations. 1922.
- STRONG, JAMES. Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible. 1894.

WALSH, W. S. International Encyclopedia of Prose and Poetic Quotations from the Literature of the World. 1908.

Architecture

FLETCHER, B. F. History of Architecture. 1921.

STURGIS, RUSSELL. Dictionary of Architecture and Building. 1901. 3 vols.

Art

CHAMPLIN, J. D. and PERKINS, C. C. Cyclopedia of Painters and Painting. 1892. 4 vols.

REINACH, SALOMON. Apollo. 1924.

FIELDING, MANTLE. Dictionary of American Painters, Sculptors and Engravers. 1927.

Biography

Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography. 1916-1928. 11 vols.

Dictionary of American Biography. (20 vols.) Vols. 1-4. 1928-1930.

Dictionary of National Biography. 1885-1900. 63 vols. Supplements: 1901, 3 vols.; 1912, 3 vols.; 1927, 1 vol.

Lippincott's Universal Pronouncing Dictionary of Biography and Mythology. 1915.

National Cyclopedia of American Biography. 1893-1929. 20 vols. "Current volume A-B." Loose leaf.

Who's Who; Who's Who in America; Wer Ist's, Qui êtes-vous, etc. Separate books containing brief accounts of living men and women. Issued more or less regularly in various countries.

Classical Antiquities

PECK, H. T., editor. Harper's Dictionary of Classical Literature. 1896.

Commerce, General Business, Economics, Statistics

CHISHOLM, G. G. Handbook of Commercial Geography. 1928.

CLARK, V. S. History of Manufactures in the United States. 1929. 3 vols.

- FREEMAN, W. G. and CHANDLER, S. E. The World's Commercial Products. 1907.
- MULHALL, M. G. Dictionary of Statistics. 1903.
- NEWARK, N. J. Free Public Library. 2400 business books and guide to business literature. 1921.
- Business books: 1920–1926. 1927.
- Publications of the United States Department of Commerce. For example, Commerce Yearbook; Survey of Current Business; Statistical Abstract.
- United States. Bureau of the Census. Census. 1790–.
- WEBB, A. D. The New Dictionary of Statistics. 1911.
- World Almanac*. Annual. 1868–.

Current Events and Progress

- American Year Book*. 1910–1919. 1926–.
- Europa Year Book*. 1926–.
- New York Times Index*. 1913–. Subject index to the Times. Forms an outline of current history.
- Public Affairs Information Service*. 1915–.
- Statesman's Year Book*. 1864–.
- Times* (London) Official Index. 1906–.

Customs and Holidays

- BRAND, JOHN. Observations on the Popular Antiquities of Great Britain. 1888–1890. 3 vols.
- CHAMBERS, ROBERT. Book of Days. 1891. 2 vols.
- HAZELTINE, M. E. Anniversaries and Holidays. 1928.
- HAZLITT, W. C. Faiths and Folklore. 1905. 2 vols.
- SCHAUFFLER, R. H. Our American Holidays. 1907–1927. 11 vols.
- WALSH, W. S. Curiosities of Popular Customs . . . 1898.

Education

- Education Index*. 1929–.
- MONROE, PAUL, editor. Cyclopedia of Education. 1911–1913. 5 vols.

Engineering

- Engineering Index*. 1884–.

Gazetteers and Atlases

- Cambridge Modern History.* Vol. 14, Atlas. 1912.
Commercial Atlas of America. 1925.
Commercial Atlas of Foreign Countries. 1921.
Lippincott's New Gazetteer. 1922.
Times Survey Atlas of the World. 1924.

History

- Cambridge Ancient History.* 1923-. (8 vols.) Vols. 1-7, Atlas, Vols. 1-2.
Cambridge Medieval History. 1911-. (8 vols.) Vols. 1-5.
Cambridge Modern History. 1902-1912. 14 vols.
 CHANNING, EDWARD, HART, A. B. and TURNER, F. J., Guide to the Study and Reading of American History.
 1912.
 GROSS, CHARLES. The Source and Literature of English History from the Earliest Times to about 1485. 1915.
 LARNED, J. N. Literature of American History; a bibliographical guide. 1902.
New Larned History for Ready Reference. 1922. 12 vols.
 PLOETZ, K. J. Manual of Universal History. 1925.
Writings on American History, 1902, 1903, 1906-1924.

Home Economics

- PLANCHÉ, J. R. Cyclopædia of Costume. 1876-1879. 2 vols.
 ROBERTSON, A. I. Guide to Literature of Home and Family Life. 1924.

Industrial Arts

- Industrial Arts Index.* 1913-.

Law

- Corpus Juris.* 1914-1929.
Index to Legal Periodicals. 1908-. Vols. 1-48. A-Pl.
 United States. Library of Congress. State Law Index.
 1925-. 1929-.

Literature

- A. L. A. Catalogue. 1926.
Authors' Digest. 1927. 18 vols.
BAKER, E. A. Guide to the Best Fiction in English. 1913.
— Guide to Historical Fiction. 1914.
Book Review Digest. 1905—.
Cambridge History of American Literature. 1917–1921. 4 vols.
Cambridge History of English Literature. 1907–1917. 14 vols.
CLARK, B. H. British and American Drama of Today. Study outlines, biographies, and bibliographies. 1915.
— Continental Drama of Today. Outlines for study, biographies, and bibliographies. 1914.
CROSS, T. P. Bibliography and Methods of English Literary History. 1919.
Dramatic Index, 1909—.
FIRKINS, INA. Index to Plays, 1800–1926. 1927.
— Index to Short Stories. 1923. Supplement, 1928.
GAYLEY, C. M. and SCOTT, F. N. Methods and Materials of Literary Criticism. Vol. I. GAYLEY and SCOTT. 1899. Vol. II. GAYLEY and KURTZ, B. P. 1920.
GRANGER, EDITH. Index to Poetry and Recitations. 1918. Supplement, 1929.
HEFLING, HELEN and RICHARDS, EVA. Index to Contemporary Biography and Criticism. 1929.
KELLER, H. R. Readers' Digest. 1929.
LOGASA, HANNAH and VER NOOY, WINIFRED. An Index to One-act Plays. 1924.
MAC KERROW, R. B. Introduction to Bibliography for Literary Students. 1927.
MANLY, J. M. and RICKERT, EDITH. Contemporary British Literature. Bibliographies and Study Outlines. 1928.
— Contemporary American Literature. 1929.
MOULTON, C. W., editor. Library of Literary Criticism of English and American Authors. 1901–1905. 8 vols.

Medicine

- Quarterly Cumulative Index to Current Medical Literature*. 1916—.
STEDMAN, T. L. Practical Medical Dictionary. 1928.

Music

- GROVE, SIR GEORGE. Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians. 1928. 6 vols.
SEARS, M. E. Song Index. 1926.

Mythology

- EDWARDES, MARIAN. Dictionary of Non-Classical Mythology. 1912.
GAYLEY, C. M. Classic Myths in English Literature and in Art. 1911.
Mythology of All Races. 1916-1927. Vols. 1, 3-4, 6-12.
See also references under Classical Antiquities.

Philosophy and Psychology

- BALDWIN, J. M. Dictionary of Philosophy and Psychology. 1901-1905. 3 vols.
Psychological Index. 1894-.
RAND, BENJAMIN, compiler. Bibliography of Philosophy, Psychology, and Cognate Subjects. 1905.

Political Science

- Cyclopedia of American Government*. 1914. 3 vols.
Political Handbook of the World. 1929-.
See also references under Current Events and Progress.

Religion

- Catholic Encyclopedia*. 1907-1922. 17 vols.
Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics. 1911-1927. 13 vols.
FRAZER, SIR J. G. The Golden Bough. 1907-1915. 12 vols.
Jewish Encyclopedia. 1901-1906. 12 vols.
SCHAFF, PHILIP. The New Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge. 1908-1914. 13 vols.

Social Sciences

- Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences*. (15 vols.) Vol. 1. 1930.

General Science

- International Catalogue of Scientific Literature*. 1902-.
THOMSON, J. R. The Outline of Science. 1922. 4 vols.

Anthropology and Ethnology

- RIPLEY, W. Z. Selected Bibliography of Anthropology and Ethnology of Europe. 1899.
Peoples of All Nations. 1922-1924. 7 vols.

Botany

- Botanical Abstracts*. Monthly publication containing abstracts and citations. 1918-.
BRITTON, N. L. and BROWN, A. Illustrated Flora of the Northern United States. 1913. 3 vols.

Chemistry

- BOLTON, H. C. Select Bibliography of Chemistry. 1899-1904.
Chemical Abstracts. American Chemical Society. 1907-.
THORPE, SIR THOMAS. A Dictionary of Applied Chemistry. 1922-1927. 7 vols.

Geology

- Publications of United States Geological Survey. For example, World Atlas of Commercial Geology; Geological Atlas of the United States; and various bibliographies.

Natural History

- Nature Library*. 1905-1912. 17 vols. By several authors, treating such subjects as animals, birds, shells, butterflies, trees, etc.

Physics

- GLAZEBROOK, SIR RICHARD, editor. A Dictionary of Applied Physics. 1922-1923. 5 vols.

Sociology

- BLISS, W. D. P. and BINDER, R. M., editors. New Encyclopedia of Social Reform. 1908. Includes historical, biographical, and statistical material. Somewhat out of date.
See also references under Current Events and Progress; Debate Material; Commerce, General Business, and Statistics; Political Science.

Miscellaneous

Debate Material

- FOSTER, W. T. Argumentation and Debating. 1917. The Handbook Series. The former Debater's Handbook Series is now incorporated with this. Bibliographies; reprints from books, magazines, etc.; briefs.
- Intercollegiate Debates*. 1909-1917. 7 vols. A year book of college debating with records of questions and decisions, specimen speeches, and bibliographies.
- PHELPS, E. M. Debaters' Manual. 1929. Articles selected from authorities on debating. Bibliographies.
- Reference Shelf*. 1922-. Pamphlets on current topics.
- University Debaters' Annual*. 1915-. Constructive and rebuttal speeches delivered in debates of American colleges and universities. Briefs and bibliographies.
- See also references under Current Events and Progress; Commerce, General Business, and Statistics.

United States Public Documents

- SWANTON, W. I., compiler. Guide to United States Government Publications. 1918.
- Various catalogues and price lists covering United States public documents, 1789-.

Guides to Reference Books and to the Use of the Library

- ARNETT, L. D. Elements of Library Methods. 1925.
- HUTCHINS, MARGARET, JOHNSON, ALICE, and WILLIAMS, MARGARET. Guide to the Use of Libraries. 1925.
- MUDGE, I. G. Guide to Reference Books. 1929.

MAGAZINES

Magazines

5. Magazines are the principal sources of information on subjects of current interest. In the better class of magazines the student will often find articles of permanent value. Every year or six months, or at other convenient periods, the numbers of a magazine are bound together in a volume and are thus available for reference use in a convenient form. The following list gives a few of the standard magazines which are of importance for general reading, current history, and book reviews:

General

American

American Mercury
American Review of Reviews
Atlantic Monthly Century
Foreign Affairs Forum
Harper's Monthly
Living Age
North American Review
Scribner's Magazine

English

Contemporary Review
Criterion Fortnightly Review
London Mercury Nineteenth Century

Current Events

American

Congressional Digest	Outlook and Independent
Current History Magazine	Review of Reviews
Literary Digest	Survey
Nation	Time
New Republic	World's Work

English

Graphic	Saturday Review
Nation and the Athenæum	Spectator
New Statesman

Book Reviews

AmericanBookmanNew York Times Book ReviewBooksSaturday Review of LiteratureVirginia Quarterly ReviewEnglishBookmanSaturday ReviewNation and the AthenæumSpectatorTimes (London) Literary Supplement

GREGORY, WINIFRED, editor. Union List of Serials in the Libraries of the United States and Canada. 1927.

MAGAZINE INDEXES

Magazine
indexes

6. Magazine indexes contain references to magazine articles by author, title, or subject. The following magazine indexes are important.

Poole's Index to Periodical Literature. 1802-1906. Subject index only.

Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. 1900-. Alphabetical list under author, title, and subject.

—: Supplement. 1907-1919. Includes periodicals not indexed in Reader's Guide.

International Index to Periodicals. 1920-. Continuation of Reader's Guide: Supplement.

Book Review Digest. 1905-. Lists the more important books of general interest and gives references to and often a brief digest of the reviews published about each work.

See also special indexes under subjects above.

USE OF REFERENCE BOOKS

Judging the value of books for reference

7. In judging the value of books as sources for reference material, the student should consider certain points.

(a) He should distinguish between primary and secondary material; that is, between original documents or texts and some one's interpretation of that document or text. For example, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States are primary material; Carl L. Becker's The Declaration of Independence; a Study in the History of Political Ideas (New York, 1922), and James M. Beck's The Constitution of the United States; a Brief Study of the Genesis, Formulation, and Political Philosophy of the Constitution of the United States (New York, 1922) are secondary material. Secondary material is often as valuable to the student as primary material, but the latter may not only give information; it may also afford an opportunity of checking inaccuracies of fact or of interpretation in secondary material.

(b) Can one depend upon the accuracy of the statements in the book? Is the author an authority on his subject? Some information regarding the author may often be found on the title page of the book. His name is frequently followed by the degrees he has received from universities, by the names of other books that he has written, or by the names of learned societies, institutions, etc., to which he belongs. More confidence can be placed in articles if they are signed by the person writing them, for that person assumes responsibility for the accuracy of the statements. In using statistics, the student should note whether they are based on official or other reports, and whether exact reference is made to their sources. Greater confidence can be placed in a book published by a reputable firm than in others.

(c) Allowance must sometimes be made for the fact that the author may have political, religious, or national prejudices.

(d) The date of the book should be noted. (The date usually appears on the title page; if not, on the copyright page.) In many subjects the value of the material depends directly upon the date. The student should note, in examining the card catalogue, whether there is a " revised edition " or an " enlarged edition " of the book he is to use.

(e) Reference books that give bibliographies, that is, lists of additional material, are of value. These bibliographies are usually placed at the end of articles or chapters or at the end of the book.

(f) The scope of the book should be considered. One work may give a detailed analysis of the subject for the specialist; another may give only a summary. If the student is to write a short paper or to give a short talk, he would find a summary treatment in one chapter of a book of more value to him than a three-volume treatise.

Use of books for
reference

8. In order to decide whether a book contains material bearing on a certain subject, the student will need to become acquainted with the contents without having to read the book through. The title page may often give him information regarding the subject treated, the field covered, the class of readers for whom the book is intended, or the point of view of the author. The preface usually states these facts, and often gives the author's reasons for writing and the names of those to whom he is indebted for assistance in the work. By a study of the Table of Contents, which may include only the chapter headings or may include a detailed analysis of the parts of the chapters, the student will gain an idea of the material in the book. Many works will contain introductory chapters which will give a general survey of the subject, preparing the reader for the matter to follow. In the opening and concluding paragraphs of a chapter, the student may find summaries of the contents of that chapter. The book may contain a summarizing chapter at the end. The index at the end of a work is an alphabetical list of topics, persons, places, events, etc., appearing in the book. From the index, the student can quickly find out whether a particular subject is treated in the work; from the Table of Contents, however, he will get an outline of the whole work.

9. Before the student takes any notes on a work that contains useful material for his paper or report, he should first read hastily the whole article, chapter, or book, as the case may be, in order to get the author's main point and his development of that point. (See Rule 8.) The student will then be better able to judge just what material he needs. In a second reading, he should note down the main point and the vital steps in the development of that point. The number of less important details noted down will depend upon the length of the paper or report to be given and the relative importance of the material to him. If the article is to furnish him only background matter, he may need to note only the main point. The shorter the notes the better, of course; yet enough of the context should be taken so that the idea cannot be misinterpreted. The student is under a moral obligation to the author, whose ideas he is using, to give the reader a correct understanding of these ideas.

Taking
library
notes

The notes may be either cited or quoted. In citation, the student puts into his own words the author's ideas. In quotation, the exact words of the author are copied and enclosed within quotation marks. Quotations may be used in place of citations when the points are very important, when they might be questioned, or when they are very aptly stated. If the student is not careful to distinguish between quoted and cited passages, he may allow borrowed phrases to appear in his paper as his own; he must make perfectly clear in his paper which ideas he has borrowed and which are his own. These points can be kept clear to a great extent by careful note-taking.

The following suggestions on the form of notes may be helpful:

a. Take notes on cards or slips of paper of a uniform size. Library card size, 3×5 , is convenient, but a larger size may be used.

b. Write on one side only and do not crowd the writing.

c. State the subject in the upper left-hand corner.

d. Put each point upon a separate card; if more than one card is needed for one point, note the subject and the name of the book on each new card and number it. Number these cards and clip them together.

e. State on each card the exact source, noting the author, the work, and the page. (The bibliography at the end of the student's paper will give fuller information regarding the source. See Rules 10-13.)

f. Put quotation marks around material that is exactly quoted. If the parts are omitted, elision marks (. . .) should be used where the omission occurs. Brackets should enclose words which are not part of the quotation, but which are written within the quotation marks. Do not use quotation marks for citations or paraphrases.

g. Always quote exactly, even to the punctuation marks and the spelling. If there is an obvious error in the text, insert after it the word sic in brackets, which indicates that the quotation is exact.

h. Formulate a system of abbreviations and follow it consistently. For instance, if the word Renaissance occurs frequently in the text, abbreviate it to Ren. Use w. for with, etc. As a rule, in a summary omit the articles, copulas, and connectives.

After the notes are taken, they may be arranged alphabetically according to the subject in the left-hand corner and filed in a tray or pasteboard box into which they fit. Guide cards may be used to indicate the divisions of the subject. The student then has his notes in a convenient form for writing his paper. (For the proper form for footnotes see Rules 14-18.)

These same directions may be followed in note-taking for "outside" reading. Since such notes do not, as a rule, have to be rearranged as do the notes for a paper, they may be more conveniently taken on loose-leaf notebook paper and may be included with the student's class notes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

10. As soon as the student finds a book or an article which he thinks will be of help to him, he should make a note of it. This list of books and articles is his bibliography. Each reference should be written down on a separate library card or slip of paper (3 × 5 inches). With only one title on a card, the student may quickly arrange his bibliography in alphabetical

Making a bibliography

order. Enough information regarding the book should be copied down so that the book may be identified easily. As a rule, the following points should be included:

- (1) Name of author in full, surname first.
- (2) Title of book or article.
- (3) For a book: edition, if other than the first; place of publication; publisher if desired; date of publication; number of volumes, if more than one.
- (4) For an article: title of periodical; volume number; page number; date of issue of the periodical (month, day, and year).

SPECIMEN BIBLIOGRAPHY CARD

881

A 8 po.Yco

Cooper, Lane

The Poetics of Aristotle, its meaning and influence Boston: Marshall Jones and Company, 1923.

Bibliography pp. 154-157.

Additional information, not to be included in the final bibliography, may be noted on the card; as, for example, the library call number, the scope of the book, bibliography included in the book, the source of the reference, etc.

11. When the student has completed his paper, he can copy his bibliography from his cards on sheets of paper and place it at the end of his manuscript. The following models will illustrate forms for various kinds of books and articles.

1. Books

(a) by one author

PARRINGTON, VERNON LOUIS. Main Currents in American Thought. New York: Harcourt, Brace and Company, 1927.

(b) By two or more authors

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN, AND BEARD, MRS. MARY. The Rise of American Civilization. New York: Macmillan, 1927.

(c) An edited text

WORDSWORTH, WILLIAM. The Prelude. Edited from the manuscript with introduction and textual and critical notes by Ernest De Sélin-court. Oxford: The Clarendon Press, 1926.

(d) A translation

GREGORY OF TOURS. The History of the Franks. Translated by O. W. Dalton. Oxford University Press, 1927. 2 vols.

(e) A book in a series

GREENE, EVARTS BOUTELL. Provincial America. 1690-1740. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1905. (The American Nation: A History, edited by Albert Bushnell Hart.)

2. Articles

(a) Magazine article

FARR, CLIFFORD H. "The Philosophy of Growth." The Atlantic Monthly. CXXXVI: 508-517. Oct., 1925.

(b) Encyclopedia article

WATTS-DUNTON, WALTER THEODORE. "Poetry." The Encyclopædia Britannica. Eleventh edition. XXXI: 877-890.

(c) Essay in a collection

NEILSON, WILLIAM ALLAN. "Burns in England." In Anniversary Papers by colleagues and pupils of George Lyman Kittredge. Boston: Ginn and Company, 1913.

3. Government Publications

"Trend toward Apartment-house Living in America." Monthly Labor Review. Vol. XXIV, no. 6, pp. 1-18. June, 1927. United States Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Arrangement of bibliography

12. The bibliography is usually arranged alphabetically according to the last name of the author. If the author's name is not known, the book or article is generally placed alphabetically according to the title. If the bibliography is long, it may be advisable to classify it; as, for example, according to subject matter, or according to primary or secondary sources. (See Rule 7a.)

Aids in making a
bibliography

13. The card catalogue, special bibliographies published by the Library of Congress, The American Library Association (the A.L.A. Index, the A.L.A. Catalogue, the A.L.A. Booklist), and the magazine indexes are valuable aids in making a bibliography. The student should examine the lists at the end of encyclopedia articles, and should look for bibliographies in the books that he is consulting. He should also learn to use the volumes of special bibliographies classified as 010 in the Decimal system, and as Z in the Library of Congress system.

FOOTNOTES

Purpose
of footnotes

14. The sources of all material not original with the writer should be acknowledged. This acknowledgment may be made in the bibliography, but it should be more specifically stated with the exact page reference in a footnote on the page on which the quotation or reference occurs.

NOTE. — Footnotes may also be used for additional explanatory material that may not conveniently go into the text.

Example: They were to regain youth as had old Æson.¹

¹ Allusion to the myth of Medea and Æson in which Medea through her sorceries restores Æson's youth.

15. Footnotes should be placed at the bottom of the page on which the borrowed material occurs, and not at the end of the paper. (See Rule 17.) In manuscript prepared for the printer, the footnote may be placed immediately below the word or passage to which it refers, and separated from the body of the text by lines across the page above and below it. Place

16. The following points should be noted: Form

(a) Numbering of footnotes is preferable to the use of asterisks and other symbols.

(b) It is preferable in a manuscript to number the footnotes consecutively on the page, but not consecutively throughout the manuscript, for the reason that additional footnotes may be inserted without a complete renumbering. In a printed text the footnotes are often numbered consecutively throughout.

(c) The index number should be placed after the word or passage to which the footnote refers, and at the beginning of the footnote. (See Rule 17.)

(d) The first reference to a work should contain the following details in this order: (1) author's surname with initials; (2) title (of a book or periodical, underscored; of an article, quoted); (3) number of edition, if more than one; (4) place of publication, if desired; (5) name of publisher, if desired; (6) date of publication; (7) volume and page numbers. When both volume and page numbers are given, the abbreviations

vol. and p. may be omitted. When the page number stands alone, it is better to use the abbreviation p. Usually Roman numerals are used for volume numbers, and Arabic for page numbers. (For customary punctuation in footnotes, see Rule 17.)

(e) If the reference is the same as the one immediately preceding, the abbreviation ibid. (Latin ibidem, "in the same place") may be used, with the volume and page reference if they are different. (See Rule 17.)

(f) If the footnote refers to a work previously mentioned, but not immediately preceding, the name of the author and the abbreviation op. cit. (Latin opus citatum, "the work cited") may be used. This abbreviation can only be used when one work of an author has been cited. The entire reference must be repeated if several works have been cited. (See Rule 17.)

(g) If the author's name is given in the text in connection with the quotation, it will not be necessary to give the name again in the footnote.

(h) If the author's name and book are well known, it is sufficient to give merely the author's surname, usually in the possessive case.

Example: Spenser's Faerie Queene, Canto V, Stanza 1.

17. The following example will illustrate the proper use of footnotes:

Certain sundry claims of American citizens upon Mexico had been a matter of difficulty and negotiation between the two governments since 1836,¹ and were still largely unsettled. The President now hit upon these claims as the "aggravated wrongs" which should be the basis for the complaints against Mexico,² although "many of the claims were exorbitant and some of them fraudulent."³ Meanwhile, General Taylor, who had been sent to occupy the disputed territory beyond the Nueces River, had advanced to a position opposite Matamoras where a strong Mexican force was located, and Polk seemed to think there was some hope of a collision in the near future,⁴ which would give him more satisfactory ground for his war message.

¹ Reeves, J. S., American Diplomacy under Tyler and Polk, Baltimore, 1907, pp. 76-108.

For some time, however, no hostilities occurred; the President became impatient of delay, and on May 9 the Cabinet agreed that a message recommending war should be prepared and submitted by the following Tuesday (May 12), whether the Mexican forces had committed any act of hostility against Taylor or not. Buchanan, the Secretary of State, had already drawn up a statement of the causes of complaint; the President had decided to substitute practically the precise language he himself had used in dealing with the Mexican claims in his annual message of the year before; then suddenly the situation was changed by the receipt of news that same evening from Taylor that the Mexicans had attacked and hostilities had begun. The Cabinet was immediately summoned again, and it was agreed that a message should be sent recommending vigorous and prompt measures to enable the Executive to prosecute the war.⁵

² The Diary of James K. Polk during his Presidency, 1845-1849. Edited by M. M. Quaife, Chicago, 1910, I: 363-382.

³ Reeves, op. cit., p. 86.

⁴ Diary of James K. Polk, I: 380.

⁵ Ibid., pp. 384-386.

18. The following words and abbreviations are used in footnotes, bibliographies, and references:
- | | |
|--|---------------------------------------|
| a.a.O. (am angerführten Orte). At the place quoted. | Abbreviations used in footnotes, etc. |
| ad loc. (ad locum). At the passage cited. | |
| art., plural , arts. Article. | |
| c. or ca. (circa). At or near a given date. | |
| ch. or chap., plural , chaps. Chapter. | |
| col., plural , cols. Column. | |

et al. (et alii). And others.

f., plural, ff. Page following.

Fig., plural, Figs. Figure.

ibid. (ibidem). The same reference as the one immediately preceding. The volume, page, etc., may be the same or may be different.

id. or idem. The same.

infra. Below.

l., plural, ll. Line.

loc. cit. or l.c. (loco citato). The same passage as that just cited.

n., plural, nn. Note.

no., plural, nos. Number.

op. cit. (opere citato). The same work as one previously mentioned. To be used only when there has been but one work of an author cited. The entire reference must be repeated if several works have been cited.

p., plural, pp. Pages. Pp. 6-8, pages 6 to 8 inclusive. Pp. 6 f., page 6 and the page following. Pp. 6 ff., page 6 and the pages following.

passim. Everywhere.

ps., plural, pss. Psalm.

sec., plural, secs. Section.

sic. So, thus. Sometimes inserted in brackets within quoted matter after an erroneous work or date, etc., to indicate that the quotation is exact. "I saw neather [sic] one."

st. Stanza.

supra. Above.

v. or vid. or vide. See.

v.s. (vide supra). See above.

vol., plural, vols. Volume.

v. Verse.

THE WORD

GOOD USAGE

19. Good English follows the standard of good usage. Although that standard cannot be absolute, for language is living and growing, yet it is sufficiently definite to serve as a trustworthy guide. Good usage may be defined as the usage that is understood throughout the nation, that is current at the present time, and that is employed in the writing of the best English and American authors and in the speech of well-educated people. A word is in good usage, therefore, when it is in national, present, and reputable use.

Good usage
defined

National Usage

20. Avoid provincialisms; that is, words peculiar to certain parts of the country and not used by the nation as a whole. The following are provincialisms: allow, expect, guess for think or suppose; tote for carry; piece for short distance.

Provincial-
isms

21. Avoid technical words in non-technical writing. If it is necessary to use technical expressions because no others are available, their meaning should be made clear to the non-technical reader. For the reader not familiar with sport, these athletic terms might need explanation: fly, spiral, grounder, line drive, battery.

Technical
words

22. Avoid foreign words and phrases. A writer who uses foreign expressions freely may give the impression of attempting to display his knowledge. A foreign phrase is occasionally permissible when there is no English equivalent to convey the exact meaning.

Foreign
words and phrases

English equivalents are to be preferred to: entre nous, faux pas, nouveau riche, terra firma, sub rosa.

Idioms

23. Use idiomatic expressions, for they show the writer's familiarity with the language and add vigor and individuality to his style. (An idiom is an expression peculiar to the language.) Idioms, which may often violate the rules of grammar and logic, as, for example, the phrases many a year and a few friends, are, however, based upon well-established usage. (As a guide to good usage, one should consult the best unabridged dictionaries. See Rule 32.) Idioms do not comply with the rules of logic and grammar, and may have to be learned individually.

Idiomatic
use of prepositions

(a) Especial difficulty occurs in the use of the proper preposition with nouns, verbs, and adjectives that are arbitrarily joined with fixed prepositions. Note the following correct use of prepositions most often bothersome:

ability to, not of

She has the ability to do it.

agree to (a proposal); with (a person) angry at, about (a thing); with (a person) bestow upon

compare with (for differences) or to (for similarities) dependent on (see independent) correspond to or with (a thing); with (a person) devote to, not in or on differ from (a person or thing); from or with (in opinion)

This book differs from the other in giving more details.

I differ with you about the importance of athletics.

different. The only preposition permitted by American usage is from. The use of than and to can be supported by good British usage.

independent of, not from interest in, not for listen to, not at

Listen to what I have to say.

pleased with possessed by or with (an idea); by (a spirit); of (goods) privilege of, not to with regard to, or as regards, not with regards to, or not in regards to with respect to, not in respect of in search of, to search for, not in search for stay at home, not stay to home superior to, not than to come, not and

Try to come, if you can find the time.

wait on (a customer); for (a person or thing); wait at (a place)

I will wait for you as long as I can (not on you).

(b) Idiom is violated when two or more sentence-elements are limited by a single modifying phrase or clause that is not idiomatically adapted to both.

Modifiers
 in double capacity

Wrong: He had no love or confidence in his employer.

Right: He had no love for, or confidence in, his employer. [The foregoing is correct, but awkward; the following is better:] He had no love for his employer and no confidence in him.

Wrong: I shall always remember the town because of the good times and the friends I made there.

Right: I shall always remember the town because of the good times I had and the friends I made there.

Wrong: He acquired a knowledge and keen interest in chess.

Right: He acquired a knowledge of chess and a keen interest in it.

Idiomatic expressions

(c) The following faulty expressions used for idioms should be avoided:

Wrong

cannot help but remember have got to
I do not know if I can near enough that I could see it seldom or ever
there is no doubt but that try and come very interested

Right

cannot help remembering have to or must
I do not know whether I can near enough for me to see it seldom if ever there is no doubt that try to come very much ¹ interested

Present Usage

Obsolete or archaic
words

24. Avoid obsolete or archaic words in prose. The obsolete or archaic words used by an inexperienced writer often fail to give the humorous or quaint effect which he has desired to produce. Such words are: anent, gain, gotten (for got), ilk, in sooth, mayhap, methinks, oft, proven (for proved), swain, thou, etc. Ilk is rarely used correctly, even when its tone is acceptable.

New words and phrases

25. Avoid newly coined words until they are adopted by the best writers and speakers. Do not use to auto, to broadcast (except in connection with the radio), to taxi, etc. Note that a number of these terms come in with new inventions.

Reputable Usage

Reputable usage

26. Reputable usage is that usage set by the best writers and speakers. The right of an author to rank among the best English and American authors can be determined only by the general judgment of scholars and critics, as well as of the reading public, and only

¹ The idiomatic use of very with and without much may be made the subject of interesting discussion.

after that judgment has endured long enough to become established. A single instance of the use of a word, even by one of the best English authors, does not prove the word to be good English. The word must be shown to be in general use among such authors in order to give it the sanction of good usage. Good usage, in formal writing, does not require stiff and pedantic language; yet it does not encourage colloquialisms, improprieties, barbarisms, and slang. (Colloquialisms, improprieties, etc., may be used in dialogue to characterize the speakers.)

27. Avoid colloquialisms in formal writing. A colloquialism is an expression current in common conversation; some colloquialisms may be used by cultivated people in speech or in familiar letters but not in their formal writing. Colloquialisms

(a) A contraction, which is a legitimate word shortened by the omission of one or more letters, may be regarded as a colloquialism. (The common contractions are don't, isn't, haven't, won't, I'll, we'll, etc.) Contractions

(b) Avoid colloquial abbreviations in formal writing. Many of these abbreviations belong to campus life. Some of them are understood and are acceptable in familiar conversation; as, for example, exam, which is recognized by the New English Dictionary as a word and is marked colloquial. But others are not generally intelligible and should be avoided; as, for example, con for condition, pro for probation.

(c) Note the following colloquialisms: certainly, as a means of emphasis in the sentence: "We certainly had a good time"; fix for mend or put in order; get up for organize; mighty for very as in the sentence: "We had a mighty good time"; nowhere near for far from, not nearly, by no means, as in the sentence: "The work is nowhere near finished"; overly for greatly, as in the sentence: "He was not overly pleased with her letter." (For other colloquialisms, see Appendix A.)

Error regarding parts of speech

28. Avoid improprieties in diction. An impropriety is the use of a word to fulfill the office of a part of speech to which it does not belong. The following are typical improprieties (see also Appendix A):

- (a) Nouns used as verbs: to suicide, to suspicion, to film, to chance it (meaning to risk it).
- (b) Verbs used as nouns: a combine, an invite, a steal, eats, a good buy.
- (c) Adjectives used as nouns: a canine, a feline, a drunk.
- (d) Adjectives used as adverbs: real, some, this, that (see Appendix A for these four words), good, considerable, friendly, tolerable, powerful.

NOTE. — As examples of the value of the use of a dictionary to determine whether a word is established in good usage, observe that to motor and to finance, both formerly used only as nouns, are found in Webster's and the New Standard, while to film (to take a picture) is found in neither.

Unauthorized formations

29. Avoid barbarisms in diction. Barbarisms are current words coined without authority from words in good standing.

Typical barbarisms are the following (see also the Glossary): to enthuse (see Appendix A), to burglarize, to jell (for to jelly), tasty (for tasteful), homey (for homelike), newsy, musicianly, complected (see Appendix A), preventative (for preventive), illy (for ill), overly (see Appendix A), and the contractions gent, most (for almost), and way (for away).

Analogy
not decisive

NOTE. — The standing of a word depends, not on the nature of its formation, but solely on its acceptance or non-acceptance by good usage (see Rule 19). "Baseballist" and "cheesery" are bad English, though they are formed after the analogy of pianist and creamery, which are good English.

30. Avoid slang. Slang includes improprieties, barbarisms (see Rules 28 and 29), and other vulgar and inelegant expressions. The use of slang is to be avoided for these reasons: it is out of tone in formal writing and speaking; it may be unintelligible to many readers; it often fails to express the exact idea; it soon loses what vivid and original qualities it may have had when first used.

NOTE. — There are cases in which slang expressions so aptly fit special needs that they will be adopted permanently into the language. Such usage must, however, be sanctioned by the best writers and speakers to be considered reputable. The following words (like many others), which were formerly slang abbreviations, are now considered good English: cad, hack, mob, van.

31. Except as a humorous device, do not use words of your own coining, without ascertaining from a dictionary whether they are authorized.

LEARNING GOOD USAGE

32. In order to learn what is good English, the student should cultivate the habit of prompt reference to books on grammar, rhetoric, and composition, and to good dictionaries. The best dictionaries are the unabridged editions of Webster's New International Dictionary, the Standard Dictionary, and Murray's New English Dictionary. Many students do not realize how much information about a word an unabridged dictionary gives. For example, the student can learn the syllabication of a word (the division of the word into syllables, information that he needs when he wishes to divide a word at the end of a line);

Slang

Extemporized formations

Means of learning good usage

Information in unabridged dictionaries

he can find out whether an expression containing two originally separate words is to be written as one word, as a compound word with a hyphen, or as two separate words; he can learn the pronunciation; the part of speech to which the word belongs; the plural of nouns; the various verb forms, such as the present infinitive, preterit, past participle, and the present participle; the etymology or derivation of the word; the definition; the usage; synonyms; and examples showing how words are actually used.

Abridged
dictionaries
inferior to unabridged

There are also many short dictionaries, such as Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, the Desk Standard Dictionary, the Student's Standard Dictionary, which are produced by omitting much material given in the unabridged dictionaries. These short dictionaries are far inferior, for the purposes of a student of English, to an unabridged dictionary.

PRECISION

Malaprops

33. Avoid confusing words of somewhat similar pronunciation. For example, distinguish between allusion and illusion, conscience and conscious, deceased and diseased, formerly and formally, respectfully and respectively. For the definitions of these and other words often confused, see the list of words commonly misspelled under Rule 319 and Appendix A.

Words of similar meaning

34. Avoid confusing words of similar meanings. Find the word that will precisely express the thought. Note the distinction in meaning among these words: rebellion, revolution, revolt, insurrection, mutiny. "Rebellion is open, organized, and armed resistance to constituted authority; revolution implies the overthrow of one government and the substitution of another; as, the Great Rebellion (1642-1652); the American Revolution. The two words are often used regarding the same event, according to the point of view. Revolt and insurrection denote an armed uprising against authority, but one of less extent than a rebellion; mutiny commonly denotes an insurrection against military or naval authority; as, the Peasants' Revolt; Whisky Insurrection; Sepoy Mutiny." (Webster.)

35. Avoid vague, ambiguous words, such as asset, case, character, element, factor, line, proposition, etc. (Look up these words in Appendix A.)

Vague, ambiguous
words

EFFECTIVENESS

36. As a rule, use specific and concrete words rather than general and abstract words. General and abstract words express indefinite, inclusive ideas; specific and concrete words express definite and limited ideas, often appealing directly to the senses. For example, animal is a general word and cat or dog is specific; beauty is an abstract idea and an apple tree in full bloom may be a concrete expression of the idea of beauty. (Specific and concrete words may in turn become general and abstract when compared with words of more limited application.) General and abstract words may be used to advantage when the writer or speaker wishes to summarize, or when he wishes to state his ideas very briefly and does not care to put particular emphasis on one point. The difficulty is that general and abstract words are overused because the writer's thoughts are often too vague and hazy for specific or concrete words, or because the writer is too timid or too lazy to state exactly what he has in mind. Specific and concrete words are often specific,

General,
abstract, concrete
words

effective in stirring the reader to form a definite and vivid picture. Note in the following passage how the concrete details serve to impress upon the reader's mind the opening abstract statement:

"Sovereigns die and Sovereignties: how all dies, and is for a time only; is a 'Time-phantasm, yet reckons itself real!' The Merovingian Kings, slowly wending on their bullock-carts through the streets of Paris, with their long hair flowing, have all wended slowly on, — into Eternity. Charlemagne sleeps at Salsburg, with truncheon grounded; only Fable expecting that he will awaken. Charles the Hammer, Pepin Bow-legged, where now is their eye of menace, their voice of command? Rollo and his shaggy Northmen cover not the Seine with ships; but have sailed off on a longer voyage. The hair of Towhead . . . now needs no combing; Ironcutter . . . cannot cut a cobweb; shrill Fredegonda, shrill Brunhilda have had out their life-scold, and lie silent, their hot life frenzy cooled. . . . They are all gone; sunk, — down, down, with the tumult they made; and the rolling and the trampling of ever new generations passes over them; and they hear it not any more forever." — CARLYLE.

Forceful predicate
verbs

37. Use forceful predicate verbs. Appear, be, seem are weak, lifeless verbs.

Weak: A mountain was seen looming up in the distance.

Stronger: A mountain loomed up in the distance.

Weak: There is a horse eating grass in our yard.

Stronger: A horse is eating grass in our yard.

NOTE. — The use of forceful verbs may be overdone. (See Rule 44 c.) Observe the straining for effect in the following sentences taken from contemporary short stories:

Her angry words pounced out upon him.

He heaved, "Great day, this."

In her great haste her hands raced about among the papers.

Onomatopoeic words should be used with caution.

Too frequent use of such words as buzz, chug, hiss, purr, sizzle, whir, whine, etc., make one question the writer's sincerity and resourcefulness.

38. Consider the tone of words. Besides their literal meaning or denotation, words have connotation or additional associative meanings which must be regarded; otherwise words may be used in the wrong surroundings. Words may be vulgar, poetic, pompous, homely, humorous, etc. Kid and young child, in popular usage, have the same denotation: but kid is a vulgarism and is out of place in formal writing. Telephonic communication is pompous; telephone call is preferable. Job is suitable when used to denote manual work; position is used for work of other kinds. If one is at all doubtful regarding the connotation of a word, he can find information in the distinctions among synonyms and the illustrative sentences given in an unabridged dictionary. The various books of synonyms may be of assistance. (See Rule 4.)

Denotation
and connotation

BREVITY

39. Avoid tautology — i.e., the useless repetition of an idea, in part or entire.

Tautology

Bad: If I had abundant wealth and plenty of resources . . .

Right: If I had abundant wealth . . .

Bad: Will you please repeat that again?

Right: Will you please repeat that?

Bad: The autobiography of my life.

Right: My autobiography.

40. Avoid pleonasm — i.e., the use of words which do not involve repetition of thought, but which are structurally unnecessary. Beware of clumsy circumlocutions, such as along the lines of, of the nature of, of the character of, etc.

Pleonasm

Bad: There were two hundred students went.

Right: Two hundred students went.

Bad: It has no relation as to time or place.

Right: It has no relation to time or place.

Bad: They went through with the formalities.

Right: They went through the formalities.

Bad: He took work along the lines of banking.

Right: He took work in banking; [or] He studied banking.

Wordiness;
scrappy
sentences

41. Avoid burdening a statement with too many words. Avoid the similar fault of embodying in a series of scrappy sentences what could be more fitly embodied in one sentence. Put subordinate thoughts into subordinate forms — not into separate independent assertions. (See also Rule 63.) Independent assertion in excess not only gives to prose the style of a primer but wastes words. Observe the number of unnecessary words in the passage below marked Primer style.

Wordy: Yesterday I had occasion to be witness of a very interesting incident.

Right: Yesterday I saw an interesting incident.

Wordy: At midnight the physician made a statement saying that the governor was better.

Right: At midnight the physician stated that the governor was better.

Wordy: In the house in which we used to live when we were in Winstead was a large play-room, which was located just at the head of the stairs.

Predication reduced: Just at the head of the stairs in our house in Winstead was a large play-room.

Primer style: As you approach the island from the west, you get a view of a high cliff. This cliff is about six miles in length. It is of sandstone, and rises about perpendicularly from the water. Numerous cracks and crevices can be seen in the cliff. . . . 45 words.

Predication reduced: Approaching the island from the west, you get a view of a high, sandstone cliff about six miles in length, rising almost perpendicularly from the water, its face seamed with cracks and crevices. . . . 33 words.

SINCERITY AND NATURALNESS

Triteness

42. Avoid trite rhetorical expressions. They Overworked formulas compel the reader to doubt the writer's sincerity, his interest in his subject, or his capacity for original thought or expression. Of the following list of phrases, many were originally inappropriate and others have lost their force through frequent repetition:

all too soon sigh of relief beat a hasty retreat
the commercial world, the social world, etc.
favor with a selection render a vocal solo rendition discourse sweet music hungry as bears repast
do justice to a dinner toothsome viands sought his downy couch vast concourse never in the history of news leaked out dull, sickening thud those present in evidence abreast of the times

working like Trojans herculean efforts wended their way enjoyable occasion in a pleasing manner untiring efforts all in all it goes without saying bolt from a clear sky some one has said specimen of humanity had the privilege replete with interest undercurrent of excitement last sad rites tonorial parlor checkered career
last but not least tired but happy cheered to the echo breathless silence

was the recipient of everything went along nicely
 the student body doomed to disappointment was an impressive sight made a pretty picture completed the scene nestled among the hills or among the trees
 like sentinels guarding sumptuous repast
 all nature seemed all nature clothed in a robe each and every on this particular day long-felt want it seems (in narrative) fair maidens

speculation was rife tiny tots along . . . lines (e.g., along agricultural lines) along the line of along these lines
 as luck would have it
 the proud possessor in touch with social function in the last analysis waited in breathless suspense order out of chaos
 those with whom we come in contact imbued with mother earth
 breakneck speed

Hackneyed
 quotations,
 allusions,
 and proverbs

43. Avoid hackneyed quotations, literary allusions, and proverbs, such as the following:

The light fantastic toe Truth is stranger than fiction
 Teach the young idea how to shoot Method in his madness
 Sadder but wiser
 Cupid has been busy
 Variety is the spice of life
 The best laid plans of mice and men, etc.
 All work and no play, etc.
 Never put off till tomorrow, etc.
 Make hay while the sun shines
 All is not gold that glitters
 When ignorance is bliss, etc.
 Music hath charms, etc.

Newspaper
 mannerisms

44. Certain hackneyed newspaper mannerisms are especially to be avoided. These have arisen through the effort of writers to adorn their style where no ornament was needed, or to introduce a forced humor, or to avoid repetition of the same word. The style books of good newspapers advocate simplicity of diction, and specifically condemn these mannerisms. Repetition of the same word is to be preferred to the invention of artificial epithets. (See Rule 58.) The following offenses against good usage are especially undesirable:

(a) The designation of states and cities by their nicknames, as, "the Buckeye State," "the Sunflower State," "the Gopher State," "the Cream City," etc.; and the dragging in of these nicknames where no name at all is needed.

Nicknames
of states and cities

Bad: He arrived in Boston yesterday. Many citizens of the Hub were gathered to meet him.

Right: He arrived in Boston yesterday. Many citizens were gathered to meet him.

(b) The regular employment of verbal ornaments, such as "fatal affray," "fistic encounter," "struggling mass of humanity," "scantily attired," "knights of the pen" (for reporters), "the officiating clergyman," "equines" (for horses), "canines" (for dogs), "felines" (for cats), "fair sex," "well-known clubman," "breakneck speed," "city bastile," "milady."

Current newspaper rhetoric

(c) Obtrusive straining for novelty of phrase.

Straining for novelty of phrase

Bad: The football warriors of the Badger State will play the Windy City's squad of pigskin chasers this afternoon.

Right: The Wisconsin football team will play the Chicago team this afternoon.

Bad: The guests spent the evening in doing the "light fantastic" act.

Right: The guests spent the evening in dancing.

Bad: Indefatigable knights of the pen dogged his steps as far as the hostelry.

Right: Reporters followed him to his hotel.

Affectation

High-flown language

45. Do not use high-flown language for plain things.

Straining for high-sounding expressions to replace plain English makes a style weak rather than strong. For instance, say leg, not limb; letter, not kind favor; house, not residence; body, not remains; flowers, not floral offerings; funeral, not obsequies or last sad rites; "I went to bed," not "I retired"; "I got up," not "I arose." Such attempts at "fine writing" are in bad taste.

Bad: To keep the horse healthy you must be careful of his environment.

Right: To keep the horse healthy you must be careful of his stable.

NOTE. — The inexperienced writer often loses force and vigor by failing to use idiomatic phrases, which, he fears, will detract from the correctness and dignity of his style. (See Rule 23.)

Stiff: His criticism is something to which I cannot become accustomed.

Improved: His criticism is something I cannot get used to.

Stiff: If you want them to obey, you must speak more loudly.

Improved: If you want them to obey, you must speak louder.

Poetic and
legal diction

46. In prose avoid the use of words suited only to poetry. Examples are dwelt, oft, oftentimes, ofttimes, morn, amid, 'mid, 'midst, o'er, 'neath, 'tis, 'twas. Heretofore, therein, thereof, thereby, are awkward substitutes in good natural writing for before this event, in it, and of it.

The historical present

47. In narrative relating past events, prefer the past tense to the so-called "historical present." The latter is a device intended to produce the effect of strong emotion, but is more likely to seem affected than to create the impression desired. (For awkward shifting of tenses in narrative, see Rule 184.)

Affected: He shouted to attract her attention, but she went on toward the danger, not heeding his warning. Lashing his horse and riding swiftly toward her, he shouted again. This time she hears. She stands still and awaits him. He lifts her to his saddle and rides frantically toward the hut. [Throughout this passage the past tense should be used.]

48. Designate persons, places, and dates in a story by complete names and dates. The custom of using initials and dashes, and of representing dates in a similar manner, is obsolete; it suggests affectation.

Initials and blanks in place of names

Objectionable: In the year 18—, when my father was a young man in the little town of B——, he formed a strong friendship with a wealthy farmer, Mr. M——.

Preferable: In the year 1892, when my father was a young man in the little town of Bristol, he formed a strong friendship with a wealthy farmer, Mr. McManus.

NOTE. — In narrative composition, definiteness, clearness, and smoothness are gained by calling the characters by name as soon as they are introduced.

Names for characters
in a story

Awkward: One afternoon this winter two friends of mine called at my home and suggested that we go ice-boating. Now one of these men had never been to ride in an ice-boat. The other man was warmly dressed for the occasion, but the man who had never had the experience, as it afterwards turned out, was dressed rather less warmly than usual. When we reached the lake, the first friend and I were busy getting up the sail, and did not notice that the teeth of the other man had begun to chatter as soon as the chilly breeze struck him. It happened, moreover, that this man who was dressed so lightly was selected to sit on the end of the runner-plank, while my first friend and I managed the tiller and the sheet.

Improved: One afternoon this winter two friends of mine called at my home and suggested that we go ice-boating. Now one of these men, Tom Lamont, had never taken a ride in an ice-boat. The other man, Bert Pryor, was warmly dressed for the occasion, but Tom, as it afterwards turned out, was dressed rather less warmly than usual. When we reached the lake, Bert and I were busy getting up the sail, and did not notice that Tom's teeth had begun to chatter as soon as the chilly breeze struck him. It happened, moreover, that Tom, in spite of his thin clothing, was selected to sit on the runner-plank, while Bert and I managed the tiller and the sheet.

The writer and we for I

49. In mentioning yourself, avoid the expressions we and the writer. Use I, my, and me, and guard against unnecessary reference to yourself. The use of we in an editorial which purports to be the utterance of a board of editors is entirely proper, but as designating an individual speaker or writer it is an affectation.

Bad: We have selected for our text the second verse of the Epistle of Jude.

Right: I have selected for my text, etc.

FIGURES OF SPEECH

*Figures of
speech*

50. A figure of speech is a comparison between things of different classes, essentially unlike except in some striking particular or particulars, as, for example: "His mind works like a machine." Figures of speech, if used with care, may give clearness, vigor, aptness, and beauty to one's style. These cautions should, however, be observed:

(a) Figures of speech must be fresh and original. Originality
Do not use trite phrases. (See Rule 42.)

(b) Figures of speech should seem spontaneous. Spontaneity
Those comparisons that flash upon the mind in moments of emotion will more surely carry with them elements of truth than figures that are artificially and laboriously constructed.

(c) Comparisons suggested by figures should be in good taste. Good taste (See Rule 45.) Do not compare commonplace things with lofty things. Use figures sparingly in the discourse of ordinary life.

Bad: This soap will be a blessing to you in the darkest hours of Monday morning.

Bad: The empty stalls of the barn were like a desolate garden in late November.

(d) Figures of speech should be essentially true; Truth there should be a possible basis for comparison. Observe the straining for an effect in these figures. (See Rule 44 c.)

Bad: The white-washed fence around the old school-house was like the collar of a pilgrim father.

Bad: His feet flapped across the floor like angry pancakes.

Bad: The little lake, like a tired child, snuggled down among its hills and went to sleep.

(e) Figures of speech should not be used too frequently. Overuse of figures
They may become confusing or tiresome.

Bad: We sat around the fire which leaped like a thousand sprites. The cool air was as intoxicating as a draught of old champagne, and the occasional breeze was a soft caress. Now and then across the lake, which was as level as a mirror, came the call of the whip-poor-will, as lonesome as that of a lost soul.

Detailed figures of
speech

(f) A prolonged figure of speech worked out in detail may divert the reader's attention from the subject matter which the figure aims to ornament or make clear.

Too detailed: The body politic is like the human body. Both begin as germs, and develop into complex structures. The sovereign power of the state is the head of the individual; the laws and customs are the brain; the judges and magistrates are the will and the sense; commerce, agriculture, and industry are the mouth and stomach which prepare and digest the food; the public finances are the blood which by the heart is distributed throughout the organism.

Incongruity with what precedes

51. Do not use a figure of speech which is incongruous with the expression preceding.

Incongruous metaphor: The officers must enforce discipline among the raw material.

Right: The officers must enforce discipline among the new men.

Incongruous metaphor: We got some oil for the wheel at a farmhouse, and thus our hotbox was nipped in the bud.

Right: At a farmhouse we got some oil for the wheel and thus prevented a hotbox.

Incongruous metaphor: He must conduct his business on an honest foundation.

Right: He must conduct his business in an honest manner: [or] He must build his business on an honest foundation.

Bad: The probe of the Fond du Lac grand jury has netted five corrupt officials.

Right: The probe of the Fond du Lac grand jury has revealed five corrupt officials: [or] The drag net of the Fond du Lac grand jury has caught five corrupt officials.

Bad: With his fortune blown to the four winds, all his ambition was crushed.

Right: All his ambition was, like his fortune, blown to the four winds; [or] In the ruin of his fortune his ambition was crushed.

52. When a figure of speech has been used, the expression following it should carry out the figure — Figures not carried out be incongruously literal.

Bad: The freshman algebra course is a rocky and difficult road to travel. But whether we like it or not we are required to wade through it. [The figure embodied in "rocky road" is not carried out by the figure embodied in "wade through."]

Right: The freshman course in algebra is a rocky and difficult road to travel. But whether we like it or not, we are required to travel it.

Inferior: It made a deep impression on my mind which I shall never forget. [The figure embodied in "impression" is not carried out by the literal expression "forget."]

Right: It made a deep impression on my mind, which will never be effaced.

GRACE OF STYLE

53. Choose words that are euphonious.

(a) Avoid rhyme and alliteration in prose.

Euphony:
rhyme and alliteration

Not euphonious: The chilling blasts blowing with cutting force.

Bad: Then came the time for the heart-breaking leave-taking.

Bad: The fountains were kept playing night and day to keep up the display.

Bad: The ship flew fearlessly forward into the fury of the storm.

NOTE. — This rule is not intended to discourage the sparing use of alliteration in prose as a means of increasing the force of passages designed to produce an emotional appeal.

Cacophony

(b) Avoid cacophony, or harsh combinations of sound which are difficult of pronunciation. Note that cacophony occurs where the end of one word and the beginning of the next have the same sound.

Bad: He grasped the inexplicable situation with his usual analytical skill.

Rhythm
in prose

54. Avoid a regular rhythm in prose.

Bad: He bowed his head in grief before the picture of his child.

Absolute
phrases:

55. Absolute phrases are often a useful aid to proper subordination and to smoothness of style. But there are two kinds of absolute phrases which, being conspicuously awkward, are best avoided; viz.:

Absolute
pronoun

(a) Absolute phrases in which the substantive is a pronoun.

Clumsy: He gave up the task, it being too difficult.

Better: He gave up the task as too difficult.

Clumsy: I being unacquainted with the road, my party got lost.

Better: Since I was unacquainted with the road, my party got lost.

NOTE. — Such an absolute phrase is particularly objectionable when the pronoun refers to the subject of the sentence. In such cases wordiness is added to awkwardness, since the pronoun is pleonastic. (See Rule 40.)

Bad: I made a trip to Catalina Island in 1902, I being then in my tenth year.

Better: I made a trip to Catalina Island in 1902, being then in my tenth year.

Bad: The furnace could not be repaired immediately, it being red-hot.

Better: Being red-hot, the furnace could not be repaired immediately.

Latinistic
phrases

(b) Absolute phrases in which the substantive is modified by a perfect participle, especially a passive perfect participle. Such phrases are clumsy, unidiomatic, and suggestive of elementary Latin exercises.

Clumsy: His horse having been fed, Macy continued his journey.

Better: When his horse had been fed, Macy continued his journey.

56. Do not use a word in two senses in the same sentence or within a short space. Repetition with a change of meaning Bad: Since several years passed since the death of his wife . . .

Right: Several years having passed since the death of his wife . . .

Bad: I couldn't get up courage to get up and investigate.

Right: I couldn't summon courage to get up and investigate.

57. Avoid awkward and needless repetition of a word or phrase. This fault may be corrected by a judicious use of pronouns, by the use of synonyms, or by recasting the sentence. Awkward repetition

Bad: MacArthur was to speak on that day; hence we selected that day for our trip.

Right: That was the day on which MacArthur was to speak; we therefore selected it for our trip.

Bad: He said that the orders said that uniforms must be worn in future.

Right: He said that the orders required the wearing of uniforms in future.

58. Prefer repetition, however, to labored and awkward avoidance of it. Awkward avoidance of repetition

Awkward: If it has this effect on a healthy skin, it will have a worse result on an inflamed cuticle.

Preferable: If it has this effect on a healthy skin, it will have a worse effect on an inflamed skin.

NOTE. — A constant straining for conspicuous synonyms to use in referring to something previously mentioned. Straining for synonyms tioned is a characteristic mannerism of newspaper writers. (Cf. Rules 20 and 44.) Avoid this practice; repeat the noun, or else choose an inconspicuous synonym.

Bad: At the faculty meeting yesterday the question of football was again discussed. Those of that learned aggregation who opposed the gridiron game succumbed at the final vote.

Improved: At the faculty meeting yesterday the question of football was again discussed. The opponents of the game were defeated at the final vote.

Bad: The extremely warm weather during the past several weeks has not exactly been conducive of producing record-breaking scores at the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys. In fact it has almost been too warm for even the most ardent lovers of the tenpin game, and enthusiasm has for some time been at a rather low ebb.

Right: The extremely warm weather of the past several weeks has discouraged the production of high scores at the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys. It has been almost too warm for even the most enthusiastic bowlers, and the general interest in the game has been slight.

Careless repetition
of the conjunction that

59. When the conjunction that is separated by intervening words from the subject and predicate which it introduces, guard against the careless repetition of that.

Wrong: It is pleasant to reflect that after all this work has been done and all these difficulties have been conquered, that we shall get a good rest.

Right: It is pleasant to reflect that after all this work has been done and all these difficulties have been conquered, we shall get a good rest.

Forms of expression noticeably frequent

60. Do not make many sentences in a composition or a passage noticeably alike in construction. This principle is often violated (a) by beginning many sentences near each other with after, with this or these, or with there is or there are; (b) by using with noticeable frequency a compound sentence with two members of about equal length joined by and or but; (c) by using participial phrases with noticeable frequency; and (d) by the habitual use of so as a connective. (Cf. Rule 65.)

EXERCISE 1

Look up each of the following words both in an unabridged dictionary and in an abridged one, and write a report showing how much more fully and clearly the larger volume explains the use of each word than the smaller one does: avail, aversion, comment, decoction, ingratiate, ludicrous, neutral, sardonic, satiate, sequester. State the exact title and the publisher of each of the dictionaries consulted.

Unabridged
dictionaries
superior to abridged

EXERCISE 2

Find out from an unabridged dictionary what part of speech each one of the following italicized words is. Is each one correctly used for ordinary formal discourse?

Part of
speech

1. I cannot go without I have her consent. 2. You have another think coming. 3. The room above is empty. 4. You should make another try before you stop. 5. It looks like it might rain today. 6. It will likely rain today. 7. That room is plenty good enough for me. 8. We received the goods and find same in good condition. 9. He could not accept the offer due to his ill health. 10. Since you have gone this far, you might as well go farther.

EXERCISE 3

Answer the following questions by means of a dictionary:

Inflectional forms

Which is correct — he sang, or he sung? 2. I dreamed, or I dreamt? 3. It is froze, or it is frozen? 4. A dollar was bet, or was betted? 5. I have drank, or I have drunk? 6. I have swam, or I have swum? 7. He has long lain unconscious, or long laid unconscious? 8. He spit (past tense), or he spat?

EXERCISE 4

Verb transitive or intransitive?

Look up the following verbs in a dictionary. State whether each verb is transitive or intransitive, and illustrate the correct use of each verb: dismay, deviate, recant, procrastinate, banter, retract, vibrate, harass, acclimate, ingratiate, stipulate, capitulate, locate, disaffect, metamorphose, concur, demur, debilitate, debouch, vitiate, lay, raise, accede, desist, acquiesce, coalesce.

EXERCISE 5

Etymology

How may the etymologies given by the dictionary help one in remembering the meaning of the following words? (Note that when a series of words have the same etymology, the etymology may be given only once with the first word of the series.) Cæsura, euthenics, explication, factitious, induction, obsequious, pellucid, probity, propensity, transubstantiation.

EXERCISE 6

Good usage

Determine from an unabridged dictionary the suitability or unsuitability of the following words in ordinary formal discourse: tarn, deal in the sense of bargain, enthuse, to down, complected, albeit, jell, sleeper meaning sleeping car, illy, damsel, cute, tantrum, to ramose, brace up, humbug, boodle, pal, rampage, to duck, gumption, proxy, whoop, to butt, rough it, cavort, scrumptious, in cahoots, 'twas, right off, right along, grouch, swipe, duds, skinflint, boss, to peek, ninney, hustle, gullet, rooster, dude, graft (political), to collar, stunt, flabbergast, parson.

EXERCISE 7

Good usage

Consult an unabridged dictionary and decide upon the good usage for ordinary formal discourse of the italicized words or phrases in the following sentences:

1. I am anxious to read that book. 2. We have gotten enough information now to prove our case. 3. I am willing to chance his not coming. 4. There is no doubt but that they will answer your letters. 5. I have proven to you that I am right. 6. I am very interested in what you have to say. 7. We won't have any eats left after that gang has been here. 8. If you tell her your good news, she will broadcast it over the town. 9. He could not have made a worse faux pas if he had tried. 10. I want in this room. 11. She took from him last winter and liked his method very much. 12. Are you through? 13. I promised to go. I don't like to, though. 14. You have improved some in your writing. 15. I have just had a fine letter from my sister. 16. The story of the robbery was the big feature of the day's news. 17. He got a con in math. 18. I expect that it is time to go. 19. I will talk with the fellows at the house.

20. Did you see your folks at Easter? 21. The average college audience is noisy. 22. The autoists were camping by the river. 23. I am awkward at playing tennis. 24. She wanted to go very badly. 25. He is bound that he will convince her of her mistake. 26. Considerable has been done to improve their living conditions. 27. The papers all gave him a great write-up when he returned. 28. We went there, but no one was home. 29. She lives in a near-by town. 30. She is completely run by her older sister. 31. Her rendition of the song was very pleasing. 32. From my observance, I think that he is to be trusted. 33. He was especially coached for the part. 34. I have seen him loads of times. 35. The cider had stood long enough to become hard. 36. They expect her inside of a week. 37. We were near enough that we could see the people's faces. 38. Many women have been lobbying for the bill. 39. Because of our confidence in our clientele, we have reduced the initial deposit to only one dollar. 40. Education among them was prohibited, their schools were closed, and every effort was made to squelch any sign of civilization because of the fear that some day they might forget that they were slaves and might rise to arms against the conqueror. 41. I shall do as I please about writing the paper.

EXERCISE 8

In consulting a dictionary about the use of a word, try not merely to get a general idea of the meaning of the word, but to discover within what limits of meaning the word is confined. To this end read the definition as a whole; do not pick out a single synonym and suppose that

Definition to be read
as a whole

this and the word defined are interchangeable. Cut is defined thus: "To separate the parts of with, or as with, a sharp instrument; to make an incision in; to gash; to sever; to divide." To pick out the last synonym ("to divide") and reason that since cut means divide, one may say "I will cut the money among them" would be absurd. What cut means is ascertained not from one synonym taken separately but from the definition read as a whole. Look up the following words in an unabridged dictionary; read each definition as a whole, and read the examples; write sentences illustrating the correct use of each word: broach, manifest, divert, descry, descant, indeterminate, influx, forage, equanimity, compromise, vicissitude, intermit, analogy, transmute, diversify, poignant, exigency, derogatory, eradicate, incompatible, effete, extirpate, cavil, propitiate, deprecate, amenable, precedence, apropos, obligatory, alias, incognito, sinecure, stupor, ebullition, potent, divulge, deprave, pervert, acumen, insidious, peremptory, contiguous, submerge, emerge, immerse, circumvent, brusque, drastic, dulcet. State the exact title and the publisher of the dictionary consulted.

EXERCISE 9

Idiomatic
construction

Find out, either from explicit statements in the definitions or from the examples, what idiomatic construction — especially what preposition — is required with each word; and write sentences illustrating the correct use of each word: avail (v. t.), prevail (v. t.), substitute (v.), averse, compensate, confide (v. t.), confide (v. i.), demand, atone, treat (v. i.), deprive, different, demur (v. i.), accordance, attend (v. i.), rend (v. t.), rid (v. t.), free (v. t.), enamor, accustom, absolve, acquit, bestow, conform (v. t.), conversant, proficient, dependent, independent, derogatory, versed, (adj.), inasmuch. State the exact title and the publisher of the dictionary consulted.

EXERCISE 10

Distinctions
in meaning between synonyms

Consult the dictionary for the distinctions between the members of each of the following pairs of words: fashion and mode; candid and sincere; belief and faith; consecutive and successive; custom and habit; penalty and punishment; disinterested and uninterested; dissatisfaction and discontent; envy and jealousy; foreign and alien; sarcasm and irony.

EXERCISE 11

Consult the table of abbreviations in the front part of the dictionary so that you may understand information that is often given in abbreviated form. For example, what do the following abbreviations mean: Anat., Arch., cf., dial., Feud., Her., NGr., Numis., Obsoles., Skr., syn.? Abbreviations

EXERCISE 12

Determine from a dictionary whether each of the following compound words should be written with a hyphen, or as one word without a hyphen, or as two or more separate words. Use of hyphen

passerby	selfpossessed
halfbreed	somebody
today	withstand
childlike	together
childhood	whenever
eagleeyed	moreover
somewhat	nowadays
notwithstanding	outburst
nevertheless	offspring
inasmuch	afternoon

EXERCISE 13

Substitute precise words for the italicized words in the following sentences: Precision

1. He purchased the property for an exceptionable value.
2. He claimed that he had answered the letter.
3. She suffered great anguish from the burns.
4. Some of the books are carefully bound; in other cases they will have to be rebound.
5. The material was of such poor character that the work had to be done over.
6. He censored the students for their lack of interest in their studies.
7. There are many elements of risk which you must consider in investing your money.
8. We had hoped that he would entertain our guests with his amusing stories, but he was taciturn all the evening.
9. She inferred in her letter that the money had not been used honestly.
10. I find that line of work most interesting. 11. My verdict is that she was unfairly treated. 12. The soldiers rushed into battle with great fortitude. 13. His work exceeds that of his brother in its careful attention to detail. 14. One should forgive the child's petty lies, which so often arise from a vivid imagination and are told with no intention of deceiving.

EXERCISE 14

Precision

Find the precise meaning of each word in the following groups, and write sentences to illustrate that meaning.

1. Cunning, crafty, artful, sly, wily.
2. Culmination, climax, acme, zenith.
3. Majority, plurality.
4. Egoism, egotism.
5. Reputation, fame, renown, honor, glory, consideration, distinction.
6. Suitable, fit, appropriate, proper.
7. Common, general, universal.
8. Conscious, aware.
9. Consider, reflect, deliberate, ponder, muse, meditate, ruminate.
10. Afraid, fearful, frightened, aghast, timid, timorous.

EXERCISE 15

Effectiveness

Improve the diction in these sentences. State the specific rule that applies to the changes made.

1. The sunlight is the mainspring of the photographer's business; it should be admitted through a skylight or a north window.
2. Although a storm was seen in the distance, we started on our trip.
3. Richelieu used the bishop's robe only as a stepping-stone to political power.
4. Since you have not found congenial work since you have come to the city, you had better return to your father's farm.
5. Anent my next plans, I can tell you ere long.
6. One day as was usually the case he had had too much to drink and therefore he was highly intoxicated.
7. Just around the turn the cottage was seen nestling in a clump of trees.
8. I am sure that, although you are very tired, that you will be able to make the journey without difficulty.
9. These attributes, which give great stability to her character, may be attributed to the fact that she had a very strict religious training in her childhood. 10. As I run to the door, I can hear her crying for help. It seems as though I shall never reach the door. At last I have pulled it open, and she stumbles into the room.

11. Let our object be to educate and bring to the front the laboring men — the backbone of our nation. 12. For the next ten Sundays we shall preach a series of sermons on themes very close to our heart. 13. Before we ever went to school, our ambition tended to run toward the art of being a cowboy or an Indian or possibly an engineer of a big locomotive. 14. Personally I do not like too personal a narrative; so naturally I shall try to control this objectionable element in my own depiction. 15. My ambition for the last couple of years has been to be one of the big fellows who superintend the building of large buildings which are monuments to the progress of man. 16. I seem to be imbued with a love of fairness and tolerance and can always recognize this asset in another person on short notice. 17. Prospect Farm is situated at the junction of two roads. One road extends east and west, and the other north and south. On each side of the road is a row of trees. The trees in each row are about thirty feet apart. 18. Jimmie Anderson and an old guy named Boreas, who has been blamed for all the wind in the world for the last few thousand years, had a lot of sport on the Glendale golf course yesterday while about forty other golfers, who play for keeps, shot two rounds of golf and wished they were Eskimos living in a nice steam-heated igloo. 19. Quiet reigned on Porter Field yesterday when Henderson's men trotted out for practice somewhat the worse for wear after Saturday's overwhelming defeat. 20. A small sickly twig in the earth may in due years assume the rôle of a gigantic oak or a monstrous elm, where it once passed unnoticed and received but the slightest heed from earthly beings; and accordingly an insignificant wager made in the course of a friendly discussion can be the sponsor for infinite deeds and endless events.

21. Since, upon my arrival in this community, I found that I had considerable time to spare, I was accordingly solicitous to find vent for my exuberant spirits. 22. This teacher cultivated in a manner a degree of self-reliance among his pupils and at the same time made it clear that he was ready at all times to render all that it was possible for him to do. 23. Like a grim obelisk, Casey, the brilliant stellar end for the "Windy City," stands in the pathway of victory for the purple-clad players next Saturday. 24. It was a filthy night. The February harpy had lost her wind brats again and was running wild in the avenues, railing, calling, tearing her hair, while they were brawling in the dirty cross streets. At Washington Square, unmindful of this, stood a tall human figure with a reddish intellectual beard, looking back through Fifth Avenue. 25. Readers who have hitherto found it necessary to buy books they do not care to own, in order to keep up with the ever-changing literary landscape, will be enabled to select from a wide selection of the best and most popular present-day books. 26. The danger that the country might under this arrangement be left without a president led to the enactment in 1886 of the Second Succession Act, which is still in force.

THE SENTENCE

UNITY

61. A sentence should express a single complete thought. (See discussion under Rule 73.) If it contains two or more statements, these should be so related as to express a single thought. Conversely, a sentence should contain at least one complete statement.

General principle

62. Statements which conspicuously lack connection with each other should not be put in the same sentence. Defects in unity may be corrected by one of the following means:

Statements unconnected in thought

(a) By placing the unrelated statements in different sentences. -

Unity secured by division

Wrong: Mathematics is my hardest subject, and comes at eleven in the morning.

Right: Mathematics is my hardest subject. It comes at eleven in the morning.

Wrong: Ruskin was a famous English critic, and was born in 1819.

Right: Ruskin was a famous English critic. He was born in 1819.

Wrong: I have received your letter of May 6, and the shirts referred to were shipped yesterday morning.

Right: I have received your letter of May 6. The shirts referred to were shipped yesterday.

(b) By subordinating one statement to another when the logical relationship of the statements can thus be made clear.

Unity secured by subordination

Right: Mathematics, my hardest subject, comes at eleven in the morning.

Right: Ruskin, the famous English critic, was born in 1819.

Right: The shirts referred to in your letter of May 6 were shipped yesterday.

Wrong: I was visiting my grandfather last winter in Vermont and I went to a maple sugar camp.

Improved: When I was visiting my grandfather last winter in Vermont, I went to a maple sugar camp.

Wrong: There were cars ahead of us and behind us for several blocks and we could not move out of the line.

Improved: We could not move out of the line, because there were cars ahead of us and behind us for several blocks.

Unity secured by filling up gaps in thought

(c) By filling up the gaps in thought.

Wrong: Engineering has always interested me, but last winter I heard a talk by a famous engineer. Then I decided to take an engineering course.

Right: Although engineering has always interested me, I did not decide to take up an engineering course until I heard last winter a talk by a famous engineer.

Wrong: The scenery along the banks is very pretty, but the river is too shallow to be navigated by large boats.

Right: The scenery along the banks is very pretty, but few people have seen it, because the river is too shallow to be navigated by boats large enough to carry passengers.

Wrong: The operation of an incubator is simple, but no machine will work well unless it is watched.

Right: An incubator is simple in operation, but, like any other machine, it will not work well unless it is watched.

Statements
strung together with and
and but

63. Avoid compound sentences consisting of statements strung together with and's and but's. Make the proper division and endeavor to reduce predica-tion; i.e.: express an unimportant idea in a minor form — subordinate clause, phrase, or single word — instead of a major form of predication — sentence or independent clause — when doing so does not interfere with clearness or force. The untrained writer does not perceive differences of importance between ideas, but places each in an independent clause and joins them by and, but, or or. The skilled writer endeavors to express these differences by exactness and variety of subordination.

Wrong: The aircraft production program was badly delayed, and a good many people think we did nothing in building airplanes, but the government reorganized the work, and put capable production specialists in command, and these men corrected the faults in the planes and increased production, and before the end of the war they were turning out planes faster than the government could supply pilots to man them.

Right: It is true that the aircraft production program was badly delayed, so that it is no wonder many people think we accomplished nothing in building airplanes. As a matter of fact, however, after the government reorganized the work and put capable production specialists in command, not only were the faults in the planes corrected, but production was increased. Before the end of the war, airplanes were being turned out faster than the government could supply pilots to man them.

Inferior: [First clause overemphasized.] I came into class and found I was five minutes late.

Predication reduced: [Subordinate clause.] When I came into class I found I was five minutes late; [or, participial phrase] On coming into class I found I was five minutes late.

Inferior: There were three big maple trees beside the house, and under them in the shade was a sand pile, and in this we children used to play.

Predication reduced: 'Beside the house in the shade of three big maples lay a sand pile, in which we children used to play.

Inferior: It was a fine frosty morning and two seniors were walking toward college.

Predication reduced: One fine frosty morning two seniors were walking toward college.

Bad: The time comes, and the student is unprepared to choose a major study, but yet he must choose.

Predication reduced: When the time comes, the student must choose a major study, even though he is unprepared to make the choice.

NOTE. — It is rarely advisable to begin sentences with and or also. Practice instead the use of a variety of connectives, and note that it is often advantageous to place them within the sentence rather than at the beginning. (See Rule 138.)

So, then,
and also used to join verbs

64. Good usage does not sanction the general habit of joining coördinate verbs in a sentence by so, then, or also. It is preferable either to recast, subordinating one member, or to use a conjunction, and or but, in addition to the adverb.

Inferior: He was only one among many so was not observed.

Preferable: Being only one among many, he was not observed; [or] He was only one among many and so was not observed.

Inferior: I paddled the boat for a while, then fell into a reverie.

Preferable: After paddling the boat for a while, I fell into a reverie; [or] I paddled the boat for a while, and then fell into a reverie.

The so
habit

65. Avoid the abuse of so as a connective between clauses. It may be correctly used to mean if, accordingly, therefore, etc., but it should not be used frequently or vaguely. (See discussion of so in Appendix D.) The problem of the so sentence is one of excessive coördination due to failure to perceive that the relations between various ideas which are loosely indicated by the same connective may be expressed by a variety of connectives, and by logical subordination. (For a list of subordinating words see Appendix D.) Note that so, like the other conjunctive adverbs, should usually be preceded by a semicolon. (See Rule 255 b.)

Inferior: His wife thought he would be thirsty; so she brought a pitcher of water.

Preferable: His wife, thinking he would be thirsty, brought a pitcher of water.

Inferior: The people were opposed to him for some unknown reason; so he had to accomplish his purpose through secret agents.

Preferable: Since the people were, for some unknown reason, opposed to him, he was compelled to accomplish his purpose through secret agents.

Inferior: I decided it was high time we camped, for it would soon be dark, so I turned the canoe toward shore.

Preferable: I decided it was high time we camped, for it would soon be dark; so [or, "accordingly"] I turned the canoe toward shore.

66. Two consecutive statements should not both be introduced by but or for. (See Rule 67.) This fault may usually be corrected by omitting the first but or for. Two but's or for's

Bad: Iago became fond of Desdemona but she paid no attention to him but seemed to favor Cassio.

Right: Iago became fond of Desdemona. She paid no attention to him but seemed to favor Cassio.

Bad: He suddenly paused, for it seemed wonderful that he could speak so easily, for usually he was bashful.

Right: He suddenly paused; it seemed wonderful that he could speak so easily, for usually he was bashful.

Overlapping
dependence

67. Do not put a series of similar clauses or a series of similar phrases in an overlapping construction, — i.e., with the second depending on the first, the third on the second, the fourth on the third, etc. Recast the sentence. (Cf. Rule 66.)

Awkward: I never knew a man who was so ready to help a friend who had got into difficulties which pressed him hard.

Right: I never knew a man so ready to help a friend who found himself hard pressed by difficulties.

Awkward: I was so uncomfortable that I rolled up my sleeves so far that my arms got sunburned, so that I could hardly sleep that night.

Right: Feeling very uncomfortable, I rolled up my sleeves so far that my arms got badly sunburned. The pain of my smarting skin kept me awake most of that night.

Awkward: This was the first of the entertainments of the senior girls of the dormitory.

Right: This was the first entertainment given by the senior girls of the dormitory.

NOTE. — A series of similar clauses or phrases all depending on the same sentence-element gives rise to no awkwardness. (See Rules 68, note, and 115.)

Right: I rise to nominate a man who has ever been staunch in his loyalty, who has long been a trusted counselor in the policies of our party, who has demonstrated his fitness for his office by the efficiency of his administration in others, whose honor has never been assailed save by calumnious envy, whose fame is destined to echo down the coming ages, who . . . etc.

Right: His face has come down to us marked with all the blemishes put on it by time, by war, by sleepless nights, by anxiety, perhaps by remorse.

68. Long, straggling sentences written without grammatical plan and covering either too many ideas or too many periods of time to make a definite impression on the reader's mind are a palpable violation of unity. Straggling sentences

Wrong: That night we camped near the outlet, and the next morning we packed our equipment and took down the tents and put them into the canoes and started down the outlet with our canoe in the lead, but we had not gone more than a few miles when we came to a fallen tree right across our way, and as the banks were soft mud it would be hard to carry around it, so we held a council of war and decided to cut through the trunk, which was not very large, so after much splashing and nearly upsetting the canoe we succeeded in disposing of the obstacle, after which we proceeded on our way. Narrative

Right: That night we camped near the outlet. The next morning, after stowing our tents and equipment in the canoes, we started down the stream, our canoe leading. After we had paddled a few miles, we came to a tree which had fallen right across our way. As the banks were soft mud, to carry around the tree would have been difficult; accordingly, holding a council of war, we decided to cut through the trunk, which was not very large. After much splashing, and nearly upsetting the canoe, we succeeded in disposing of the obstacle, and proceeded on our way.

Wrong: Tennyson's poem Lady Clara Vere de Vere is the speech of a young country fellow to a young lady of high birth who is beautiful but a heartless coquette, having attempted to ensnare the young man and then cast him off merely to amuse herself, as she has done with a number of other young fellows, one of whom, as the young man who is speaking reminds her, committed suicide from grief at her cruelty, which makes the young man who is speaking despise the lady, for he tells her that he cares neither for her beauty nor for her high birth, since Summary

she has no goodness of heart, and he solemnly tells her she ought to cease amusing herself by her coquetry and to "pray Heaven for a human heart."

Right: Tennyson's poem Lady Clara Vere de Vere is the speech of a manly young country fellow to a beautiful but heartless young lady of high birth, who has attempted to amuse herself by breaking his heart — a speech expressing disdain for charms beneath which there is no goodness of heart, and contempt for hereditary rank of which the possessor lacks true virtue and honor; reminding the lady of the suicide of another country lad, whom she had enticed by feigned affection and then cruelly repudiated; and solemnly adjuring her to cease her unworthy and injurious diversion, to turn her leisure to some good end, and to "pray Heaven for a human heart."

NOTE. — A sentence may be long without violating unity. The first of the two foregoing sentences violates unity because it is straggling, lacking grammatical plan. The second does not violate unity; it has a definite organization of which parallelism is an important factor. (See Rule 115.) This parallelism may be made clear by the following diagram:

Tennyson's poem . . . is . . . a speech	{	1. expressing 2. reminding 3. adjuring her	{	a. disdain b. contempt a. to cease b. to turn c. to pray
--	---	--	---	--

The run-on
sentence

69. Do not attach the last part of a sentence to the following sentence that introduces a new thought. Either put it back into the preceding sentence or make it independent.

Bad: At the first meeting of my classes, I was very nervous. I made an absolute failure of everything I tried, and I noticed that the answers of many of my fellow freshmen were wrong.

Improved: At the first meeting of my classes, I was so nervous that I made an absolute failure of everything I tried. I noticed that the answers of many of my fellow freshmen were wrong.

Bad: In the tree we had what we called a four-story house and on the top floor, which was rather large, we had high cloth walls. No one could see us from below and it was here that I smoked my first pipeful of tobacco.

Improved: In the tree we had what we called a four-story house and on the top floor, which was rather large, we had cloth walls so high that no one could see us from below. It was here that I smoked my first pipeful of tobacco.

70. Do not chop up the thought of one unified sentence into several short sentences. Put the thought into one sentence with proper subordination and reduced prædication. (See Rule 41.)

Thought
chopped up

Bad: Two friends were to meet me in a neighboring town. We were to go to my home. They were to visit with me. We were then going to college together.

Improved: Two friends, who were to meet me in a neighboring town, were to go home with me for a visit before we went to college.

Bad: My best friend in high school was our coach. His name was John Everett. He coached our football and basketball teams.

Improved: My best friend in high school was our football and basketball coach, John Everett.

71. Avoid the frequent use of parentheses. The parenthetical material may be subordinated, or may be put into separate sentences, or may be omitted.

Frequent
use of parentheses

Bad: My cousin (he is the one that you met when you visited me two years ago) has just returned from the East where he saw many important football games (especially the Yale-Harvard and the Army-Navy games).

Improved: My cousin, whom you met when you visited me two years ago, has just returned from the East, where he saw the Yale-Harvard, the Army-Navy, and other important football games.

Comma
fault

72. Do not run two sentences together into one by using a comma between them instead of a period.
(See Rule 253.)

Wrong: He was present at all athletic contests with his word of cheer for the losers and congratulations for the winners, in this manner he made many friends.

Right: He was present at all athletic contests with his word of cheer for the losers and congratulations for the winners. In this manner he made many friends.

Wrong: When the game begins, the two teams line up much in the same manner as in a football game, the center forward of the team stands in the middle of the field on the 50-yard line, facing the goal.

Right: When the game begins, the two teams line up much in the same manner as in a football game. The center forward of the team stands in the middle of the field on the 50-yard line, facing the goal.

NOTE. — If the clauses are so related in thought that they may be put into one sentence, they should be separated by a semicolon rather than by a comma.

Subordinate elements mistaken for
sentences

73. Subordinate sentence-elements should not be capitalized and punctuated like complete sentences. This error, the "period fault," is one of the most serious the writer can commit, because it breaks up a complete thought into incomplete fragments. An incomplete sentence is to be distinguished from the correct abbreviated forms of complete ideas such as are illustrated in the following cases:

1. Questions and answers to questions, especially in conversation.

Why not?

Because it is too late.

2. Exclamations.

A pretty situation!

At last!

3. Transitions.

Now for the next objection.

To consider the next point.

Writers frequently use incomplete sentences to gain emphasis or realism by reproducing the style of speech. There is a great difference between the incomplete sentence designedly used by the skilled writer and that of the illiterate who places a period in his sentence before he has completed it. Contrast these examples:

"He began to plan what he would do with his Saturday afternoons and his Sundays. He would not go to the club for lunch on Saturday. No, cut away from the office as soon as possible and get them to give him a couple of slices of cold meat and half a lettuce when he got home."

— KATHERINE MANSFIELD.

Fishing attracts men of all professions. Whether they are farmers, lawyers, merchants, or doctors.

The inexperienced writer should not attempt incomplete sentences until he is absolutely certain that he knows the difference between a complete and an incomplete thought. Even then incomplete sentences should be used with caution; they are likely to produce a jerking, exclamatory, and artificial style that soon becomes tiresome.

In determining whether an expression is a complete sentence, the student cannot always rely upon his judgment, for a subordinate member may appear complete in thought. He should rely instead upon grammatical definitions as the guide to correct punctuation. He should distinguish carefully between a complete sentence, a phrase, and a subordinate clause. A complete sentence contains a subject and a predicate, and is not dependent on any words outside itself. A phrase is a group of words not containing a subject and a predicate. A subordinate clause is introduced by (and usually begins with) a relative pronoun or a subordinating conjunction. The relative pronouns are that, who, what, which, whoever, whatever, and whichever. The principal subordinating conjunctions are if, as if, even if, though, although, whether, lest, unless, than, as, that, in order that, so that, because, since, when, whenever, while, after, where, whereas, wherever, provided, provided that, before, how, however, until. Simple conjunctions and conjunctive adverbs, which do not subordinate the subjects and predicates following them, should be carefully distinguished from relative pronouns and subordinating conjunctions. (See Conjunction in Appendix B.)

Wrong: It offers a course for those who wish to study painting. At the same time affording opportunity for literary study. [Participial phrase lacking subject and predicate.]

Right: It offers a course for those who wish to study painting, at the same time affording opportunity for literary study.

Wrong: Among her suitors were two she favored most. One a college student, the other a capitalist. [Phrases in apposition with "suitors."]

Right: Among her suitors were two she favored most; one a college student, the other a capitalist.

Wrong: The care of oil lamps requires every day some untidy and disagreeable labor. While electric lights give the housekeeper no trouble. [Subordinate clause, marked by "while."]

Right: The care of oil lamps requires every day some untidy and disagreeable labor, while electric lights give the housekeeper no trouble.

- 74. Do not use a substantive and a participle for a subject and predicate. Substantives and participles for sentences
- Wrong: The weather being pleasant today.
- Right: The weather is pleasant today.

COHERENCE

- 75. Coherence requires that the parts of a sentence be so worded and arranged that they will stick together. General principle

Reference

- 76. Do not use a pronoun instead of a noun if there can be doubt even for a moment about its antecedent. Uncertain or ludicrous reference
- This fault may sometimes be avoided by repeating the antecedent or using an equivalent noun; recasting may be advisable.

Uncertain: Geraint followed the knight to a town, where he entered a castle.

Clear: Geraint followed the knight to a town and there saw him enter a castle.

Uncertain: He told his father he would soon get a letter.

Clear: He said to his father, "You will [or I shall] soon get a letter."

Not immediately evident: The ghost of his old partner appeared to Scrooge. He told him he must reform.

Clear: The ghost of his partner appeared to Scrooge and admonished him to reform.

Ludicrous: Whistling for Rover, my cousin put a pail in his mouth and we started.

Clear: Whistling for Rover, my cousin put a pail in the dog's mouth, and we started.

NOTE. — Do not use a plural pronoun referring to a singular noun preceding; make the pronoun singular or repeat the noun in the plural.

Wrong: The incubator is a modern device for hatching chickens. All poultrymen who do business on a large scale use them.

Right: The incubator is a modern device for hatching chickens. All poultrymen who do business on a large scale use it; [or] . . . use incubators.

Weak reference of this and that

77. The pronouns this and that are peculiarly liable to misuse with what may be called weak reference. In case of such use, the fault may often be corrected by changing the pronoun to a demonstrative adjective and inserting a noun after it. Thus:

Weak reference: He asked where Cary was. I could not answer that.

Right: He asked where Cary was. I could not answer that question.

Weak reference: We do oppose the bill; if we did not, we should not publish this.

Right: We do oppose the bill; if we did not, we should not publish this article.

Remote
reference

78. Do not use a pronoun to refer to a noun that is widely separated from it; repeat the noun.

Reference to a noun not prominent

79. Avoid reference of a pronoun to a noun decidedly subordinate in thought or syntax. Repeat the noun or recast the sentence. Some more prominent noun is likely to be mistaken for the antecedent.

Bad: Mrs. Bloodgood will appear at Powers's Theatre in Fitch's play, The Girl with the Green Eyes. This piece was written by him especially for Mrs. Bloodgood.

Right: Mrs. Bloodgood will appear at Powers's Theatre in Fitch's play, The Girl with the Green Eyes. This piece was written by Mr. Fitch especially for Mrs. Bloodgood.

Bad: In Miss Howerth's story of her life she relates this incident.

Right: Miss Howerth in the story of her life relates this incident.

Allowable: Tom's happiness was a joy to see; he literally danced on the pavement. ["Tom" is subordinate in syntax but not in thought.]

80. Do not use a pronoun, or a pronominal expression, seeming to refer to a word or phrase that has not been expressed. Reference to a word not expressed

Bad: The cadet must keep his hands out of his pockets; that would be very unsoldierly.

Right: The cadet must keep his hands out of his pockets; to put them there would be very unsoldierly.

Bad: Marx is a violinist, the study of which instrument he began when a boy.

Right: Marx is a violinist. He began the study of the violin when he was a boy.

Bad: Mink-skins are valuable, because these animals are now scarce.

Right: Mink-skins are valuable, because minks are now scarce.

81. The relative pronoun which should not be used referring to a whole statement if that statement contains nouns to which the pronoun may be erroneously referred. Use a dash and put a noun (fact, act, operation, etc.) before the which; or recast. Reference to a whole statement

Ambiguous: He did not hear her cry which was due to his deafness.

Right: He did not hear her cry — a fact which was due to his deafness.

Ambiguous: Unless you steer carefully, the boat may crash into the wharf, which may result in serious damage to the hull.

Right: Unless you steer carefully, the boat may crash into the wharf, seriously damaging the hull.

Right: Unless you steer carefully you may run the boat into the wharf and seriously damage the hull.

Antecedent in parentheses

82. Do not use a pronoun followed by its antecedent in parentheses; use the antecedent alone or recast the sentence.

Awkward: If Davis treated Dixon discourteously, there is no objection to his (Dixon's) decision.

Right: If Davis treated Dixon discourteously, there is no objection to Dixon's decision; [or] Dixon is not to be blamed for his decision if he was treated discourteously by Davis.

Indefinite
you

83. Avoid the indefinite use of you in formal composition. The fault may be corrected by using either the passive voice or the pronoun one, or by substituting the noun or pronoun which is really intended. (For the fault of shifting from you to one and to we, see Rule 187.)

Vague: You should not use they indefinitely.

Definite: They should not be used indefinitely; [or]
One should not use they indefinitely.

Indefinite
they

84. Avoid using they indefinitely; use the passive voice, or recast the sentence otherwise.

Wrong: They make bricks in Fostoria.

Right: Bricks are made in Fostoria.

Wrong: They had a collision on the electric road.

Right: There was a collision; [or] A collision occurred (more formal).

Wrong: They don't have redbirds in Wisconsin.

Right: There are no redbirds in Wisconsin; [or] Redbirds are not found in Wisconsin (more formal).

Indefinite
it

85. Except in impersonal expressions, such as it rains, it seems, it is cold, do not use it without antecedent; recast the sentence.

Wrong: In the notice on the bulletin board it says the drill is held at four.

Right: The notice on the bulletin board says the drill is held at four.

Wrong: In Garland's Life Among the Corn Rows it gives a description of life among the farmers.

Right: Garland's Life Among the Corn Rows gives a description; [or] In Garland's Life Among the Corn Rows there is a description.

Wrong: Does it say "Fair Oaks" on that car?

Right: Is that car marked "Fair Oaks"?

NOTE. — The habit of beginning sentences with it is or it seems, even when these expressions are grammatically correct, makes a weak style and often leads to confusion of pronouns. (See Rule 76.)

86. Avoid the confusion of having in the same sentence both an indefinite it and an it with an antecedent.

Indefinite
it and definite it in the same
sentence

Bad: Radium gives out heat enough in an hour to raise its own weight of water from the freezing to the boiling point; yet it wastes away so slowly that it has been estimated that it would require fifteen hundred years for it to lose half its weight.

Improved: Radium gives out heat enough in an hour to raise its own weight of water from the freezing to the boiling point; yet it wastes away so slowly that, according to estimates, in fifteen hundred years it would lose only half its weight.

87. The use of a demonstrative adjective (especially that or those) without the relative clause needed to make clear what is meant is a colloquialism. (For the misuse of the pronoun involving weak reference, see Rule 79.)

Indefinite
that and those

Wrong: I observed that the building was one of those rambling old mansions.

Right: I observed that the building was a rambling old mansion; [or] . . . one of those rambling old mansions that one often sees in New England towns.

Dangling Modifiers

88. A participial phrase, a gerund phrase, an infinitive phrase, or an elliptical clause is correctly

Dangling
modifiers

used only (1) when the noun or pronoun that it logically modifies is expressed in the sentence containing one of these constructions, and (2) when this phrase or clause is placed so near the proper noun or pronoun that the reader immediately associates it with the noun or pronoun. Almost always these constructions should modify the subject of the main clause. Violations of the foregoing rule may be corrected (a) by changing the dangling construction to a complete clause with subject and predicate both expressed, or (b) by supplying the noun or pronoun that the construction logically modifies (the noun or pronoun should usually be made the subject of the main clause), or (c) by placing the construction so near the noun or pronoun that there can be no confusion.

Dangling
participial
phrases

(a) Dangling participial phrases —

Wrong: Having come of age, I took my son into partnership with me.

Right: When my son came of age, I took him into partnership; [or] Having come of age, my son entered into partnership with me.

Wrong: There we landed, and having eaten our lunch, the steamboat departed.

Right: There we landed, and after we had eaten our lunch, the steamboat departed; [or] There we landed, and having eaten our lunch, we saw the steamboat depart.

Wrong: Coming around the curve in the road, the schoolhouse was seen.

Right: As we came around the curve in the road, we saw the schoolhouse; [or] Coming around the curve in the road, we saw the schoolhouse.

Ambiguous: He identified himself with the church, every day becoming more and more useful in the community.

Clear: He identified himself with the church, which every day became more and more useful in the community; [or] Identifying himself with the church, he every day became more and more useful in the community.

NOTE. — Do not end a sentence with a participial phrase of result which is not related to any noun preceding. Such phrases frequently begin with thus or thereby. The error may be corrected by changing the participial phrase to an independent clause or to a subordinate clause.

Participial phrase of result (thus or thereby)

Wrong: He was well acquainted with the best literature, thus helping him to become an able critic.

Right: He was well acquainted with the best literature; this helped him to become an able critic; [or, so that he was helped.]

Wrong: He has to stand still until the rod man comes up, thus giving him no chance to move about and keep warm.

Right: He has to stand still until the rod man comes up; thus he has no chance to move about and keep warm; [or, so that he has no chance.]

Wrong: The little ship was very light, causing it to ride the waves easily.

Right: The little ship was very light; thus it rode the waves easily; [or, so that it rode the waves easily].

(b) Dangling gerund phrases —

Dangling
gerund
phrases

Wrong: In talking to Smith the other day, he told me about the race.

Right: As I was talking to Smith the other day, he told me about the race; [or] In talking to Smith the other day, I learned about the race.

Wrong: After pointing out my errors, I was dismissed.

Right: When he had pointed out my errors, I was dismissed; [or] After pointing out my errors, he dismissed me.

Wrong: After flunking three times, the professor reproved me.

Right: When I had flunked three times, the professor reproved me; [or] After flunking three times, I was reproved by the professor.

Wrong: After singing hymn 523, Mr. Barnes will lead in prayer.

Right: After we have sung hymn 523, Mr. Barnes will lead in prayer; [or] After singing hymn 523, we shall be led in prayer by Mr. Barnes.

Right: He assumed a curious pose unusual for him in speaking; [or] In speaking, he assumed a curious pose unusual for him. (Note how the meaning of the sentence is changed when the position of the gerund phrase is changed.)

Dangling
infinitive
phrases

(c) Dangling infinitive phrases —

Wrong: To enjoy a walking trip, the feet should be in good condition.

Right: To enjoy a walking trip, take care that your feet are in good condition.

Wrong: To appreciate pictures, they should be studied.

Right: To appreciate pictures, study them; [or] If pictures are to be appreciated, they should be studied.

Right: She must be sure to give the date; [or] To give the date she must be sure. (Note how the meaning of the sentence is changed when the position of the gerund phrase is changed.)

Dangling
elliptical
clauses

(d) Dangling elliptical clauses. (An elliptical clause is a clause from which the subject and predicate are omitted; e.g., while going for while I was going, when a boy for when he was a boy.)

Wrong: When six years old, my grandfather died.

Right: When I was six years old, my grandfather died.

Wrong: You should not cut the cake until thoroughly cooked.

Right: You should not cut the cake until it is thoroughly cooked.

Elliptical
clauses in titles

NOTE. — Rule 88 forbids such titles as An Accident while Hunting, Things Learned while Canvassing. Write rather An Accident in a Bear Hunt, Things Learned by a Canvasser.

89. An exception to Rule 88 may be made in the case of participial gerund, or infinitive construction which designates general action, not the action of any specific doer or receiver of the action.

Allowable
dangling
modifiers

Right: Generally speaking, he is a careful workman.

Right: Taking everything into consideration, the decision was a fair one.

Right: In swimming, the head should not be lifted too high.

90. Do not make dangling modifiers of due to, owing to, and caused by. They are adjective expressions and should be used with nouns that they can logically modify. Faulty sentences may be corrected either (a) by using on account of or because of, or similar adverbial expressions, or (b) by supplying a noun for the adjective expression to modify.

Due to,
owing to,
caused by

Wrong: The forces were divided, due to a misunderstanding.

Right: The forces were divided through [or because of] a misunderstanding; [or] The division of the forces was due to a misunderstanding.

Wrong: He was deaf, caused by an early attack of scarlet fever.

Right: He was deaf as the result of an early attack of scarlet fever; [or] His deafness was caused by an early attack of scarlet fever.

Order of Members

91. Every modifier should be so placed that the reader connects it immediately with the member it modifies, and not with some other member. A phrase or clause that modifies the main clause may very often be placed with advantage at the beginning of the sentence.

Position of
modifiers:
General rule

Bad: The storm broke just as we reached the shore with great violence.

Right: Just as we reached the shore, the storm broke with great violence.

Bad: The ball is thrown home by a player stationed in the middle of the square called the pitcher.

Right: The ball is thrown home by a player called the pitcher, who is stationed in the middle of the square.

Position of the adverbs only, almost,
etc.

92. As a rule, place the adverbs only, merely, just, almost, ever, hardly, scarcely, quite, nearly, next to the words they modify, not elsewhere. If they are to modify only a part of the predicate, place them before that part.

Colloquial: I only want three.

Better: I want only three; [or] I want three only.

Colloquial: Do you ever expect to go again?

Better: Do you expect ever to go again?

Wrong: It is the handsomest vase I almost ever saw.

Right: It is almost the handsomest vase I ever saw.

Wrong: I never remember having met him. [Here "ever" is misplaced and made to modify the wrong word, for never = not ever.]

Misplaced
clauses

93. A modifying clause should not be so placed that a verb following it may, in reading, be erroneously joined with the verb of the clause instead of with the verb preceding the clause. Observe that in some instances the difficulty is remedied by placing the time modifier first.

Ill arranged: I walked out into the night as the moon rose and wandered through the grounds.

Clear: As the moon rose, I walked out into the night and wandered through the grounds.

Ill arranged: He sprang to the platform on which the dead man lay and shouted.

Clear: Springing to the platform on which the dead man lay, he shouted.

Bad: A terrible wind and thunder storm visited the Fourth Regiment camp Thursday night, shortly after taps were sounded, playing havoc on all sides.

 Right: On Thursday night, shortly after taps was sounded, a violent wind and thunder storm visited the Fourth Regiment camp, playing havoc on all sides.

94. As a rule, arrange a sentence containing a relative clause so that the clause immediately follows its antecedent. Position of relative clauses Awkward: I had many pleasant experiences while I was there, some of which I shall always remember.

Better: While I was there, I had many pleasant experiences, some of which I shall always remember.

Awkward: The correspondence began just one month later which led to the surrender.

Better: Just one month later began the correspondence which led to the surrender.

NOTE. — It may happen that a sentence containing a relative clause cannot be arranged according to the foregoing rule. In such a case it is often necessary, for clearness, to use two separate sentences or two coördinate clauses.

Bad: The police are looking today for the persons last in company with Clara Belinfant, the daughter of Abraham Belinfant, a rich New York merchant, who has been missing since July 18.

Right: The police are looking today for the persons last seen in company with Clara Belinfant, the daughter of Abraham Belinfant, a rich New York merchant. The girl has been missing since July 18.

95. Do not place between two members of a sentence a modifier applicable to either member. Do not trust to punctuation to show the application of the modifier; recast the sentence. Squinting modifiers

Defective: The person who steals in nine cases out of ten is driven to it by want.

Right: In nine cases out of ten, the person who steals is driven to it by want.

Defective: Since a canoe cannot stand hard knocks when not in use it should be kept out of the water.

Right: Since a canoe cannot stand hard knocks, it should be kept out of the water when not in use.

Defective: The coroner's jury which has been investigating the death of the girl today brought in a verdict of suicide.

Right: The coroner's jury which has been investigating the death of the girl brought in today a verdict of suicide.

Separation
of coördinate
modifiers

96. Two phrases or clauses modifying the same sentence-element and of parallel form and function should not be placed one before and one after that element; they should be put together.

Awkward: When he has once made up his mind, you may be sure he will never draw back when he has got fully started.

Right: When he has once made up his mind and got fully started, you may be sure he will never draw back.

Split
infinitives

97. Do not put an adverb or a phrase between an infinitive and its sign to.

Inelegant: I went there in order to personally inspect it.

Right: I went there in order to inspect it personally.

Inelegant: It is impossible to in any way remove them.

Right: It is impossible in any way to remove them.

Right: It is impossible to remove them in any way.

NOTE. — Though the split infinitive is usually to be avoided, it can be justified when used to avoid awkwardness or loss of clearness.

Smooth
order

98. The members of a sentence should be arranged to read smoothly, unless this arrangement impairs clearness.

Awkward: He, instead of acting as my guide, followed me. [Awkwardness caused by needless separation between subject and verb, throwing false emphasis on "he."]

Right: Instead of acting as my guide, he followed me.

Awkward: Fishing was not good, and they, becoming impatient, decided to quit.

Right: Fishing was not good, and becoming impatient they decided to quit.

NOTE. — This principle is violated by interposing a number of words between a preposition and its object, so that an awkward pause occurs after the preposition.

Preposition
separated from its object

Awkward: He submitted to, though he did not fully approve of, the rules.

Better: He submitted to the rules, though he did not fully approve of them.

Such a construction may be used, for the sake of brevity, in statutes, contracts, and the like, in which smoothness of style is of little consequence.

"The Congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting, the territory . . . belonging to the United States."

— The Federal Constitution.

Except in such a context, the harshness of the construction more than offsets the gain in compactness.

Illogical Construction

99. Do not omit a word, phrase, or clause essential to a clear understanding of the structure and meaning of the sentence.

Sentence-
elements
omitted

Bad: The resonator responds in a manner analogous to that which one tuning fork responds to another.

Right: The resonator responds in a manner analogous to that in which one tuning fork responds to another.

Wrong: There were some people whom I could not tell whether they were English or American.
["Whom" has no construction.]

Right: There were some people about whom I could not tell whether they were English or American.

Confused structure

100. Make the grammatical construction consistent throughout each sentence.

Bad: That's all I want, is a chance to test it thoroughly. ["Is" has no subject.]

Right: That's all I want — a chance to test it thoroughly [see Rule 264 d]; [or] All I want is a chance to test it thoroughly.

Sentences or sentence-elements
left uncompleted

101. Do not leave a grammatical construction unfinished.

Bad: The fact that I had never before studied at home, I was at a loss what to do with vacant periods. [The noun "fact" with its appositive modifier "that . . . home" is left without any construction.]

Right: The fact that I had never before studied at home made me feel at a loss as to what to do with vacant periods.

Bad: The story tells how a young German, who, having settled in Dakota, returns to Wisconsin and there marries an old schoolmate. [The clause beginning "how a young German" is left unfinished; "German" (modified by the clause "who . . . schoolmate") has no construction.]

Right: The story tells how a young German, having settled in Dakota, returns to Wisconsin and marries an old schoolmate.

Wrong: Any man who could accomplish that task, the whole world would think he was a hero. ["Man," with its modifier "who . . . task," is left without any construction.]

Right: Any man who could accomplish that task the whole world would regard as a hero.

Sentence as subject or predicate
complement

102. Do not use a sentence (except a quoted sentence) as the subject of is or was.

Bad: I was detained by business is the reason I am late.

Right: I was detained by business; that is the reason I am late.

A similar fault is the use of a sentence (except a quoted sentence) as a predicate substantive after is or was. This fault may be corrected by changing the substantive clause.

Bad: The difference between them is De Quincey is humorous and Macaulay is grave.

Right: The difference between them is that De Quincey is humorous and Macaulay is grave.

103. Do not use a when or where clause in place of a predicate noun; use a noun with modifiers. This error is likely to occur in definitions. (See also Rule 105.)

When or where clause for predicate
noun

Bad: Cribbing is where you copy somebody's answer in an examination.

Right: One form of cribbing is copying somebody's answer in an examination.

Bad: Intoxication is when the brain is affected by the action of certain drugs.

Right: Intoxication is a state of the brain, caused by the action of certain drugs.

104. Do not use a because clause as a noun clause. It is correctly used as an adverbial clause. (See Cause and Reason in Appendix A.)

Because clause as a noun clause

Wrong: The reason why I failed was because I had not studied my lesson.

Right: The reason why I failed was that I had not studied my lesson.

Wrong: Because I did not write to her was no reason for her being angry with me.

Right: The fact that I did not write to her was no reason for her being angry with me; [or] Because I did not write to her, she had no reason for being angry with me.

105. Every sentence-element should be in logical accord with the rest of the sentence. (See Rules 102

Logical agreement of sentence-members and 103; also Subject, Cause, and Reason in the Glossary.)

Bad: Of these names sixteen were chosen to be members. ["Sixteen (names)" does not agree logically with "were chosen to be members."]

Right: Of the persons named, sixteen were chosen to be members.

Bad: The life of a hod-carrier is sometimes happier than a prince. ["The life" does not agree logically with "is happier than a prince."]

Right: 'The life of a hod-carrier is sometimes happier than that of a prince.

Illogical: He hated to submit to the rules — viz., church attendance and not smoking. [Church attendance and abstinence from tobacco are not rules.]

Right: He hated to submit to the rules — namely, those requiring attendance at church and abstinence from smoking.

Illogical: A fireman seldom rises above an engineer.

Right: A fireman seldom rises above the position of engineer.

Illogical: The comedy Love's Labour's Lost, written by Shakespeare, is supposed to have occurred in Navarre.

Right: The events related in Shakespeare's comedy Love's Labour's Lost are supposed to have occurred in Navarre.

Illogical: Nothing looks more untidy than to see an expensive motor coming out of the garage covered with mud.

Right: Nothing looks more untidy than an expensive motor covered with mud coming out of the garage.

Illogical: As a question of economy, it is advantageous to use water power.

Right: For the sake of economy, it is advantageous to use water power.

Illogical: He had to choose between signing away his inheritance or being hanged.

Right: He had to choose between signing away his inheritance and being hanged.

Illogical: There is no place to hang it only in the hall.

Right: There is no place to hang it except in the hall;
[or] The hall is the only place to hang it.

Illogical: I sat on the opposite side from which Charlie was sitting.

Right: I sat opposite Charlie; [or] I sat on the side opposite to the one on which Charlie was sitting.

NOTE. — The subject and the predicate verb must be consistent with each other. Inconsistency often occurs in the use of compound predicates. Be sure that the last predicate is consistent with the subject.

Wrong: Coffee seeds are selected from the coffee plants with desirable characteristics, are then planted in a nursery or in a field where the mature plants are to grow, and come into bearing in their second or third year.

Improved: Coffee seeds are selected from the coffee plants with desirable characteristics, and are then planted in a nursery or in a field where the mature plants are to grow. The plants come into bearing in their second or third year.

106. When a part of a quoted sentence is incorporated into another sentence, it must be a coherent part of that sentence.

Quotation
coherent part of a
sentence

Wrong: Jane Austen pictures Elizabeth Bennet as intelligent, frank, independent, impulsive, and "more quickness of observation and less pliancy of temper than her sister."

Right: Jane Austen pictures Elizabeth Bennet as intelligent, frank, independent, impulsive, with "more quickness of observation and less pliancy of temper than her sister."

107. When comparing a thing to other members of its own class, exclude from the group the thing compared.

Other or else in a than or as clause

Illogical: Lead is heavier than any metal.

Right: Lead is heavier than any other metal.

Illogical: Shakespeare is greater than any English poet.

Right: Shakespeare is greater than any other English poet.

When
incorrect

108. When comparing a thing to the members of a class to which it does not belong, in the than or an as clause, do not restrict the standard of comparison by other or else or any equivalent word.

Illogical: That little word home means more to me than any other word of twice its length.

Right: That little word home means more to me than any word of twice its length.

The of phrase limiting a superlative

109. In the of phrase limiting an adjective or an adverb in the superlative degree —

(a) The object of of should be a plural noun or a collective noun, not a noun designating an individual person or thing.

Illogical: He is the tallest of any man in the regiment.

Right: He is the tallest of all the men in the regiment;
[or] He is the tallest man of the regiment.

(Right: He is taller than any other man in the regiment.)

(b) The object of of should designate a class to which the subject of comparison belongs, not a class to which it does not belong.

Illogical: Blackbirds make the best pie of all birds.

Right: Blackbirds make the best pie of all game pies.

(Right: Blackbirds make better pie than any other birds.)

(c) The object of of should not be restricted by other or else or any equivalent word.

Illogical: Shakespeare is the greatest of all other English poets.

Right: Shakespeare is the greatest of all English poets.

Incorrect Omissions

110. Avoid the incorrect use of words in a double capacity. A word or a combination of words may often be correctly used in a double capacity if it is perfectly fitted for both the offices it serves. For example, in the sentence, "I can do it as well as you," "can do it" serves as the predicate of both "I" and "you," and does so correctly, since it agrees grammatically with both pronouns. But there are various ways of using words in a double capacity that are incorrect; these are indicated in the following rules:

Words used in a double capacity

(a) Do not supply an auxiliary verb or a copula from one part of a sentence to another if the same form is not grammatically proper in both parts; write the proper form with each part.

Auxiliaries and copulas
in a double
capacity

Wrong: The fire was built and the potatoes baked.

Right: The fire was built and the potatoes were baked.

Wrong: He was a patriot, but all the rest traitors.

Right: He was a patriot, but all the rest were traitors.

NOTE. — The supplying of an auxiliary from one clause to another is likely in most cases to produce an awkward sentence, even when there is no violation of the foregoing principle. As a rule, repeat an auxiliary rather than supply it.

Awkward: Light was seen through the opening, and the voice of my rescuer heard.

Better: Light was seen through the opening, and the voice of my rescuer was heard. [See Rule 242 g.]

(b) Do not make a single form of the verb be serve both as a principal and as an auxiliary verb.

Be as both principal
and auxiliary

Wrong: At first the drill was interesting and liked by most of the men.

Right: At first the drill was interesting and was liked by most of the men.

Principal verbs in a double capacity

(c) Do not supply a principal verb from one part of a sentence to another if the same form is not grammatically proper in both parts; write the proper form for each part.

Wrong: He did what many others have and are doing.

Right: He did what many others have done and are doing.

Wrong: We ate such a dinner as only laborers can.

Right: We ate such a dinner as only laborers can eat.

Than or as clause in a double capacity

(d) Two expressions of comparison, the one an adjective preceded by as, the other an adjective in the comparative degree, should not both be completed by a single as clause or a single than clause, unless that clause immediately follows the expression of comparison that stands first in the sentence.

Wrong: Fostoria is as large, if not larger, than Delaware.

Right: Fostoria is as large as Delaware, if not larger.

Wrong: He is bigger and fully as strong as Buck.

Right: He is bigger than Buck and fully as strong.

Other modifiers in a double capacity

(e) Aside from the two cases given under d, above, two sentence-elements should never be limited by a single modifying phrase or clause unless that modifier is idiomatically adapted to both. (See Rule 23 b.)

A noun in a double capacity

(f) Two incomplete members of a sentence, the one requiring to complete it a singular noun, the other requiring a plural noun, should not both be completed by one noun, unless that noun immediately follows the incomplete member that stands first in the sentence.

Wrong: One of the greatest, if not the greatest, generals of America.

Right: One of the greatest generals of America, if not the greatest.

(g) When as to, in regard to, or in respect to is used as a single preposition to govern a clause, the to should not be made to govern a substantive within the clause.

To (in as to, in regard to, etc.) used in a double capacity

Wrong: A dispute arose as to [= concerning] whom the honor should belong.

Right (awkward): A dispute arose as to [= concerning] whom the honor should belong to.

Preferable: A dispute arose as to [= concerning] who should receive the honor. (See Rule 210 b.)

111. Do not omit the subordinating conjunction that at the beginning of a substantive clause which follows a verb of saying, thinking, feeling, etc., when to do so causes awkwardness.

Awkward omission of that

Bad: Silas Marner was brought back to church interests because he felt to do the right thing by Eppie he must have her christened.

Right: Silas Marner was brought back to church interests because he felt that to do the right thing by Eppie he must have her christened.

Note. — For the faulty omission of that after so, see Appendix A.

That after so

112. As a rule, repeat an article or a possessive adjective before each noun in a series, unless all the nouns designate the same thing.

Omission of articles and possessives

Wrong: Near by are a grocery, drug store, barber shop, and garage.

Right: Near by are a grocery store, a drug store, a barber shop, and a garage.

Wrong: She watched her grandmother, aunt, and mother sewing.

Right: She watched her grandmother, her aunt, and her mother sewing.

Wrong: I asked what were the names of her puppies and kitten.

Right: I asked what were the names of her puppies and her kitten.

Right: For that summer I was day clerk, night clerk, bell boy, and porter, all in one.

Omission of prepositions

113. In certain instances, a noun used to indicate the time, place, or manner of an occurrence should be accompanied by a preposition. Some uses of the noun without the preposition are distinctly wrong; some others are better suited to informal composition than to formal composition.

Wrong: Friendships made that way will never last.

Right: Friendships made in that way will never last.

Wrong: He is living some place in Arizona.

Right: He is living in some place in Arizona. [Observe that ordinarily the writer who uses the incorrect expressions any place, some place, etc., means to use the adverbs anywhere, somewhere, etc., See Appendix A.]

Wrong: You may sit any place you wish.

Right: You may sit in any place you wish.

Informal (not incorrect): The armistice was signed the eleventh of November.

More formal: The armistice was signed on the eleventh of November.

Right: Last year, last month, last night, last Saturday, next year, next day, next Tuesday, some day, one day, any day, that day, this day, this afternoon.

NOTE. — The expression "He is home" is bad idiom when used to mean location in a place: as, "Where is your sister this afternoon?" "She is home"; [should be, "at home"]. It is good idiom when used to mean arrival at a place; as, "He is safe home at last."

"Home is the sailor, home from sea,
And the hunter home from the hill." — STEVENSON.

A fault similar to those noted under this head is the omission of the article from the phrases all the morning, all the afternoon, all the week, all the evening, etc. All day and all night are established idioms.

114. Do not make comparisons leaving the standard of comparison not indicated or only vaguely implied; let the standard be definitely stated or implied.

Omission of standard of comparison

Incomplete: Manufacturers have come to see the greater economy of the electric motor.

Right: Manufacturers have come to see the greater economy of the electric motor as compared to steam power.

NOTE. — When such and so are used for very — as, “We had such a good time”; “I am so tired,” — a comparison is vaguely implied. (See Appendix A.)

Parallelism

115. As a rule, two or more sentence-elements that have the same logical office should be made grammatically parallel; i.e., if one is an infinitive, the other should be; if one is a relative clause, the other should be; if one is an appositive, the other should be; and so on.

Parallel forms for analogous elements

Bad: The crowd began to wave handkerchiefs and shouting good-byes. [“To wave” and “shouting,” both objects of “began,” are awkwardly dissimilar in form.]

Right: (a) The crowd began to wave handkerchiefs and to shout good-byes; [or] The crowd began waving handkerchiefs and shouting good-byes. [The two objects of “began” are made parallel; in (a) they are both infinitives, in (b) they are both gerunds.]

Bad: I met many people there whom I had seen before but did not know their names. [“Whom I had seen before” and “did not know their names,” both qualifiers (logically) of "people," are awkwardly dissimilar in form.]

Right: I met many people there whom I have seen before but whose names I did not know. [The two qualifiers of "people" are made parallel; both are relative clauses.]

Bad: I delight in a good novel — one which portrays strong characters and in reading the book you are thrilled. [The two qualifiers of "one" are awkwardly dissimilar; the first ("which portrays strong characters") is a relative clause, the second ("in reading the book you are thrilled") a sentence.]

Right: I delight in a good novel — one which portrays strong characters and which thrills the reader. [The two qualifiers are made parallel; both are relative clauses.]

Bad: Two courses are open to us: first, to have the missionary society transfer to us a missionary now in the field; second, one of our own members has volunteered to go, and we may send him. [The two logical appositives to "two courses" are awkwardly dissimilar; the first ("to have . . . field") is a grammatical appositive, the second ("one of our own members . . . him") a sentence.]

Right: Two courses are open to us: first, to have the missionary society transfer to us a missionary now in the field; second, to send one of our own members, who has volunteered to go. [The two logical appositives are made parallel; both are grammatical appositives to "courses."] [or] Two courses are open to us. First, we may have the missionary society transfer to us a missionary now in the field; second, we may send one of our members, who has volunteered to go. [The two logical appositives are made parallel; both are sentences.]

Bad: I have lived in many states, some for only a short time, while in others I have lived a year or more. [The two qualifiers of the main clause are awkwardly dissimilar; the first ("some for only a short time") is an incomplete modifier of "lived,"

the second ("while . . . more") a complete subordinate clause.]

Right: I have lived in many states, — in some for only a short time, in others for a year or more. [The two qualifiers of the main clause are made parallel; both are prepositional phrases modifying "lived."]

Bad: I was asked to contribute to the church, Christian Association, and to the athletic fund. [The three modifiers of "contribute" are awkwardly dissimilar in form; the first is a complete phrase, the second a noun with both the preposition and the article lacking, the third a complete phrase.]

Right: I was asked to contribute to the church, to the Christian Association, and to the athletic fund. [The three modifiers of "contribute" are made parallel in form; each is a complete phrase.] [or] I was asked to contribute to the church, the Christian Association, and the athletic fund. ["To" is made to govern three objects parallel in form, — each consisting of "the" and a noun.]

116. For the sake of clearness, coördinate sentence-members that are long or complex should be introduced in a similar or identical manner. Otherwise the reader may associate the wrong members.

Clearness of coördination

General
principle

Obscure coördination: Then I learned how he had run away from his father, a gypsy vagabond who professed to be a horse-trader and was in reality a thief, dressed in some clothes that he found on a scarecrow in a cornfield, learned the way to my home through the map in an old railway time-table, and come all the way on foot. [This sentence is well constructed; its defect is that the relation between the coördinate members is not shown by similar beginnings.]

Clear coördination: Then I learned how he had run away from his father, a gypsy vagabond who professed to be a horse-trader and was in reality a thief; how he had dressed in some clothes that he found on a scarecrow in a cornfield; how he had learned the way to my home through the map in an old railway time-table, and had come all the way on foot.

The foregoing principle has many different applications. The four following are worthy of special mention:

Repetition
of subordinating conjunctions

117. A subordinating conjunction introducing several coördinate assertions should be repeated with each assertion after the first, if the coördination of those assertions would otherwise not be immediately clear. This is especially important with clauses in indirect discourse introduced by that.

Obscure coördination: The registrar told him that he could not have credit for his half year of German and he must be put on probation because of his poor grades in English.

Clear coördination: The registrar told him that he could not have credit for his half year of German and that he must be put on probation because of his poor grades in English.

Obscure coördination: When they saw the excellent structure which, though handicapped by the strike and the difficulty of getting materials, he had yet completed in less than the required time, and considered how valuable such a man would be to them, they gave him a permanent position.

Clear coördination: When they saw the excellent structure which, though handicapped by the strike and the difficulty of getting materials, he had yet completed in less than the required time, and when they considered how valuable such a man would be to them, they gave him a permanent position.

NOTE. — When the coördinate assertions are very short, repetition of the conjunction is usually not necessary; e.g.:

Right: He seems to be pretty well, though he takes no exercise and neglects his diet.

It is only when the assertions are complex that repetition of the conjunction is necessary.

118. An auxiliary verb introducing several principal verbs should be repeated with each if the coördination would otherwise not be immediately clear. Repetition of auxiliary verbs

Obscure coördination: The captain must be quick to see just what movement will get his company out of close quarters and give the order clearly.

Clear coördination: The captain must be quick to see just what movement will get his company out of close quarters and must give the order clearly.

NOTE. — When the verbs stand close together, repetition is usually unnecessary; e.g.:

Right: You must line up quickly and march downstairs.

Right: The sheep may stray and be lost.

But when other verbs intervene between the coördinate verbs, clearness usually demands repetition of the auxiliary.

119. A preposition governing several objects should be repeated with each object after the first, when the construction of those objects would otherwise not be immediately clear. Repetition of prepositions

A. Not immediately clear: The place is often visited by tourists who are fond of rugged scenery, and especially amateur photographers.

Right: The place is often visited by tourists who are fond of rugged scenery, and especially by amateur photographers.

B. Not immediately clear: With the refusal of Mr. Goggins to accept the office left vacant by the resignation of Mr. Barnes and the presence of Governor Davidson in the city, the friends of Mr. Roemer were kept busy yesterday.

Clear: With the refusal of Mr. Goggins to accept the office left vacant by the resignation of Mr. Barnes, and with the presence of Governor Davidson in the city, the friends of Mr. Roemer were kept busy yesterday.

NOTE. — When the objects stand close together, repetition is usually unnecessary; e.g.:

Right: He had lived in Cuba, Panama, and Barbadoes.

Right: It was exposed to the wind, the rain, and the scorching sun.

But when the objects are separated by intervening modifiers, as in sentences A and B, clearness usually requires that the preposition be repeated.

Repetition
of the infinitive-
sign

120. An infinitive-sign (to) introducing several coördinate infinitives should be repeated with each infinitive after the first, when the construction of those infinitives would otherwise not be immediately clear.

A. Not immediately clear: Here nature had done her best to enchant those that can see and feel, and make them her lifelong worshipers.

Right: Here nature has done her best to enchant those that can see and feel, and to make them her lifelong worshipers.

NOTE. — When the infinitives stand close together, repetition of the to is usually not necessary; e.g.:

Right: Has he learned to dance, converse, and make himself agreeable?

But when the infinitives are separated by intervening adjuncts, as in sentence A above, repetition of the to is usually necessary to clearness.

Correlatives

121. Correlative conjunctions should be followed by coördinate sentence-elements; if a predicate follows the first, a predicate should follow the second; if a modifier the first, a modifier the second; and so on.

Wrong: They would neither speak to him nor would they look at him. [“Neither” is followed by “speak,” a part of a compound verb; “nor” by

"would they look," a subject and complete predicate.]

Right: They would neither speak to him nor look at him. ["Neither" and "nor" are each followed by an infinitive completing "would."]

Wrong: He is not only discourteous to the students but also to the teacher. ["Not only" is followed by an adjective, "but also" by a phrase modifying the adjective.]

Right: He is discourteous not only to the students but also to the teacher. [The correlatives are each followed by a phrase limiting "discourteous."]

122. Do not join by and, but, or or expressions which are not grammatically coördinate. Either omit the conjunction and make one expression properly subordinate, or recast one expression so as to make it coördinate with the other. (For matters of logical coördination see Rules 123, 124, 125.)

Misuse of coördinat-ing conjunctions

Wrong: He put up signs to keep people off the grass and thereby improving the appearance of the campus.

Right: He put up signs to keep people off the grass, thereby improving the appearance of the campus; [or] and thereby improved the appearance of the campus.

Wrong: The gun barrel is then sent to be chambered and slots to be cut in.

Right: The gun barrel is then sent to be chambered and to have slots cut in it.

The foregoing rule has these particular applications:

(a) Do not join a relative clause to its principal clause by and, but, or or. Violations of this rule may be corrected by (1) omitting the conjunction, (2) changing the relative clause to a principal clause, or (3) inserting a relative clause before the conjunction.

And which construction

Wrong: He came home with an increase in weight, but which hard work soon reduced.

Right: He came home with an increase in weight, which, however, hard work soon reduced; [or] (2) He came home with an increase in weight, but hard work soon reduced it.

Wrong: On the way we met a Mr. Osborn from the neighborhood of Denver and who had the typical Western breeziness.

Right: (1) On the way we met a Mr. Osborn from the neighborhood of Denver, who had the typical Western breeziness; [or] (3) On the way we met a Mr. Osborn, who came from the neighborhood of Denver, and who had the typical Western breeziness.

Which and construction

(b) Do not join a relative clause by and, but, or or to a predicate that cannot, as it stands, be a part of the relative clause. The test of correct coördination is to omit the first predicate. Violations of this rule may be corrected by (1) making the predicate following the relative clause into another predicate of the relative clause, (2) changing the relative clause into an independent assertion, or (3) omitting the and, but, or or, and changing the predicate following the relative clause into a subordinate element.

Wrong: In this river are some large fish which the people regard as sacred and allow no one to catch them. [Test, "which the people allow no one to catch them."]

Right: (1) In this river are some large fish, which the people regard as sacred and allow no one to catch; [or] (2) In this river are some large fish. The people regard these as sacred, and allow no one to catch them.

Wrong: It is subjected to severe strains, which it must withstand and at the same time work easily and rapidly. [Test, "which it must work easily and rapidly."]

Right: (2) It is subjected to severe strains; it must withstand these, and at the same time must work easily and rapidly; [or] (3) It is subjected to severe strains, which it must withstand, at the same time working easily and rapidly.

Wrong: Next day I went to Cleveland where I stayed for a week and then returned home. [Test, "where I then returned home."]

Right: (2) Next day I went to Cleveland. There I stayed a week, and then returned home.

123. Do not make a sentence-element similar in form to a preceding element with which it is not coördinate. Incorrect parallelism

Misleading: He is a blunt, manly fellow, who admires a soldier and despises an effeminate fop, who struts about affectedly and dresses daintily.

Right: He is a blunt, manly fellow, who admires a soldier and despises an effeminate, affected, daintily dressed fop.

124. Do not join by and and put in the same grammatical construction, two substantives or substantive clauses widely differing in logical function. Junction of incongruous substantives

Bad: The story tells of the bravery and promotion of a private. ["Bravery" designates a quality, "promotion" designates an experience.]

Right: The story tells of a private's bravery and of his promotion.

Bad: He tells in vivid language how dangerous to a vessel is the breaking loose of a cannon on wheels, and how a ship's gunner captured an escaped cannon. [The substantive clause "how dangerous to a vessel is the breaking loose of a cannon" designates a general truth; the substantive clause "how a ship's gunner captured an escaped cannon" designates a specific event.]

Right: He tells in vivid language how a cannon on wheels broke from its fastenings on a ship (explaining the perils that attend such an accident), and how it was captured by a gunner.

Series form
for dissimilar
elements

125. The formula a, b, and c should not be used for sentence-elements not coördinate. Violations of this rule may be corrected (1) by inserting and between a and b, or (2) by conforming c to a and b.

Bad: He was tall, slim, and wore a black coat. [Here a and b are adjectives, and c is a verb.]

Right: (1) He was tall and slim, and wore a black coat; [or] (2) He was a tall, slim, black-coated fellow.

Bad: We denounce the act as cruel, barbarous, and sincerely regret that it occurred. [Here a and b are adjectives and c is a verb.]

Right: (1) We denounce the act as cruel and barbarous, and sincerely regret that it occurred; [or] (2) We denounce the act as cruel, barbarous, and worthy of condemnation by all right-thinking sophomores.

Unnecessary Shifting

Shifting of subject

126. Avoid unnecessary shifting of subject. (See Rule 127.)

Bad: We passed over the road quickly and soon the camp was in sight.

Right: We passed over the road quickly and soon saw the camp.

Bad: The wars in the Balkan states had renewed old rivalries between Austria and Russia and a general European conflict speedily resulted.

Right: The wars in the Balkan states had renewed old rivalries between Austria and Russia and speedily resulted in a European conflict.

Shifting of voice

127. Avoid unnecessary shifting of voice. The change of voice almost always involves a change of subject. (See Rule 126.)

Bad: He had for years professed himself a democrat, and his belief in the sovereignty of the people was frequently proclaimed.

Right: He had for years professed himself a democrat, and frequently proclaimed his belief in the sovereignty of the people.

Bad: I wrote my theme, translated my French, and in a few minutes my algebra problems were done.

Right: I wrote my theme, translated my French, and in a few minutes did my algebra problems.

128. Avoid unnecessary shifting of mood.

Shifting of mood

Bad: First stir in the flour and then you should add the butter and salt.

Right: First you should stir in the flour and then you should add the butter and salt; [or] Stir in the flour first and then add the butter and salt.

129. Avoid unnecessary shifting of tense. (See Rules 236-238, 184, 186.)

Shifting of tense

Bad: The creature opened the door and then comes clanging up the stairs.

Right: The creature opened the door and then came clanging up the stairs; [or] The creature opens the door and then comes clanging up the stairs.

130. Avoid unnecessary shifting of the number of nouns and pronouns. (See Rule 208.)

Shifting of number

Bad: Each one knew that their chances for escape were very slight.

Right: Each one knew that his chances for escape were very slight.

Bad: Nobody had yet received their orders.

Right: Nobody had yet received his orders.

131. Avoid unnecessary shifting of person. (See Rules 185, 187.)

Shifting of person

Bad: The more we walk, the more we go hill-climbing, the more powerful do the muscular engines of one's heels become.

Improved: The more we walk, the more we go hill-climbing, the more powerful do the muscular engines of our heels become.

Bad: One should spend the morning hours, not on trivial matters, but on work requiring mental effort, for your mind is freshest during those hours.

Improved: One should spend the morning hours, not on trivial matters, but on work requiring mental effort, for one's mind is freshest during those hours.

Miscellaneous Rules

Coherence gained by connectives

132. A sentence may often be made coherent by the insertion of the precise connectives that will indicate the relationship of its parts. (See Rule 62 b and c and Appendix D.)

Incoherent: The owners of these Colonial houses were ordinarily well-to-do men and they had enough money to live in a pleasant and generous manner, but they could not afford any extravagances, but they built substantially and they were obliged to build economically.

Improved: The owners of these Colonial houses were ordinarily well-to-do men, who had enough money to live in a pleasant and generous manner, but who could not afford any extravagances; consequently, although they built substantially, they were obliged to build economically.

Coherence
gained by summarizing words

133. A sentence may often be made coherent by the insertion of summarizing or recapitulating words. (See Appendix D.)

Note the italicized summary words in the following sentences:

"And to set forth the right standard, and to train according to it, and to help forward all students towards it according to their various capacities, this I conceive to be the business of a University."

—NEWMAN.

"Broad quadrangles, high halls and chambers, ornamented cloisters, stately walks, or umbrageous gardens, a throng of students, ample revenues, or a glorious history, none of these things were the portion of that old Catholic foundation; nothing in short which to the common eye sixty years ago would have given tokens of what it was to be."—NEWMAN.

134. A sentence may be made coherent by the omission of unnecessary words. (See Rule 40.)

Omission of unnecessary words

Wrong: About my grandfather, there are several stories that I should like to relate concerning him.

Right: There are several stories that I should like to relate concerning my grandfather; [or] I should like to relate several stories concerning my grandfather.

Wrong: There were many of us went before the meeting was over.

Right: Many of us went before the meeting was over.

EMPHASIS

135. Emphasis in the sentence means the arrangement of the parts of the sentence to make upon the reader a forceful impression. Emphasis, however, must never be gained at the expense of coherence.

General principle

136. Emphasis may be gained by putting words out of their usual order, which in English is subject, predicate, object.

Transposition

Emphatic: Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

Emphatic: Understand her you cannot.

NOTE. — Transposition should be used sparingly in prose. Because it is a violation of the usual English order, its frequent use gives the effect of artificiality.

137. For the sake of emphasis and clearness a modifier of a clause may often with advantage be inserted within the clause it modifies rather than placed before or after.

Parenthetical position of modifiers

Clear and forcible: If, after all that has been said, you still hesitate, I despair of persuading you.

Parenthetical
position of therefore,
however,
etc.

138. For the sake of beginning the sentence with words that deserve distinction, it is often advantageous to place however, therefore, nevertheless, moreover, also, and the like, within the sentences they introduce rather than at the beginning. Such words should be placed early in the sentence, so that their qualifying effect is seen at first glance.

Less emphatic: His master was always very kind to him. However, his master's wife was altogether too parsimonious.

Better: His master was always very kind to him. His master's wife, however, was altogether too parsimonious.

Inferior: The study of birds is fascinating. It requires a great deal of patience, however.

Better: The study of birds is fascinating. It requires, however, a great deal of patience.

NOTE. — This caution includes such expressions as I think and it seems to me. Do not place these particles and expressions at the ends of clauses.

Bad: There is another use for this machine, I think.

Right: There is, I think, another use for this machine.

Strong
close

139. For force, close sentences strongly; put unimportant phrases elsewhere than at the end. Transforming a loose sentence into a periodic sentence — one in which the main clause is not completed until the end — is an effective means of securing emphasis.

Inferior: Then he would return to work, whistling a merry tune all the while.

Better: Then he would return to work, all the while whistling a merry tune.

Inferior: He said nothing, but kept looking at my neck for some reason or other.

Better: He said nothing, but for some reason or other kept looking at my neck.

Loose: We were drenched to the skin in spite of our rubber coats before we had gone a hundred yards through the wet grass and underbrush that covered the hillside.

Loose but satisfactory: Before we had gone a hundred yards through the wet grass and underbrush that covered the hillside, we were drenched to the skin in spite of our rubber coats.

Periodic: Before we had gone a hundred yards through the wet grass and underbrush that covered the hillside, in spite of our rubber coats we were drenched to the skin.

NOTE. — The foregoing rule does not concern a matter of correct or incorrect practice, but merely a matter of greater or less rhetorical effectiveness. The common belief that a sentence ending with a preposition is on that account incorrect is a mistake; such sentences abound in good literature; e.g.:

A sentence ending with a preposition

"I will not say that the meaning of Shakespeare's names . . . may be entirely lost sight of." — ARNOLD.

"M. Planche's advantage is . . . that there is a force of cultivated opinion for him to appeal to." — ARNOLD.

Moreover, such sentences, as Professor Hill remarks, "do not contravene the principle which forbids a writer to throw stress on unimportant words; for . . . the stress is thrown, not on the last word, but on the next to the last."

140. A series of assertions or modifiers noticeably varying in strength should be placed in climactic order, unless the writer intends to make an anticlimax for the sake of humor.

Climactic
order

Weak: I think that the characters are well drawn, the diction is stately and beautiful, and the plot is very interesting.

Improved: I think that the plot is very interesting, the characters are well drawn, and the diction is stately and beautiful.

Weak: He proved himself to be mercilessly cruel at times, unforgiving, and discourteous.

Improved: He proved himself to be unforgiving, discourteous, and at times mercilessly cruel.

Upside-down
subordination

141. Do not put a logically principal statement in a subordinate clause and the logically subordinate statement in the principal clause unless there is some good reason for such inversion.

Bad: I was walking down State Street yesterday when I came upon a crowd of people gathered about a horse that had fallen down.

Right: As I was walking down State Street yesterday I came upon a crowd of people, etc.

Bad: The thoughts of the engineer turned toward the home he was approaching when suddenly he saw the glare of fire on the track ahead.

Right: The thoughts of the engineer turned toward the home he was approaching. Suddenly he saw the glare of fire on the track ahead.

Bad: Having finished their work, they began to talk about former good times when one of the fellows suggested that they haze Nicholson.

Right: Having finished their work, they began to talk about former good times. Presently one of the fellows suggested that they haze Nicholson.

Balanced
sentence

142. Emphasis may be gained by using the balanced sentence. (See Rule 115.)

Emphatic: Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

Emphatic: "He is patient, forbearing, and resigned, on philosophical principles; he submits to pain, because it is inevitable, to bereavement, because it is irreparable, and to death, because it is his destiny." — NEWMAN.

NOTE. — Antithesis or contrast may be used for emphasis.

Emphatic: "The Puritans hated bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators." — MACAULAY.

143. Emphasis may be gained by proportion. Proportion Greater space should be given to the more important statement in a sentence. Proportion, however, may be used more effectively in larger units of discourse than the sentence.

(Emphasis upon less important details.) Then came my first glimpse of the Pacific Ocean — a sight I should never have had except for my uncle's thoughtfulness and generosity in asking me to join him and his family on their trip to the coast.

144. Emphasis may be gained by cutting out unnecessary words. Excision
(See Rules 39–41.)

Unemphatic: The happiest memories that I retain from my childhood are the memories that center about the summers that I spent on my grandfather's farm. (24 words)

Improved: My happiest childhood memories are of the summers spent on my grandfather's farm. (13 words)

145. Emphasis may be gained by the repetition of important words. Repetition
(See Rules 56–59.)

Emphatic repetition: When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

Fairly emphatic: I am not afraid of the dark, nor of high places; nor am I frightened by animals. I dread a monster more intangible than any of these — Fear of Fear.

Emphatic: I am not afraid of the dark, nor of high places; nor am I afraid of animals. I am afraid of a monster more intangible than any of these — Fear of Fear.

EXERCISE 1

Revise such of the following sentences as you find un- Unity unified, stating in each case the rule that applies. State also your reason for considering any sentence unified.

1. John Brown can be denied admission to the senate. (Because each house is sole judge as to the qualifications of its own members, 2. We found the tourist camp at Meadville very comfortable, so we stayed there for a week. 3. The collapse was due to the undermining of the stratum and the vibrations caused by the cars had dislodged the walls. 4. The pace-maker led the motors around the track. Then gave the signal, and in a whirl of dust and with the loud roaring of the engines, they were off. 5. I felt very tired and jaded so I could not listen very attentively. 6. In this house there were fourteen other boys besides myself and we all slept in a dormitory, so it was nearly impossible to get any sleep at all. 7. Factory workers should not use alcoholic drinks because they will not be able to operate the machines because alcohol affects their nervous systems. 8. When you once got your first schedule made out, you thought that you were sitting on the top of the world,*but usually your first schedule would not be right, then that meant walking back and getting a new schedule to make out. 9. With the first indication of snow in the winter, our boots were to be tallowed and old bobsleds to be renovated; on especially hot days during the summers, I would lie out on the grass in my bathing suit while my grandfather would sprinkle the hose on my back; autumn was a time for leave burning, when great piles of leaves were raked together and stuffed with potatoes. 10. When a person reaches the age when he is out of college, he appreciates what it is to be young.

11. I had my schedule checked and signed. I then went to the Auditorium. The Auditorium was the place where I had my fees assessed. I paid my fees at the Administration Building. 12. Of course there are many different types of people in this world, but if I had to make a living at the fishing trade, I fear that I should soon have to go without a living or go begging, for I could not stand to be anchored on some body of water and wait for my profits to come in to me in such a slow manner. Especially with the luck that I know I should have. 13. After I graduated from high school, my father wanted me to come to college, but I wished to earn some money to help pay my expenses, but since I could not find any work to do,

I decided to do as my father wished. 14. When one has something that must be prepared for the next day, such as a mathematics lesson, and one keeps putting it off early in the evening until later, in order to do some foolish thing, and then finally in the end lets it go entirely, he has wasted a valuable evening. 15. Although we were somewhat annoyed by the encroachments of the sand upon our picnic lunch, we were able, by a careful and judicious selection of such fruits as apricots, loquats, guavas, or bananas (which were air-tight and thus nearly sand-proof), to arrange uncommonly palatable lunches for these occasions. 16. We found the townspeople very cordial. The business opportunities were promising, but we had to leave because of my mother's health. 17. It is the three men who love the beautiful girl who gives her name to the novel who really matter. 18. In high school I was one of the smallest of the fellows. I could not take part in athletics until my junior year. I have always been called "Shorty." I am still called "Shorty," and I shall always be called "Shorty." Therein lies my first great grievance with the world. 19. It must have been the winter that I was nine that I conceived the idea that I did not belong to my parents, but that I was a gypsy child given to them for safe-keeping and another band was intent upon my life, and on dull winter evenings, when I delivered the milk, every dark corner was full of terror, and for protection I carried rocks in my pocket, and even slipped two of mother's paring knives into my belt.

20. New states generally come into existence by breaking off from an actually existing state, and although recognition even in such cases is a normal act, quite compatible with the maintenance of peaceful intercourse with the mother-country, provided the new community has actually won its contest and successfully maintained its independence and separate existence, authorities agree that premature recognition is a wrong done to the parent state, that it amounts to an act of intervention, and that it may properly be considered by the parent state as a cause for war. 21. It was pitch dark. I felt my way along the wall to the stairs. So far, so good. I took one step, two steps. The third step creaked. 22. The style of writing used in this book is new and is destined to last, for this biography is not mere cut and dried facts, but the real life of a man told with sympathy and understanding, so that one forgets that it is a biography one is reading and not a novel with a fictitious hero. 23. The appreciation of the beautiful in life consists mainly of being able to see objects in their broadest relationship with the rest of the world. That is, when a man is able to see that in the changing seasons of the year, or the falling of the leaf, the symbol of the changes in his own life, he then has acquired that attitude which we may call the appreciation of the beautiful. 24. When I was a small boy, there was a boy who lived in our neighborhood whose parents gave him a great deal of money to spend and he spent it very recklessly.

EXERCISE 2

Coherence

Rewrite the following sentences to make them coherent. State in each case the rule that applies.

1. Indications of gold quartz were found recently while drilling for piling. 2. A little child, who has never been around a stove, does not learn not to touch it until he has experienced the result of it. 3. This primarily was the reason for my coming to college this fall, in order to fit myself to pursue work in engineering in which I am very much interested. 4. I entered college with the intention of continuing my education and to develop higher standards. 5. Having heard a great deal about the wonderful properties of the waters of Great Salt Lake, I determined to take a plunge into them. 6. In the remote past, perhaps millions of years ago, geologists say that a small flowing stream that gradually grew into a rivulet and then into a river through the natural processes of erosion gradually cut through these table lands of Arizona, forming canyons. 7. On the whole the camper's life is interesting, but the preparation of the ideal camper's dinner is a much more interesting process. 8. Most of us have had certain religious doctrines taught us when we were children and which our parents' parents taught to them generation after generation. 9. Because it was near the center of the state, the capitol was located in Springfield. 10. Instead of legislative caucuses nominating the candidates, the people had a more direct influence on the convention.

11. Soon I was traveling at a fine rate, but the sled hit a bump and ended the ride. 12. Carl promised his father to give up smoking, though he did not object very much. 13. Some people read College Humor while in high school and think that college life is the only life; that is, have a good time while you are there. 14. The title of the book is stamped on the back, but when it is small, it is sometimes abbreviated. 15. I never was able for a long time to understand how the salmon could jump up the falls. 16. Small boys can earn money very easily. Take for instance, I have a chum at home who used to deliver newspapers. 17. When I had to sleep on the ground, I did it, but it was often rocky and uncomfortable. 18. His hardest job now was to sell his milk and cream which were superior to the other dairy. 19. It was only a short time when he had his former position back. 20. The reason for my choosing this subject is on account of the rôle it played while attending high school.

21. The broker's business is a lucrative one, but I should not want to be one of them. 22. Nobody knew why Molly hated her roommate so, who was never known to be on bad terms with anybody else. 23. The first time a boy smokes is when he is in company with some other boys who have dared him to smoke. 24. After an hour's delay and seeing that we were not the guilty persons, we were permitted to continue on our way. 25. I became very much discouraged and threatened to give up trying to complete my registration, but after battling on for several hours, I finally found myself going through the last of the mêlée, for which I was very thankful. 26. The student hopes to be able to do his work satisfactorily, to participate in college activities, to make the freshman scholastic fraternity, and many other things that belong to college life. 27. A player may "dribble" with the ball; that is, bouncing it on the floor just in front of you as you proceed down the floor. 28. Fred took the last piece of cake on the plate. This was more than his brother could stand. 29. It is generally known that he wrote the book, but it has never been acknowledged by him. 30. His uncle gave him a position on his newspaper every summer, thus helping him earn his way through the university.

31. I saw immediately that she was one of these particular people. 32. I believe that I could get more out of this book if I were to read it again than I did this time. 33. It is said that the reason people do not like it is because the book portrays their life. 34. The book is among his best writings because it contains very rich humor as well as its good literary form. 35. Another example of the truthfulness of this old proverb, which I witnessed, happened when I moved from a small country village to a much larger town. 36. The men had been bribed to "throw" a series of ball games to another club, thereby losing the world's title. 37. I believe that the American fans are intelligent enough to realize that baseball players on the whole are honest, and that the game is played on the square; that if there was any crookedness it was among a few men and these men will be found out and punished accordingly. 38. Kelly played pool, cards, and loafed around town until the day of the race, which was the most perfect example of overconfidence and foolishness one could see. 39. In making chili sauce the consistency of the final product depends a good deal on the way the vegetables are cut up. 40. You stand gazing at this highly polished piece of furniture, a thing of beauty in itself, being hardly capable of realizing that it is made from a few of the roughest kind of boards.

EXERCISE 3

General
exercise in emphasis

Rewrite the following sentences to make them emphatic. State in each case the rule that applies.

1. You ought to apologize, I think. 2. We were driving on the Lincoln Highway, when suddenly we saw a blaze of light ahead. 3. He was gaunt with hunger, dirty, and unshaven. 4. If one will take good care of his health while he is young, he will have good health when he is old without doubt. 5. We came upon some fresh deer tracks after we had traveled for about two hours. 6. We had gone only a short distance from the camp, when all of a sudden we heard shots fired in quick succession. 7. Fishing is the best of sports in my estimation. 8. I believe that this teacher was liked by all students because he was tolerant, for students admire fairness and tolerance for the limitations of others and consequently they liked this teacher who possessed these traits. 9. The majority of freshmen arriving at college have been informed by friends or parents about what to do and what not to do when they reach college. 10. The first few days the freshman is too busy to think seriously, but his first spell of homesickness is sure to come after he is settled. 11. I enjoy my French class very much. I find the work rather hard, however. 12. The four of them shared their fortunes from that time on. 13. New associates and new surroundings influence the college student to a great extent. 14. Last night I dreamt that it was an October evening, and that I was driving slowly along a country road, watching the sun setting behind the woods almost in front of me. My attention was drawn to a homestead when the sun was almost hid. 15. The natural impulse of every boy is to adore great strength or ability along some particular line. 16. It is a general belief that hockey is a game difficult to master, needing unlimited courage and bravery on the part of the individuals participating. This, as I found out immediately after becoming acquainted with this fascinating and healthful outdoor sport, is a false conception of the real nature of the game, however. 17. Prior to the year 1919, baseball was approaching the height of its career. 18. Babbitt may not become as great a figure in literature as some, but I think that he will be known and recognized to a certain extent. 19. As soon as my mother looked the other way, I began reaching for the fish bowl, and finally my arm stretched long enough for me to reach the fish bowl containing the fish and I dragged it off of the table killing the fish and breaking the bowl. 20. The voices were melodiously inarticulate; there was no end of colored silks, basketry, and lacquered boxes; fish markets, tea shops, and a hundred others, in which we could see no particular purpose, were extremely well loaded and stocked.

THE PARAGRAPH

MECHANICAL MARKS OF A PARAGRAPH

- Indentation:
Of ordinary paragraphs 146. In manuscript the first line of every paragraph should be indented at least an inch. (See Plate II, line 1, p. 249.)
- Of
numbered paragraphs 147. No exception to the foregoing rule should be made when paragraphs are numbered.
- Wrong:
- I. What power has Congress to punish crimes?
 - II. State in what cases the Supreme Court has original jurisdiction.
 - III. How are presidential electors chosen? Would it be constitutional for a State legislature to choose them?
- Right:
- I. What power has Congress to punish crimes?
 - II. State in what cases the Supreme Court has original jurisdiction.
 - III. How are presidential electors chosen? Would it be constitutional for a State legislature to choose them?
- Irregular
indentation 148. The first lines of all paragraphs should begin at the same distance from the margin; do not indent the beginning of one paragraph an inch, that of another two inches, that of another half an inch, etc.
- Incorrect
indentation 149. Only the first line of a prose paragraph should be indented, except for special reasons; as for instance in 349-351.
- Incorrect
spacing out 150. After the end of a sentence do not leave the remainder of the line blank unless the sentence ends a paragraph; begin the next sentence on the same line, if there is room. This rule is violated in Plate I, line 4, p. 248.

DIVISION OF A COMPOSITION INTO PARAGRAPHS

Paragraphing as an Aid to Clearness

151. Paragraphing, if properly employed, gives the reader as much assistance in understanding a whole composition as punctuation gives him in understanding a sentence. Parts of a composition that are distinct in topic may by paragraphing be made distinct to the eye also — an effect that promotes clearness. For instance, suppose an essay on Queen Elizabeth discusses three topics: (1) Elizabeth's personal character, (2) her character as a ruler, and (3) her popularity with her subjects. To embody the three passages corresponding to these three topics in separate paragraphs makes evident at once the beginning and the end of each passage, and thus enables the reader to grasp without effort the structure of the essay.

The fundamental principle

152. A passage entirely distinct in topic from what precedes and follows should be written as a separate paragraph.

(i) Paragraphing of distinct parts

Thus, suppose an essay on gasoline engines presents —

(m) An explanation of the operation of gasoline engines.

(n) An estimate of gasoline engines as compared with other kinds of engines.

Parts m and n should be embodied in separate paragraphs. Suppose a story tells —

(m) The hero's visit to the bank and his transactions there.

- (n) What was happening meanwhile at the hero's factory.

Parts m and n should be embodied in separate paragraphs.

Paragraphs
of introduction
and conclusion

153. A passage that serves as an introduction or a conclusion to a composition consisting of several paragraphs should be paragraphed separately, even if it consists of only one or two sentences.

Correct paragraphing:

The large body of recent State legislation compelling railway companies to reduce passenger fares, though it probably sprang from good intentions, is likely to have three unfortunate consequences.

[The main body of the essay consists of three paragraphs, each discussing one of the three unfortunate consequences.]

One cannot foretell, of course, how many years will elapse before these three results of the recent railway legislation will work themselves out; it may be five years, or it may be a dozen. But that they will sooner or later work themselves out seems, in the light of history, practically certain.

Paragraphs
of transition

154. A passage that serves merely to make a transition from one group of paragraphs to a following group should be paragraphed separately.

Correct paragraphing:

[The achievements of Macaulay as a man of letters are discussed for three or four paragraphs.]

Macaulay's political achievements, though less distinguished than his literary achievements, are worthy of a somewhat detailed notice.

[Two or three paragraphs follow, dealing with Macaulay's political career.]

NOTE. — A brief transition sentence may often be included in the paragraph which develops the new topic; it should not be tacked on to the paragraph preceding.

Correct:

[The need for audacious accuracy as a desirable quality in speech has been discussed for several paragraphs.]

Such audacious accuracy, however, distinguishing as it does noble speech from commonplace speech, can be practiced only by him who has a wide range of words. Our ordinary range of words is absurdly narrow. It is important, therefore, for anybody who would cultivate himself in English to make strenuous and systematic efforts to enlarge his vocabulary.

—G. H. PALMER.

[Then follow three paragraphs discussing range of vocabulary.] (Note that the transition sentence is included in the first paragraph on range of vocabulary, a few sentences of which are quoted.)

155. In narratives, as a rule, any direct quotation, together with the rest of the sentence of which it is a part, should be paragraphed separately.

Paraphrasing of direct quotations

Right:

There were no takers. Not a man believed him capable of the feat. Thornton had been hurried into the wager, heavy with doubt; and now that he looked at the sled itself, the concrete fact, with the regular team of ten dogs curled up in the snow before it, the more impossible the task appeared. Mathewson waxed jubilant.

"Three to one," he proclaimed. "I'll lay you another thousand at that figure, Thornton. What d'ye say?"

Thornton's doubt was strong in his face, but his fighting spirit was aroused — the fighting spirit that soars above odds, fails to recognize the impossible, and is deaf to all save the clamor for battle. He called Hans and Pete to him. Their sacks were . . .

156. Rule 155 should be especially observed in the report of a conversation; each speech, regardless of length, should be paragraphed separately.

Dialogue

Wrong:

"When did you arrive?" I asked. "An hour ago," he answered. "Didn't you get my letter?" "No." "Strange," he said.

Right:

"When did you arrive?" I asked.
 "An hour ago," he answered. "Didn't you get my letter?"
 "No."
 "Strange," he said.

Indention
after a
quotation

157. In order to paragraph an isolated quotation separately (as is done in the example under Rule 155), the line following the quotation must be indented.

Indention
in the midst of a sentence

158. A quotation may be detached by paragraphing from the introductory expression (e.g., he said) if this expression precedes it.

Right:

Mr. Peggotty looked around upon us and nodding his head with a lively expression animating his face said in a whisper,

"She's been thinking of the old 'un." — DICKENS.

But a quotation should not be so detached from the introductory expression if the quotation does not close the sentence.

Wrong:

Thinking I could stand it if my friend could, I called out to him,

"Come on. Who's afraid?" and started into the house.

Wrong:

Thinking I could stand it if my friend could, I called out to him,

"Come on. Who's afraid?"
 and started into the house.

Right:

Thinking I could stand it if my friend could, I called out to him, "Come on. Who's afraid?" and started into the house.

159. When several consecutive short passages present slightly different topics, yet collectively form a larger division of a composition, the distinctness and unity of the whole division should be made apparent, rather than the individuality of its parts. Hence these short passages should not be written each in a separate paragraph, but should be combined into one paragraph.

(ii) Grouping of related parts

Thus in an essay on a steel factory, describing —

- (a) The process of sheet-rolling,
- (b) The process of rail-rolling,
- (c) The process of casting,

part b should not be written as follows:

Steel ingots six feet long and six inches square were heated to a white heat in a large oven.

When sufficiently hot, an ingot was removed and taken on an endless chain to the first set of rollers.

These rollers were eighteen inches in diameter. When the ingot had been passed through them, it was a bar of steel ten feet long and five inches thick.

Then the bar of steel was put on another endless chain and taken to a second pair of rollers.

This process was continued, the bar being passed successively through five or six pairs of rollers.

It came from the last pair a red-hot rail of standard size.

It was next bent slightly so that the base was convex. This was to allow for unequal contraction in cooling.

The rail was now left to cool.

When cold, it was taken to the cold rollers and rolled perfectly straight.

The foregoing passage should be written as a single paragraph; and so should part a and part c of the same essay.

(iii) Paragraphing where there is no change of topic

160. The beginning of a new paragraph naturally leads the reader to think that the discussion of a new topic is beginning. Therefore, to begin a new paragraph where the discussion of a new topic does not begin misleads the reader.

The paragraphing in the following passage, for example, is illogical and objectionable:

The beauty of Fra Angelico's character has been the admiration of all who ever studied the life of that devout and gentle artist. He might have lived in ease and comfort, for his art would have made him rich; instead, he chose the cloister life. Fra Angelico was gentle and kindly to all.

He was never seen to display anger and if he admonished his friends, it was with mildness. . . .

In this passage, the discussion of the gentleness of Fra Angelico begins in the sentence "Fra Angelico was gentle," etc.; the sentence "He was never," etc., continues the discussion of this topic — does not introduce a new topic. Hence, there should be no paragraph division where one now stands; the sentence "He was never," etc., should follow without a break.

LENGTH OF PARAGRAPHS

Paragraphs too long

161. Extended composition or passages in the text with no paragraph-breaks may strain the reader's attention; shorter paragraphs give him more frequent opportunity to summarize the thought. A passage more than 300 words long, even if it constitutes a single unit of composition, should usually not be written as a single paragraph, but should be divided into two or three paragraphs of convenient length (i.e., not longer than 200 words).

Thus, an essay on Lincoln, presenting —

1. A narrative of his life (350 words)
2. An estimate of his greatness (100 words) should not be written as two paragraphs corresponding to the two main divisions of the material, but should be paragraphed in some such way as the following:

- ¶ Events of life up to 1860 (200 words)
- ¶ Career as president (150 words)
- ¶ Estimate of his greatness (100 words)

162. Overfrequent paragraphing indicates either a lack of development or a failure to see the relationship of the thoughts. Hence, a composition no longer than 150 words should usually be written without any paragraph divisions.

Over-
frequent paragraphing

163. A sentence or a short passage which the writer wishes to make especially emphatic may be paragraphed separately.

Sentences
made conspicuous by detachment

Thus, in the following passage the italicized part does not require to be paragraphed as being distinct from the preceding part; but it may properly be set apart for emphasis.

Indefinite narrative should not be entirely avoided; it is useful, and for some purposes is preferable to concrete narrative. Parts of a story that are not of dramatic interest, speeches that are of no interest or importance, — these may properly be conveyed by indefinite rather than by concrete narrative. But remember this:

Actions occurring at important points of a story should be related by concrete, not indefinite narrative.

UNITY

164. A paragraph, by its visible detachment from what precedes and follows, suggests the unity of the passage it embodies. A passage not logically consti-

Unity of a paragraph

tuting a unit should not be put into one paragraph and thus presented under the guise of unity. If the paragraph can be summarized completely in one unified sentence, then the paragraph is unified.

Ununified:

Snow tonight swept across many Big Ten gridirons. Illinois worked out strenuously for Ohio State, hoping to find the Buckeyes in a relapse after their keying for Michigan. A victory would enable Illinois to finish with a single loss. Ohio State regards the Michigan victory by one point as a bad break, the memory of which they hope to erase at Urbana Saturday.

Ununified:

History tells us that not many years ago, men, women, and children left their happy homes and wended their way across the plains and over the Rocky Mountains to the little streams of California in search of the precious metal, gold. Who of us, though, have ever heard of men making a rush for iron ore? Iron ore is found in many places in the United States; in fact it can be found in some quantity, whether small or large, in almost every state. The greatest deposit of iron ore is to be found in the Lake Superior region. Here the metal lies close to the surface while in almost all of the other regions the ore runs in small deep veins.

Unified:

The House and Senate are naturally unlike. They are different both in constitution and character. They do not represent the same things. The House of Representatives is by intention the popular chamber, meant to represent the people by direct election through an extensive suffrage, while the Senate was designed to represent the states as political units, as the constituent members of the Union. The terms of membership in the two houses, moreover, are different. The two chambers were unquestionably intended to derive their authority from different sources and to speak with different voices in affairs; and however much they may have departed from their original characters in the changeful processes of our politics, they still represent many sharp contrasts to one another, and must be described as playing, not the same but very distinct and dissimilar rôles in affairs.

— WOODROW WILSON.

165. A paragraph often contains a sentence that summarizes all the material in the paragraph. This sentence, the topic sentence, is frequently placed at the beginning of the paragraph. (Note the unified paragraph quoted in Rule 164.)

Topic
sentence

COHERENCE

166. The sentences in a paragraph should be so arranged that the thought progresses in logical sequence.

Arrangement of
sentences

Incoherent:

When I was a child, I was lured to water by an uncontrollable instinct. One day a friend and I set out in a canoe to paddle down the small river which flowed through our town. The movement of the water pressing steadily on and urging on our light boat fascinated me. We paddled for hours until we reached a part of the river that was unfamiliar to us. We had obtained a wonderful canoe, which fairly leaped over the water. At each turn of the bank of the stream, we craned our necks to see what was coming. As the world drifted by us, we stared at the unfamiliar sights. We had a wonderful trip, but of course we suffered for our fun when we reached home. The canoe had been taken without the owner's permission.

Improved:

When I was a child, I was lured to water by an uncontrollable instinct. One day a friend and I set out in a canoe, which we had borrowed without the owner's permission, and paddled down the small river flowing through our town. I was fascinated by the movement of the water pressing steadily on and urging on our light boat. The canoe, a good one, fairly leaped over the water. At each turn of the bank of the stream, we craned our necks to see what was coming. As the world drifted by us, we stared at the unfamiliar sights. We had a wonderful trip, but, of course, we suffered for our fun when we reached home.

Transitional
words and
phrases

167. The relationship between the sentences in a paragraph may be made clear by the use of transitional words. (See Appendix D.)

Coherent:

That the state of nature, at any time, is a temporary phase of a process of incessant change, which has been going on for innumerable ages, appears to me to be a proposition as well established as any in modern history. Paleontology assures us, in addition, that the ancient philosophers who, with less reason, held the same doctrine, erred in supposing that the phases formed a cycle, exactly repeating the past, exactly foreshadowing the future, in their rotations. On the contrary, it furnishes us with conclusive reasons for thinking that, if every link in the ancestry of these humble indigenous plants had been preserved and were accessible to us, the whole would present a converging series of forms of gradually diminishing complexity, until at some period in the history of the earth, far more remote than any of which organic remains have yet been discovered, they would merge in those low groups among which the boundaries between animal and vegetable life become effaced. — T. H. HUXLEY.

Filling in a gap in thought

168. A paragraph may sometimes be made coherent by filling in a gap in the thought.

Incoherent:

The university, if it is to be a real exponent of a liberal education, must resist vigorously the modern tendency toward extracurricular activities of one kind or another. Athletics, literary societies, homecomings, foundation days have their place in college life and are valuable. Our stadium, costing about $2,000,000, seating about 70,000 persons, and rising from the prairie as a huge architectural monstrosity, is now for several months of the year the center of university thought and activity. Vast throngs are attracted to our community, but no one of these has any thought for the real function of the university. There are wild demonstrations of loyalty for the team and the institution, but little or no interest in academic work. A university must be built on something more substantial than college songs, class cheers, and sentimental loyalty.

Improved:

The university, if it is to be the real exponent of a liberal education, must resist vigorously the modern tendency toward extracurricular activities of one kind or another. Athletics, literary societies, homecomings, foundation days have their place in college life and are valuable within certain limits, but they ought not to become the center of interest. Our stadium, costing about $2,000,000, seating about 70,000 persons, etc.

169. Coherence may be gained by the repetition of words at the close of one sentence and at the beginning of the next sentence.

Repetition
of words

Coherent:

. . . His conduct has, indeed, on some questions, been so Whiggish, that both those who applauded and those who condemned it have questioned his claim to be considered a Tory. But his Toryism, such as it is, he has held fast through all changes of fortune and fashion . . . — MACAULAY.

170. Coherence may be gained by arranging the members of a sentence so as to form close connection with the preceding sentence.

Ordering a sentence
with reference to the preceding
sentence

Inferior: He wished to examine the planet Mars, then in the western part of the sky. He began to turn the telescope in order to do this.

Better: He wished to examine the planet Mars, then in the western part of the sky. In order to do this, he began to turn the telescope.

Parallel
construction

171. Coherence may be gained by sentences parallel in form.

Coherent.

. . . The weakness of the modern Romantic poet is that he must keep himself aloof from life, that he may see it. He rejects authority, and many of the pleasures, along with the duties, of society. He looks out from his window on the men fighting in the plain, and sees them transfigured under the rays of the setting sun. He enjoys the battle, but not as the fighters enjoy it. He nurses himself in all the luxury of philosophic sensation. He does not help to bury the child, or to navigate the schooner, or to discover the Fortunate Islands. . . . — Sir WALTER RALEIGH.

EMPHASIS

Proportion

172. Emphasis may be placed upon the important idea in the paragraph by giving it more space than is given to the less important ideas.

Emphatic:

In this sense, silly folk and dullards think. The story is told of a man in slight repute for intelligence, who, desiring to be chosen selectman in his New England town, addressed a knot of neighbors in this wise: "I hear you don't believe I know enough to hold office. I wish you to understand that I am thinking about something or other most of the time." Now reflective thought is like this random coursing of things through the mind in that it consists of a succession of things thought of; but it is unlike, in that the mere chance occurrence of any chance "something or other" in an irregular sequence does not suffice. Reflection involves not simply a sequence of ideas, but a consequence — a consecutive ordering in such a way that each determines the next as its proper outcome, while each in turn leans back on its predecessors.

The successive portions of the reflective thought grow out of one another and support one another; they do not come and go in a medley. Each phase is a step from something to something — technically speaking, it is a term of thought. Each term leaves a deposit which is utilized in the next term. The stream or flow becomes a train, chain, or thread. — DEWEY.

173. Emphasis may be placed upon the important Position ideas in the paragraph by putting them at the beginning and at the end of the paragraph. Coherence, however, must not be sacrificed for the sake of emphasis.

Emphatic:

Pepys has, indeed, had full reward for all his pains. Since the appearance of his Diary in the first abbreviated form which printed scarcely half of its contents, much learned and loving labor has been spent on its elucidation. The ingenuity and industry of successive editors has enlarged our knowledge and understanding of the work; the two original volumes, what with inclusion of the parts at first suppressed and a great bulk of comment, have increased to ten. One editor has retranscribed the manuscript, another has compiled a book on Pepys and the world he lived in; the family genealogy has been unearthed and a study made of one of its members as "a later Pepys"; so far has the reflected glory shone. The diarist's early life has been laid bare; his letters published, with his will; his portraits reproduced; a whole book on Pepys as a lover of music has appeared; an essay on the sermons that he heard; even the medical aspects of his married life have been explained by a physician-author. Essayists and bookmakers still find in him an ever-fertile subject for their pens; no biographical dictionary or encyclopedia is without a full account of the great diarist; and rising finally to the full stature of a real biography, few names to-day in English literature are better known, few classics more widely read or more enjoyed. — W. C. ABBOTT.

Parallel
construction

174. Emphasis as well as coherence may be gained by sentences parallel in form. (See Rule 171.)

PARAGRAPH DEVELOPMENT

Methods of development

175. Develop the central thought of the paragraph as fully as is necessary for a clear understanding of the idea. The usual methods of paragraph development are: (a) definition, (b) illustration or example, (c) comparison or contrast, (d) generalization based upon particular facts and details, (e) repetition, (f) elimination, (g) relation of cause and effect, (h) combination of methods. The choice of method should of course depend upon one's material and purpose.

(a) Definition

Well, what I mean by Education is learning the rules of this mighty game. In other words, education is the instruction of the intellect in the laws of Nature, under which name I include not merely things and their forces but men and their ways; and the fashioning of the affections and of the will into an earnest and loving desire to move in harmony with those laws. For me education means neither more nor less than this. Anything which professes to call itself education must be tried by this standard, and if it fails to stand the test, I will not call it education, whatever may be the force of authority, or of numbers, upon the other side. — T. H. HUXLEY.

(b) Illustration or example

With the single exception of Falstaff, all Shakespeare's characters are what we call "marrying men." Mercutio, as he was own cousin to Benedick and Biron, would have come to the same end in the long run. Even Iago had a wife, and, what is far stranger, he was jealous. People like Jacques and the Fool in Lear, although we can hardly imagine they would ever marry, kept single out of a cynical humour or for a broken heart, and not, as we do nowadays, from a spirit of incredulity and preference for the single state. For that matter, if you turn to George Sand's French version of As You Like It (and I think I can promise you will like it but little), you will find Jacques marries Celia just as Orlando marries Rosalind.

— STEVENSON.

(c) Comparison or contrast

See the exquisite contrast of the types of mind! The pragmatist clings to facts and concreteness, observes truth at its work in particular cases, and generalizes. Truth, for him, becomes a class-name for all sorts of definite working-values in experience. For the rationalist it remains a pure abstraction, to the bare name of which we must defer. When the pragmatist undertakes to show in detail just why we must defer, the rationalist is unable to recognize the concretes from which his own abstraction is taken. He accuses us of denying truth; whereas we have only sought to trace exactly why people follow it and always ought to follow it. Your typical ultra-abstractionist fairly shudders at concreteness: other things equal, he positively prefers the pale and spectral. If the two universes were offered, he would always choose the skinny outline rather than the rich thicket of reality. It is so much purer, clearer, nobler. — WILLIAM JAMES.

(d) Generalization based upon particular facts and details

The want of serious and sustained thinking is not confined to politics. One feels it even more as regards economical and social questions. To it must be ascribed the vitality of certain prejudices and fallacies which could scarcely survive the continuous application of such vigorous minds as one finds among the Americans. Their quick perceptions serve them so well in business and in the ordinary affairs of private life that they do not feel the need for minute investigation and patient reflection on the underlying principles of things. They are apt to ignore difficulties, and when they can no longer ignore them, they will evade them rather than lay siege to them according to the rules of art. The sense that there is not time to spare haunts an American even when he might find the time, and would do best for himself by finding it.

— JAMES BRYCE.

(e) Repetition

With all this in mind, I have often been tempted to put forth the paradox that any place is good enough to live a life in, while it is only in a few, and those highly favored, that we can pass a few hours agreeably. For, if we only stay long enough, we become at home in the neighborhood. Reminiscences spring up, like flowers, about uninteresting corners. We forget to some degree the superior loveliness of other places, and fall into a tolerant and sympathetic spirit which is its own reward and justification. Looking back the other day on some recollections of my own, I was astonished to find how much I owed to such a residence; six weeks in one unpleasant country-side had done more, it seemed, to quicken and educate my sensibilities than many years in places that jumped more nearly with my inclination. — STEVENSON.

(f) Elimination (Note how the author first tells what peace is not meant, and then what peace is meant.)

The proposition is peace. Not peace through the medium of war; not peace to be hunted through the labyrinth of intricate and endless negotiations; not peace to arise out of universal discord fomented, from principle, in all parts of the empire; not peace to depend on the juridical determinations of perplexing questions, or the precise marking of the shadowy boundaries of a complex government. It is simple peace; sought in its natural course, and in its ordinary haunts. It is peace sought in the spirit of peace, and laid in principles purely pacific. I propose, by removing the ground of the difference, and by restoring the former unsuspecting confidence of the colonies in the Mother Country, to give permanent satisfaction to your people; and (far from a scheme of ruling by discord) to reconcile them to each other in the same act and by the bond of the very same interest which reconciles them to British government. — EDMUND BURKE.

(g) Relation of cause and effect

Those who accepted the traditional views of the world and of religion, and opposed change, were quite justified in suspecting that scientific investigation would sooner or later make them trouble. It taught men to distrust, and even to scorn, the past which furnished so many instances of ignorance and gross superstition. Instead of accepting the teachings of the theologians, both Catholic and Protestant, that mankind through Adam's fall was rendered utterly vile, and incapable (except through God's special grace) of good thoughts or deeds, certain thinkers began to urge that man was by nature good; that he should freely use his own God-given reason; that he was capable of becoming increasingly wise by a study of nature's laws, and that he could indefinitely better his own condition and that of his fellows if he would but free himself from the shackles of error and superstition. Those who had broadened their views of mankind and of the universe came to believe that God had revealed himself not only to the Jewish people but also, in greater or less degree, to all his creatures in all ages and in all parts of a boundless universe where everything was controlled by his immutable laws. — J. A. ROBINSON and C. A. BEARD.

(h) Combination of methods

Nature seems to have apportioned the voices of many of her creatures with sensitive regard for their environment. [Generalization.] Sombre voices seem fittingly to be associated with subdued light, and joyous notes with the blaze of sunlit twigs and open meadows. [Repetition, contrast.] A bobolink's bubbling carol is unthinkable in a jungle, and the strain of a wood pewee on a sunny hillside would be like an organ playing dance-music. [Illustration, contrast.] This is even more pronounced in the tropics, where, quite aside from any mental association on my part, the voices and calls of the jungle reflect the qualities of that twilight world. [Repetition.] The poor-me-one proves too much. He is the very essence of night, his wings edged with velvet silence, his plumage the mingled concentration of moss and lichens and dead wood. [Illustration.]

— WILLIAM BEEBE.

EXERCISE 1

Paragraph
division

Apply the principles of paragraph division to the following passages. Give the reasons for your paragraph division.

1. "Mr. Blaize! I have come to tell you that I am the person who set fire to your rick the other night." An odd contraction formed about the farmer's mouth. He changed his posture, and said, "Ay? that's what ye're come to tell me, sir?" "Yes!" said Richard, firmly. "And that be all?" "Yes!" Richard reiterated. The farmer again changed his posture. "Then, my lad, ye've come to tell me a lie!" Farmer Blaize looked straight at the boy, undismayed by the dark flush of ire he had kindled. "You dare to call me a liar!" cried Richard, starting up. "I say," the farmer renewed his first emphasis, and smacked his thigh thereto, "that's a lie!" — MEREDITH.

2. "Get up! Get up! It's five o'clock already." Those horrible, harsh words! Father was already pulling at the covers. I crawled out of bed with one eye shut trying to keep enough sleep to finish the dream I had started. I shivered as I mechanically pulled on my clothes. In one corner of the cold, bleak room Father was helping a grumbling cart man make the bed rolls, while Mother was packing a few last things into the suit-case near by. I wished they would hurry. I wanted to get into the cart and go to sleep again. Drowsily I walked out where the disgruntled cart drivers were yelling at sleepy bullocks, and I shivered again as the damp night air struck me, bearing the pungent odors of feeding cattle and fresh-burnt jungle. Would we ever be where I could sleep as long as I wanted? After what seemed an interminable time, the carts bumped off squeaking shrilly to one another, and my brother and I cuddled down in ours for a short nap. Such is the beginning of a day's travel in the jungle. And were this all jungle trips would be pretty dismal affairs. Dawn, however, changes things. We were both wide awake now. As we clambered out of the bumpy old cart and ran on ahead of it, the sun peeped through a notch in the hills and shot a golden ray into the valley throwing long, lean shadows across the basin and transforming dull sodden bushes into clusters of sparkling diamonds. At the touch of that golden wand heavy mists lifted from the valleys, birds began to chirp, and life in the forest awakened. Gradually nature changed her gray nightgown for a gay morning frock. My brother and I walked on ahead of the cart a short distance with the little twenty-two rifle. At this time of the day every kind of bird came out on the cart road to eat the paddy which has dropped from bullock carts. We walked briskly along taking pot shots at doves whenever they showed themselves too plainly. This was not our prime interest, however, for we knew that jungle chickens abounded in this district. After fifteen minutes of cautious walking, we saw a cock. He was feeding with his head toward us and started to run when my brother raised the gun. The shot staggered him, but instead of falling dead, as any shot chicken should do, he commenced turning summersaults in the direction of the jungle. Excitedly we followed him through closely knit brambles, over a little hummock, and into a rocky gully. Suddenly there was a strange noise. My brother heard it too, and stopped beating around in the underbrush. The first thought that entered my mind was tigers, for had we not heard at the last bungalow of a horse's being killed the night before? Louder and louder grew the noise till it was a pulsating, guttural roar. Fear gripped me like a vice. Flight I was sure would lead me straight into the snarling jaws of that tiger. Silence might save me. Terror-stricken I watched my brother, who was grimly loading the rifle with the largest shell he had. The sky darkened a little and I forced myself to look up. There, sweeping powerfully over the tree tops, was a flock of horn-bills, and with every stroke of their wings came a loud whirl. I was so taken back that I grew limp all over and let out a quavering "Oh!" Eventually we collected our scattered wits and started after the cart, completely forgetting the jungle chicken. But what of that? We were both alive. The rest of the morning we hung pretty closely to the cart.

EXERCISE 2

Paragraph
unity

Decide whether each of the following paragraphs is unified. If it is unified, you should find in the paragraph, or be able to formulate, a topic sentence. (See Rule 20.)

1. Regularly it is said for the smaller denominational college that the student has the advantage of closer contact with his teachers, that in the university those contacts are rare, or, if made, are with men in the lower ranks only, who are neither well trained nor much interested in the welfare of the student. It is true, I suppose, that in the smaller colleges practically the whole of the student body knows the whole of the faculty; it is not true, however, that there are no opportunities for such contacts in the large university. As the number of students grows, as the curricula expand, it becomes obviously impossible for any single teacher to have intimate contact with any considerable number of the whole student body; but relatively I venture to say that the direct and indirect influence of the outstanding faculty men may be very nearly, if not quite, as important at the university as at the college. In fact, the university generally requires more of its faculty in that respect than does the college. Offices are provided, regular and frequent consultation hours are required, there is faculty coöperation with and supervision of almost every sort of activity, public lectures are given, and in numerous ways contacts are maintained. As a rule, classes are smaller at the university than at the college, the instructor has a lighter class schedule, and he can therefore devote himself the more to the particular interests of the individual students. In this respect, therefore, it is not certain that the small college is superior to the large university.

2. The Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station has by means of selection developed a variety of wheat that is highly rust-resistant in Kansas, but it is a poor-yield wheat. This wheat, moreover, is not rust-resistant when it is grown in all the wheat-growing regions of the United States.

The Marquis and Hayne Bluestem when grown in the South are rust-resistant, while the native soft wheat is very susceptible to rust. Native southern wheat is famous for making the best pastry flour, which will sell on the market for about forty cents a bushel more because of this quality. No one variety of wheat now known is rust-resistant to all forms of rust occurring within the United States. The problem is a local or regional one, and the varieties should be selected with this fact in mind.

3. Every promise of the soul has innumerable fulfillments; each of its joys ripens into a new want. Nature, uncontainable, flowing, forelooking, in the first sentiment of kindness anticipates already a benevolence which shall lose all particular regards in its general light. The introduction to this felicity is in a private and tender relation of one to one, which is the enchantment of human life; which, like a certain divine rage and enthusiasm, seizes on man at one period and works a revolution in his mind and body; unites him to his race, pledges him to the domestic and civic relations, carries him with new sympathy into nature, enhances the power of the senses, opens the imagination, adds to his character heroic and sacred attributes, establishes marriage, and gives permanence to human society. — EMERSON.

EXERCISE 3

(a) Find the topic sentences in the following paragraphs. (b) Show how the material in the paragraphs is made coherent and emphatic. (c) Point out the various methods by which the paragraphs are developed.

Unity,
coherence,
and
emphasis

1. . . . I venture very humbly to think that any one who, even at the age of Cato, wants to learn Greek, should begin where Greek literature, where all profane literature begins — with Homer himself. It was thus, not with grammars in vacuo, that the great scholars of the Renaissance began. It was thus that Ascham and Rabelais began, by jumping into Greek and splashing about till they learned to swim. First, of course, a person must learn the Greek characters. Then his or her tutor may make him read a dozen lines of Homer, marking the cadence, the surge and thunder of the hexameters — a music which, like that of the Sirens, few can hear without being lured to the seas and isles of song. Then the tutor might translate a passage of moving interest, like Priam's appeal to Achilles; first, of course, explaining the situation. Then the teacher might go over some lines, minutely pointing out how the Greek words are etymologically connected with many words in English. Next, he might take a substantive and a verb, showing roughly how their inflections arose and were developed, and how they retain forms in Homer which do not occur in later Greek. There is no reason why even this part of the lesson should be uninteresting. By this time a pupil would know, more or less, where he was, what Greek is, and what the Homeric poems are like. He might thus believe from the first that there are good reasons for knowing Greek; that it is the key to many worlds of life, of action, of beauty, of contemplation, of knowledge. Then, after a few more exercises in Homer, the grammar being judiciously worked in along with the literature of the epic, a teacher might discern whether it was worth while for his pupils to continue in the study of Greek. Homer would be their guide into the "realms of gold." — ANDREW LANG.

2. The origin of language is an unsolved problem. It was once supposed that man was created a talking animal; that is to say, that he could speak immediately on his creation, through a special faculty inherent in his very nature. Some scholars maintained that our first parents were instructed in the rudiments of speech by God himself, or that language in esse was a gift bestowed by the deity immediately after Adam was created. Along with these opinions went, in former times, the opinion that Hebrew, the language of the Jewish Scriptures, was the primitive tongue of mankind. None of these views are now in favor, either with theologians or with philologists. However we conceive the first man to have come into existence, we are forced to believe that language as we know it was a human invention. Not language itself, but the inherent power to frame and develop a language was the birthright of man. This result, it will be seen, is purely negative. It defines what the origin of language was not, but it throws no light on the question what it was, and no satisfactory answer to the question has ever been proposed. Some scholars believe that human speech originated in man's attempt to imitate the sounds of nature, as if a child should call a dog "bow-wow," or a cow "moo." No doubt such imitation accounts for a certain number of words in our vocabulary, but there are great difficulties in carrying out the theory to its ultimate results. All that can be said is that the "bow-wow theory," as it is jocosely called, has never been driven from the field. Another view, which may be traced without any great difficulty to Herder's attempt to explain "the speech of animals," has found a warm defender in Max Müller. According to this view, which has a specious appearance of philosophical profundity, the utterances of primitive man were the spontaneous result, by reflex action, of impressions produced upon him by various external phenomena. Though the "ding-dong theory," as it is derisively called, is now discredited, and, in its entirety, is hardly susceptible of intelligent statement, it may, after all, contain a grain of truth. — GREENOUGH and KITTREDGE.

THE COMPOSITION AS A WHOLE

UNITY

The general
principle

176. A composition should treat a single subject.

If the composition can be summarized fully in one unified sentence or paragraph, it is a unified composition.

The following composition is an example of the violation of unity by failure to hold to one subject:

OUR TRIP UP SPRUCE CREEK

While I was in Port Orange, Mr. Doty, the proprietor of the hotel there, took some of his guests five miles up Spruce Creek on a launch. It was the third of February. As the boat steamed up the creek, we stood on the deck, some of us taking pictures and others shooting at alligators with revolvers. The alligators are of all sizes. Sometimes you will see one seven or eight feet long, lying on the bank in the sunshine. As the boat goes past, he slides into the water and swims away with only his head above the water. When we have gone a little farther, we see another alligator about four feet long, with ten or twelve little ones crawling over her back.

When the launch has gone about five miles, it stops at the wharf of an orange grove. Here the passengers are allowed to take all the oranges they want. After they have walked about the grove for a while, they have a picnic dinner, and then start back.

The writer of this meandering composition keeps to his subject — a trip which he took up Spruce Creek on February 3 — for only three sentences. He shifts to a different subject after the third sentence — the Spruce Creek trips in general — and throughout the rest of the composition forgets all about “our trip.”

Unity may be given to this composition (a) by making it entirely a narrative, dealing with the trip of February 3; or (b) by making it, throughout, a general discussion of the Spruce Creek picnics provided by Mr. Doty.

177. Relevant material must be so expressed that its relevancy may not be doubted. Relevant material may be so loosely connected with the main idea that its relationship to the main idea may not be clear to the reader. The placing of this material at the beginning of the composition is especially unfortunate, for it may mislead the reader into thinking that it is the main idea. Either it should be more fully developed so that its relationship to the main idea is clear, or it should be so placed that it will not divert the reader's attention from the main idea, or it should be omitted altogether.

Relevant material loosely connected with the main idea

Misleading: A composition on the Non-Partisan League begins with this sentence: "Mr. A. C. Townley, the founder of the Non-Partisan League, was thrown into prison for ninety days for criticising the conduct of the war." The incident is dropped here and the composition then discusses the history and organization of the Non-Partisan League. From the first sentence, however, the reader might conclude that the main idea of the composition is the lawlessness of the members of the League.

178. A very small composition on a very large subject — such as Character, Patriotism, Selfishness, Advertising, The Waste of Energy — usually violates the principle of unity. It usually consists of a number of brief scraps of discussion, each dealing with a different division of the subject. The divisions of so large a subject are themselves large; the composition therefore reads like a fragmentary and disconnected treatment of a number of distinct subjects, not like a connected treatment of one.

Too big a subject

When a short composition is to be written on a big subject, it is best to choose some single, well-defined phase of the subject. For example, choose the subjects in the left column rather than those in the right.

Limited	General
The Difference between Character and Reputation.	Character
The Work of Patriotic Women during the World War.	Patriotism
Selfishness in the Conduct of Students toward their Parents.	Selfishness
Advertising as a Necessary Measure of Self-Defense.	Advertising
The Value of a Daily Schedule.	The Waste of Time
How Students' Adversities aid them toward Success.	Success

COHERENCE

The general principle

179. To make a composition effective, proceed by a definite plan. Even good thoughts and interesting statements will not be effective if the writer sets them down haphazard, just as they occur to him; they must be organized into a whole. To get good organization, a writer must proceed by a definite plan; that is, he must, before he begins to write, or at least before he puts the composition into its final form, decide on a few topics, and on each topic write a passage constituting a unit of the whole composition. As in warfare a band of men, though strong and brave individually, is collectively weak if it is not well organized, so a speech, a report, an editorial, an essay, any composition, though its parts may be forcible or clever, is weak as a whole if it is not well organized. (See Rule 194.)

For example, a composition on Denver consists of a short paragraph on each of the following topics:

1. Location.
2. History.
3. Local pride.
4. Water supply (derived from mountain snow).
5. Capitol and United States mint.
6. Museums.
7. Principal business.
8. Dwelling houses (none built of wood).
9. Schools.
10. Wealth of citizens.
11. The city as a health resort.
12. Churches.
13. Strange spectacle of men skating in winter in their shirtsleeves.

This production, however interesting its material, is as far from being a good composition as two wheels, a diamond frame, a chain, and a pair of handle bars, all piled in a heap, are from being a good bicycle. It is a series of haphazard remarks not organized into a whole. There is no reason for most of the parts' standing where they are — no reason, e.g., for discussing public buildings after the water supply, or skaters' costumes after churches. The material of this composition may be organized into a whole by the method shown in the following outline. The numbers within the brackets refer to parts of the preceding outline.

- I. History. [2]
- II. Location and climate. [Put 1 and 13 here — 13 as an illustration of the statements about the climate.]
- III. Especially striking peculiarities of the city.
 1. Evidences of its being a health resort. [11]
 2. Absence of wooden buildings. [8]
 3. Public buildings. [5]

4. Water supply. [4]

5. Most striking of all — local pride. [3]

IV. Conditions of the people's life.

1. Economic: Principal occupations. General wealth. [7 and 10]

2. Educational and moral: Schools, museums, churches. [9, 6, and 12]

Passages
misplaced

180. Material belonging to one part of a composition should not be placed carelessly in another part.

In the following paragraph, the italicized sentence is evidently misplaced:

The physical training department is very good and is constantly improving. A good gymnasium for the women is greatly needed, to replace the present unsatisfactory makeshift. As I am more acquainted with the work of the girls, I shall confine myself to the physical training provided for them.

The italicized sentence does not belong in this introductory part, but in a subsequent part; viz., that which discusses the equipment for the girls' exercise.

Coherent
beginning

181. The opening sentences of a formal composition should be self-explanatory; they should be clear to the reader without reference to the title of the composition.

Bad:

LAMPS.

They are contrivances for furnishing artificial light. . . .

Right:

LAMPS

Lamps are contrivances for furnishing artificial light. . . .

Bad:

MY WORK DURING THE PAST TERM

Latin and German were more difficult than any other studies. . . .

Right:

MY WORK DURING THE PAST TERM

In my work during the past term, I had more difficulty with Latin and German than with any other studies.

182. The beginning of a new division, either of a whole composition or of a paragraph, should be clearly marked. Otherwise the reader may begin reading the new division supposing that the preceding division still continues. For marking the beginning of a new part, the following are useful means:

Distinct introduction of a new part

(a) A transitional sentence or group of sentences, such as the following:

Transition sentence or paragraph

So much for the amount of free time which the student has. It remains to discuss the use he makes of it.

The willingness of the faculty to allow student self-government is, then, unquestionable. But are the students equally willing to govern themselves?

(b) Connective words, phrases, and other expressions. (See Appendix D.)

Connective or transitional words and phrases

Addition: then, then too, again, next, too, also, further, moreover, another cause of, equally important with the preceding, first, secondly, finally, etc.

Addition with intensification: even, perhaps.

Repetition: in fact, indeed, in other words.

Exemplification: for example, for instance, thus.

Comparison: similarly, likewise.

Purpose: to this end, for this purpose, having this in view.

Resumption after a digression: well, now, thus.

Consequence: therefore, accordingly, hence, consequently, in consequence of the foregoing, for this reason, it follows that, the result is.

Abatement: to be sure; I admit; there is, to be sure, an exception . . .

Contrast: but, yet, in spite of, on the contrary, on the other hand, nevertheless, however.

Placing key words at the beginning

(c) Placing near the beginning of the first sentence of the new division the word or words that indicate the subject of the new division. For example, after discussing the abuses of college athletics, to begin a new division with the words "The remedy . . ." makes the change of topic immediately evident. After discussing a statesman's foreign policy, to begin a new division with the words "His internal administration . . ." makes the change of topic immediately evident.

Ineffective pronouns

(d) It is usually ineffective to use a pronoun in place of its antecedent in the topic sentence of a paragraph.

For example, in a theme on the effect of the university upon the freshman, the third paragraph begins with this topic sentence: "This is broadened beyond its narrow sphere in high school." This refers to a remote antecedent, the student's point of view. The whole paragraph would have been made more effective if the topic sentence had read: "The student's point of view is broadened beyond its narrow sphere in high school."

Coherence of a contradiction

183. Lack of connective words or sentences between a statement and a contradiction of it is especially apt to cause incoherence.

Incoherent: Some people think clerking is an easy job and that a clerk ought never to be tired. Clerks stay closely housed day after day, working from six in the morning to ten at night. . . .

Coherent [the necessary connective is supplied]:

Some people think the occupation of a clerk is easy and that a clerk ought never to be tired. This is not the case. In the first place, clerks stay closely housed day after day, etc.

184. In reproducing a story (e.g., the story of Macbeth) or in composing a story, do not shift carelessly between the present and the past tenses. Decide at the beginning which tense to use, and use it consistently; ordinarily, prefer the past tense. (See Rules 47 and 129.)

Shifting the tense in narrative

185. If in a story the narrator tells what he saw or had a part in, the introduction of events or speeches or thoughts which he could not have seen or heard or known violates coherence.

Shifting the point of view in narrative

Thus the italicized part of the following extract violates coherence:

I strolled down to the boat-house at six o'clock yesterday evening. As I got there a row-boat was approaching the wharf containing a man and a girl who I judged must have arrived from the country very recently. They had started for Picnic Point at two o'clock. On the way the young man had had great difficulty at the unfamiliar work of rowing. Often his oars would slip and send a shower of water into the girl's lap, at which he would say, "Oh, I am so sorry!" and she would reply, "Oh, that's all right." . . . As they neared the wharf, he was anxiously wondering whether he could land without accident. Jimmy, the keeper of the boat-house, stood ready to assist at the disembarkation. . . .

A story in which coherence is thus violated may be corrected (a) by omitting all events, speeches, and thoughts of which the narrator could not, according to his own account, have been aware at the time they took place (e.g., omitting the italicized passage in the story quoted); (b) by introducing all such events, speeches, and thoughts as having been learned by the narrator after they took place (e.g., making the oarsman in the story just quoted tell the narrator, in a subsequent conversation, what is improperly related in the italicized passage); or (c) by omitting all reference to the narrator — telling everything impersonally (e.g., omitting from the story quoted all preceding the italicized part and continuing without any reference to the narrator).

Shifting the tense in description

186. In description introduced by narrative in the past tense, maintain the tense throughout the composition. Carelessly shifting to the present tense changes the point of view and weakens coherence. (Cf. Rules 47 and 129.)

Shifting from point of view of one person to that of another

187. Do not change the point of view of a composition or of a passage by shifting carelessly from I to one, from we to the observer, from you to a person, etc. Keep consistently to one point of view unless there is good reason for changing. (Cf. Rule 131.)

Wrong: You seldom meet such people, but when one does, he should be on his guard against them.

Right: You seldom meet such people, but when you do, you should be on your guard against them.

EMPHASIS

General
principle

188. If a composition is coherently arranged and clearly expressed, emphasis of the more important ideas or expressions will usually follow. But there are a number of special devices or ways by which emphasis is obtained.

Transitional
phrases

189. Emphasis may be obtained by the use of phrases which directly state the importance of the material; as, for example, such phrases as: "The most important point of all is . . ."; "Emphasis must be put upon this fact . . ."; etc.

190. Emphasis may be obtained by giving greater space to more important material. This is a matter of proportion. For example, Huxley in his essay on Science and Culture, in which he defends a scientific education against its two opponents, the practical man and the classical scholar, devotes approximately five and one-half pages to the practical man and twelve and one-half pages to the classical scholar. Proportion

191. Emphasis may be obtained by putting important material at the beginning and at the end. Especially important is the end. In his essay on The Three Hypotheses Respecting the History of Nature, Huxley discusses first and second the hypotheses that he shows later to be lacking in scientific proof, and last he discusses the hypothesis of evolution, which to him is the valid explanation of the universe. Position

NOTE. — Coherence must not be sacrificed to gain emphasis. If clearness demands that the material be presented in a certain order, that order must be followed regardless of whether important points come first or last.

192. Emphasis may be obtained by creating suspense; that is, withholding the important fact until the end. For example, J. B. S. Haldane, in his essay On Being the Right Size (Scott and Zeitlin, College Readings in English Prose, p. 77), presents many illustrations to prove that for every type of animal there is a most convenient size and that a large change in size inevitably carries with it a change in form. Not until the end of the essay does the important idea come; namely, that just as there is a best size for every animal, so there is a best size for human institu- Suspense tions and that a large nation cannot become a completely socialized state.

Climax

193. Emphasis may be obtained by arranging details in climactic order; that is, putting the more important and more forceful details after the less important details. Climax is closely allied to suspense. (See Rule 192.)

OUTLINES

Outlines

194. An outline is an orderly plan of the material to be used in a composition. The material is condensed into topics, sentences, or paragraphs, so numbered and indented as to show their logical relationship. There are, therefore, three kinds of outlines: topic, sentence, and paragraph outlines. (Throughout an outline, the writer must adhere to one type consistently.) The topic and the sentence outlines are more commonly used. Of these two the sentence outline is to be preferred, for it states more explicitly the writer's thought. (Compare the two outlines given below.)

Nouns
preferable to verbs in topic
outline

In a topic outline, give all the topics, as far as possible, the form of nouns, with or without modifiers. E.g., write "Rapidity of Movement" rather than "Moves Rapidly." Also, as far as possible, make the topics parallel in form. The writer often forgets the form of his first topics by the time he has reached his third or fourth topics.

Wrong:

- I. Powers of the Senate as a separate house.
 - A. To confirm appointments.
 - B. To ratify treaties.
 - C. Trial of impeachments.
 - D. Adopting its own rules of procedure.
 - E. Electing its own officers (except its presiding officer).

Right:

- I. Powers of the Senate as a separate house.
 - A. To confirm appointments.
 - B. To ratify treaties.
 - C. To try impeachments.
 - D. To adopt its own rules of procedure.
 - E. To elect its own officers (except its presiding officer).

In making a sentence outline, write each division in the form of a sentence which expresses the central idea of the division. Subheads may be expressed as subordinate members of this sentence, or as separate sentences.

THE GOVERNMENT OF SWITZERLAND

Topic Outline

- I. Value to Americans of a knowledge of Swiss institutions. Specimen topic outline
- II. The legislative department.
 - A. The National Council.
 1. Apportionment.
 2. Elections.
 - B. The Council of States
 1. Apportionment.
 2. Elections.
 - C. Powers of the legislature.
- III. The executive department.
 - A. Organization.
 - B. Executive powers. — Comparison of Swiss and American executives.
- IV. The judicial department: the constitutional court.
 - A. Organization.
 - B. Judicial powers. — Comparison of Swiss and American judiciaries.

THE GOVERNMENT OF SWITZERLAND

Sentence Outline

- I. Knowledge of Swiss institutions is of value to Americans. Specimen sentence outline

II. The legislative department consists of a bicameral legislature, called the Federal Assembly, composed of the National Council and the Council of States.

A. The National Council, the more numerous branch, represents the people.

1. It consists of one member for each 20,000 persons, with at least one member from each canton or half-canton.

2. Members are elected for three years, by popular vote.

B. The Council of States, the less numerous branch, represents the cantons.

1. It consists of two members from each canton, and one from each half-canton.

2. The method of election, term, and qualification are prescribed by each canton itself.

C. The legislature is the supreme authority in the state, and has all powers not reserved to the people or to the cantons, and not granted to any other body.

III. The executive department consists of a Federal Council of seven members, elected by the Federal Assembly for three years.

A. One member of the Federal Council is designated by the Federal Assembly to act as Federal President for one year; each of the seven members acts as head of an executive department.

B. The Federal Council is subordinate to the Federal Assembly, and its powers are not comparable to those of the American executive; the Federal President is merely a presiding officer with no independent powers of importance.

IV. The judicial department consists of a Federal Court of twenty-four judges, elected by the Federal Assembly for six years.

- A. For ordinary purposes the court sits in small divisions.
- B. Its jurisdiction is largely constitutional, though in this respect it is not so powerful as the American Supreme Court.

195. The following system of numbering and lettering the topics and subtopics is commonly used. (See outline in Rule 194.)

System of numbering
and lettering

I.

A.

B.

1.

2.

a.

b.

c.

(1)

(2)

(a)

(b)

II. etc.

There may be, of course, other methods; but whatever method is used, that one must be followed consistently throughout.

196. Place all coördinate topics at the same distance from the left-hand margin. When there is not space enough on the line for the whole of the topic or sentence, that part left over should be indented two or three spaces to the right of the margin of its governing topic. The marginal line of a subtopic should never be the same as that of its governing topic. (See outline in Rules 194 and 350.)

Proper
alignment

Misuse of Introduction
and Conclusion

197. Do not entitle the first division Introduction nor the last Conclusion unless their material is distinct from the body.

Wrong outline for an account of a sleighride:

- I. Introduction: the start.
- II. The journey out.
- III. Conclusion: the return.

Right:

- I. Introduction: winter in Dakota.
- II. The start.
- III. The journey out.
- IV. The return.
- V. Conclusion: comparison of sleighing and other sports.

Body or Discussion
not to be used

198. Do not use the title Body or Discussion; place the topics belonging to the body, or discussion, of an essay flush with the left-hand margin, as in the topic outline under section 194.

Over-
minuteness

199. Do not indicate minute and unimportant divisions.

Bad:

- I. Situation of building.
 - A. In Ames County.
 - B. On a hill.
 - C. Facing east.

Right:

- I. Situation of building.

Certain Illogical Practices

More than one subtopic
necessary

200. As a rule, each topic that is subdivided should have at least two subheads; it is impossible to subdivide a thing into less than two parts. If the topic has only one subtopic, the subtopic should usually (a) be joined to the governing topic, (b) be omitted, or (c) be supplemented by other subtopics.

I. Ancestors.

A. Scotch.

II. Birthplace.

A. Farm in Indiana.

Right: (a)

I. Scotch ancestors.

II. Birthplace: description of the Indiana farm.

(See also topics III, B, and IV in the topic outline in section 194.)

Bad:

I. Founding of the city.

A. By Dionysius Jones.

II. Its principal industry.

A. Piano manufacturing.

Right: (b) and (a)

I. Founding of the city.

II. Principal industry, piano manufacturing.

Bad:

I. Situation.

A. Advantages.

Right: (a)

I. Situation: its advantages.

Also right: (c)

I. Situation.

A. Geographical location.

B. Advantages.

II. Attempts to destroy it.

A. Why they failed.

Right: (c)

II. Attempts to destroy it.

A. The first attempt.

B. The attempt of 1901.

C. Reason for the failure of all attempts.

NOTE. — A topic may have only one subhead if the subhead is an example, illustration, or reference, none of which is, strictly speaking, a subdivision.

Right:

I. Extension of Mohammedan power under the early caliphs.

A. Eastward and northward.

1. For example, Persian and Greek lands.

B. Westward.

1. For example, Syria, Egypt, and northern Africa.

Subheads to cover field of governing
topic

201. Each group of subheads, taken together, should sufficiently cover the field stated in their governing topic. If they do not, the fault may be remedied either by (a) making the governing title narrower, or by (b) adding to the subheads.

Wrong:

I. Powers of the Senate as a separate house.

- A. To confirm appointments.
- B. To ratify treaties.
- C. To try impeachments.

Right: (a)

I. Principal powers of the Senate as a separate house.

- A. To confirm appointments.
- B. To ratify treaties.
- C. To try impeachments.

Right: (b)

I. Powers of the Senate as a separate house.

- A. To confirm appointments.
- B. To ratify treaties.
- C. To try impeachments.
- D. To adopt its own rules of procedure.
- E. To elect its own officers (except its presiding officer).

Overlapping
topics

202. Topics must not overlap; they must be mutually exclusive. Overlapping, an error in logic, is often due to the fact that the basis of subdivision is changed. For example, in the following subtopics, the basis for subdivision is changed from a geographical to a chronological basis. Hence some material would have to be discussed twice.

Wrong:

- I. Literature in the United States.
 - A. Literature of New England.
 - B. Literature of the South.
 - C. Colonial literature.
 - D. Literature to 1860.

Right:

- I. Literature in the United States. (Geographical basis of subdivision.)
 - A. Literature of New England.
 - B. Literature of the South.
 - C. Literature of the Middle West, etc.

Right:

- I. Literature in the United States. (Chronological basis of subdivision.)

Right:

- I. Literature in the United States. (Chronological basis of subdivision.)
 - A. Colonial literature.
 - B. Literature to 1860.
 - C. Literature of the Civil War, etc.

203. Do not write as a subtopic what is logically co-ordinate with the preceding topic. Coördinate title written like a subtopic

Bad [The rule is violated in titles II, 1, and II, 1, a]:

- I. The departure.
- II. The arrival in the city.
 - A. Journey to the store.
 - 1. Purchases.
- III. Return home.

Right:

- I. Departure.
- II. Arrival in the city.
- III. Journey to the store.
- IV. Purchases.
- V. Return.

Also right:

- I. Departure.
- II. Experiences in the city.
 - A. Arrival.

B. Journey to the store.

C. Purchases.

III. Return.

Subtopic
written like a coördinate
title

204. Do not place a subtopic coördinate with its governing topic.

Bad [The rule is violated in title II]:

I. Disadvantages of football.

A. Physical harm.

B. Distraction from studies.

II. Encouragement of gambling.

Right:

I. Disadvantages of football.

A. Physical harm.

B. Distraction from studies.

C. Encouragement of gambling.

Main title written like
subtopic

205. Do not write the topic of the composition like the topic of a division.

Bad:

I. Shipbuilding in Maine.

A. Introduction.

B. Principal seats.

C. Methods.

etc.

Right:

SHIPBUILDING IN MAINE

I. Introduction.

II. Principal seats.

III. Methods.

etc.

EXERCISE 1

Unity

Discuss the suitability of the following subjects for 500-word expositions. If you find the subjects too large, suggest subdivisions that might be treated in 500-word themes.

1. Housekeeping

2. Representative government

3. The Federal Reserve Banking system

4. The honor system in our college

5. Automobiles
6. Personality
7. Friendship
8. Professionalism and amateur athletics
9. A history of textiles

EXERCISE 2

What are the faults of the following theme? Make suggestions for revision. Unity and coherence

RELIGION

In this day and age there is much said about religion. It seems as though the public stands divided on the question of what religion is. Some people think that they are religious because they go to church once or twice every Sunday, without considering what they do during the week. It is very easy to attend church on Sunday, but it is very difficult to resist the temptations of the week. It is here that the question arises as to what religion really is. Is it attending church services regularly? Is it donating money to all the worthy causes? Is it forcing yourself to read the Bible every day? We must get a clear conception of the meaning of the word "religion" in order to know what religion is. Religion is showing reverence to some god. For the sake of clearness, we shall consider the Christian religion. There are two motives that cause us to be religious: fear and love. It is fear of God that causes a person to force himself to read the Bible, attend services, and donate to all worthy causes. Religion is not shown by doing these things because of a fear of God; it is shown by doing them because of a love of God. Religion is more than the observance of ceremonies. It must be judged by the motive that is leading one to observe the services.

EXERCISE 3

Rewrite the following theme, making it unified and coherent, and indicating the necessary paragraph divisions. Unity and coherence

The broom that we see every day as we go about our daily work looks very simple; but if we were to analyze it, we should find it to be a very complicated affair. The broom begins as a product of wood, steel wire, and broom-corn straws. Now the thing that interests us is how these different materials come together into a single broom. Producing broom straws, which are useful in brooms, requires much common labor. The broom-corn seeds are planted in the spring. After about ninety days of good weather, the crop is ready to harvest. The stalk grows to a height of from four feet to twenty feet, and has an abundance of foliage on it, which is fed to cattle. When the corn has reached the proper stage, the farmer breaks the corn at a height that is easily reached. He harvests the straws before they are dead ripe, so that he may get them at their best. The corn is placed in the drying sheds until it is ready to ship. In a short period the straws are dry enough for shipping. They are shipped direct to manufacturing plants or factories which place the product in store rooms, large enough to keep a supply of material on hand, so that green straw will not have to be used. Broom corn belongs to the sorghum family. It is grown in connection with large sorghum industries. The native home of broom corn is in the East Indies, but recently the largest portions of the crop have been raised in the United States. The best regions are those where sugar cane is grown. Central Illinois, and some other states with the same type of soil, grow broom corn for its fertilizing value. The stalks, after the straws are harvested, are plowed under to give the land a chance to become strengthened. Broom factories are not restricted to definite places, but are found where there is a good railroad to supply them. The cost of shipping the product to places of manufacturing is relatively small. There are numerous factories, usually a number of them being incorporated. A small factory, if it is well equipped, can turn out a number of brooms in a day. This is a reason why brooms are not very expensive. Brooms are manufactured on a large scale by machinery, although some are still made by hand. The only real part done by hand in machine manufacturing is the sorting. The broom straws come from the drying room in large bundles. These bundles are broken and the straws are separated, the long ones for the ordinary brooms, the shorter ones for little brooms. A man stands at the end of a long rack and pulls off the long straws that are sorted over. He carries them to another man who operates a press. The pressman places the straws all lying the same way into the press, puts a long wooden handle in the center of the straws, and draws a wire around them. The pressman then presses the broom to give it its flat shape. The broom, after it is pressed, leaves the pressman and goes to the sewer, who places the broom in his machine and puts the colored cord through the straws to hold them in place. This also gives the broom a solid form so that it can go through the next process, which is the process of wrapping with wire. The wire so far has just been started around the broom to hold the straws to the handle. This wire is now wrapped around the top of the straws until they are firmly held in place. A nail is placed in the handle and the wire fastened to it. The labeling is a short process. The broom, after it is labeled, is ready for market.

EXERCISE 4

Revise the following outline, giving reasons for your Outlining changes.

HOW THE PRESIDENT IS SELECTED

- I. The National Committee holds the key to the nominations and meets in Washington.
 - A. The committees are composed of one member from each state and territory in the United States.
 1. In 1920 the Democrats added one woman from each state and territory, and in 1924 the Republicans did the same.
 - B. The committee decides important matters.
 1. It selects the convention city.
 2. The time set for June or July of the election year.
 3. The Democratic convention consists of twice the number of presidential electors from each state.
 4. The Republicans have a different system of representation.

II. The National Convention is held in a large hall designated by the committee.

A. The physical appearance of the hall adds to the candidate's chances.

1. Many people are visitors to the convention.

2. Bands and posters proclaim the favorite sons.

B. The sessions of the convention last several days.

1. The first day the meeting is called to order by the temporary chairman.

(a) The roll of the delegates is called.

(b) Selections by the National Committee of the temporary officers are read.

(c) The temporary chairman makes the keynote speech.

(d) The committees to do important work are elected.

(1) The committee on credentials to settle contests.

(2) The committee on permanent organization reports the names of officials for convention posts.

(3) The committee on resolutions makes reports and these become the party platform. The work of this committee may take two days.

2. The third and fourth days are spent in nominating the candidate for president.

(a) The roll of the states is called and each chairman responds.

(1) Some states which are near the top alphabetically let other states nominate in their place.

(2) Speeches are made in behalf of each candidate.

(3) The names of all the candidates are presented before the voting begins.

(4) The balloting starts. When two-thirds of the votes cast favor a candidate, he is nominated.

(a) In the Republican Convention a majority is required to nominate.

3. The vice president is nominated in the same manner.

4. The new National Committee is selected.

5. Two committees are appointed to notify the candidates of their nomination.

6. The Convention is adjourned.

III. The campaign is the most important factor in the election of the candidates.

1. Meetings, rallies, and speeches are held to boom a candidate.

2. The presidential electors are nominated at primaries in some states.

IV. The method of choosing the electors is decided on by the state legislatures.

A. Electors may be chosen by voters or by state legislatures.

B. The number of electors according to the total that each state has in the Senate and the House of Representatives.

- V. The electors meet in the state capitols and cast votes for the candidates.
 - a. The national law requires the electors to meet on the second Monday of January following their election.
 - 1. The electors cast votes as individuals.
 - 2. The majority of popular votes in each state for any party usually gives its candidates the electoral vote of that state.
- VI. The method of counting the votes is prescribed by the Twelfth Amendment.
 - a. The votes are sealed, signed, and sent to the President of the Senate.
 - 1. By mail, special messenger, and one set locked up in the district court.
 - b. The votes are counted in the presence of both houses.
 - 1. Tellers are appointed by each house and they count the votes alphabetically.
 - c. A majority of votes elects the President.
 - d. In case of no majority, the House of Representatives sits as an electoral body and voting by states elects the President.
 - 1. A majority of states is necessary to elect a candidate.
- VII. The vice president is elected in the same way as the President.
 - a. Under similar circumstances a vice president is elected by the Senate.

EXERCISE 5

Revise the following topic outline. Rearrangement and subordination will be necessary; the introduction of new headings may also be necessary. Indicate how you would apportion the space in a book review of 1500 words.

BOOK REVIEW

The Return of the Native, by Thomas Hardy

- I. Life of the author.
- II. Style.
- III. Summary of the plot.
- IV. Portrayal of the characters.
- V. Unifying aim in the book.
- VI. Central thought.
- VII. Qualities of the book which entitle it to a place among great novels.
- VIII. My personal impressions of the book.
- IX. Reflections of the author's life in his book.
- X. Development of the plot.
- XI. Influence upon the novel of the age in which the writer lived.
- XII. Portrayal of the setting.
- XIII. The development of the unifying theme throughout the book.
- XIV. A comparison of this novel with the author's other novels.

EXERCISE 6

Turn your revision of the outline in the preceding exercise into a sentence outline. If you are not familiar with The Return of the Native, make the outline apply to a novel with which you are familiar.

GRAMMAR

GRAMMATICAL AGREEMENT¹

Agreement
of subject and verb Intervening
words

206. A verb should agree in number with its subject.

(a) Be careful not to make a verb agree with a word between it and the subject, instead of with the subject.

Wrong: A new order of ideas and principles have been instituted.

Right: A new order of ideas and principles has been instituted.

Wrong: You, the chairman, is the one to present the case.

Right: You, the chairman, are the one to present the case.

NOTE. — The last example resembles the others in principle, although "one," the word which attracts the verb out of the plural into the singular, precedes the subject instead of following it.

Number of the subject not affected
by with, etc.

(b) Words joined to a subject by with, together with, including, as well as, or no less than, do not affect the number of the subject.

Wrong: The captain, as well as the mate and the pilot, were frightened.

Right: The captain, as well as the mate and the pilot, was frightened.

Subjects joined by
and

(c) Two or more subjects joined by and require a plural verb.

Note, however, that a compound subject designating the same person or thing takes a singular verb; and that a compound subject designating closely related ideas may take a singular verb.

¹ For definitions of grammatical terms, see Appendix B.

Right: The captain and the mate were frightened.

Right: My teacher and my friend [the same person] was ready to help me.

Right: His patience and perseverance was never failing.

Right: His patience and perseverance were never failing.

(d) Two or more singular subjects joined by or or nor require a singular verb. Subjects joined by or or nor Wrong: Neither he nor she are here.

Right: Neither he nor she is here.

Wrong: One or the other of those fellows have stolen it.

Right: One or the other of those fellows has stolen it.

Wrong: Every young man or woman is taken for what they really are.

Right: Every young man or woman is taken for what he or she really is.

(e) When a subject is composed of both plural and singular substantives, joined by or or nor, the verb agrees with the nearer. Singular and plural substantives Wrong: Neither Jack nor the Smiths plays well.

Right: Neither Jack nor the Smiths play well.

(f) There is* should be followed by a singular noun; there are, by a plural noun or nouns. There is and there are Wrong: There is too many people in this room.

Right: There are too many people in this room.

(g) A collective noun takes a singular verb when the group is thought of and a plural verb when the individuals are thought of. Collective nouns

Right: The audience was gathering slowly.

Right: The audience were of different opinions about the play.

Right: The class has voted to increase its dues.

Right: The class have been consulted by letter regarding the proposed increase of dues.

NOTE. — This rule applies to such nouns as number, remainder, rest, etc.

Right: A number of boys have joined the various organizations in the school.

Right: The number of pages in the book is enough to discourage a reader.

Quantities,
sums,
multiples

(h) Quantities and sums or multiples of numbers when expressing a single idea may take a singular verb.

Right: Nine inches is one-fourth of a yard.

Right: Eight and three makes eleven.

Right: Eight times three is twenty-four.

NOTE. — The use of the plural verb in these instances could be justified.

(i) Fractions, if they indicate a part of a single unit, take a singular verb; but if they indicate several members of a group, they take a plural verb.

Right: Two-thirds of the text has been covered.

Right: One-third of the students have already gone home for vacation.

Number of a verb in a relative clause

(j) In questions like one of the men who, one of the things which, one of the people that, the relative pronoun refers not to one but to the plural object of of. The relative pronoun is therefore plural.

Wrong: He is one of those men who talks much and thinks little.

Right: He is one of those men who talk much and think little.

Incorrect
agreement with a predicate
noun

207. A verb agrees with its subject, not with its predicate noun.

Wrong: The main part of this machine are the large rollers.

Right: The main part of this machine is the large rollers.

Wrong: Oak, brass, and steel is the material of the structure.

Right: Oak, brass, and steel are the material of the structure.

208. Each, every, either, neither, some one, somebody, any one, anybody, every one, everybody, no one, nobody, one and a person are singular. Each, Every, etc. Therefore, they are the subjects of singular verbs and the antecedents of singular pronouns. None is usually used with a plural verb, unless a singular idea is clearly intended; in that case no one is frequently substituted for none.

Wrong: Every one opened their window.

Right: Every one opened his window.

Wrong: Each of the suspected men were held.

Right: Each of the suspected men was held.

This rule holds, even with a compound subject.

Wrong: Each branch and twig were still.

Right: Each branch and twig was still.

NOTE. — To avoid awkward or artificial construction in correcting this fault, recasting the sentence is often advisable.

Wrong: Everybody there objected and declared they thought it barbarous.

Right but artificial: Everybody there objected and declared he thought it barbarous.

Right: All the people there objected and declared they thought it barbarous.

209. An adjective or a pronoun agrees with the substantive that it modifies. Note that kind, type, sort, class, etc., are singular and should be modified by a singular demonstrative adjective. Agreement of adjective or pronoun with its substantive Wrong: I like these kind of notebooks better than these old-fashioned type.

Right: I like this kind of notebook better than that old-fashioned type; [or] I like these kinds of notebooks better than those old-fashioned types.

MATTERS OF CASE

Nominative case for subject

Who not affected by he says, etc.

210. The subject of a verb (except of an infinitive; see Rule 212) should be in the nominative case.

(a) A parenthetical expression like he says intervening between the pronoun who and its verb does not change the case of the pronoun.

Wrong: The man whom I thought was my friend deceived me.

Right: The man who I thought was my friend deceived me. ["Who" is the subject of "was"; "I thought" is a mere parenthesis.]

Wrong: Whom did they say won?

Right: Who did they say won?

Right: The chairman whom they elected has resigned.

Who or whoever not affected by preceding words

(b) The pronoun who or whoever, when it is the subject of a finite verb, is sometimes wrongly put into the objective case, because it appears to be the object of a preceding verb or preposition.

Wrong: Send whomever will do the work.

Right: Send whoever will do the work. ["Whoever" is the subject of "will do," not the object of "send." The object of "send" is the clause "whoever will do the work."]

Wrong: The question of whom should be leader arose.

Right: The question of who should be leader arose. ["Who" is the subject of "should be," not the object of "of." The object of "of" is the substantive clause "who should be leader."]

Predicate substantive with finite verb

211. A predicate substantive completing a finite verb should be in the nominative case.

Right: It is I. — The beneficiaries are she, they, and we. — Is it we that you accuse? ["It is me" is a colloquialism.]

212. The subject of an infinitive and the predicate substantive completing an infinitive should be in the objective case.

Subject and predicate
complement of an infinitive

Right: The gazette reported him to be dead. ["Him" is the subject of the infinitive "to be," and not the object of "reported."]

Right: She imagined the burglar to be me. ["Me" is the predicate substantive completing "to be."]

Right: The man whom I thought to be my friend deceived me. ["Whom" is the subject of "to be."
Cf. the first two examples under Rule 210 a.]

213. The object of a verb or of a preposition should be in the objective case.

Object of verb or preposition

Whom do you mean? [not who. "Who do you mean?" is an accepted colloquialism.]

Does that rule apply to us upperclassmen? [not we upperclassmen.]

214. The pure conjunctions and, but, or, either . . . or, neither . . . nor connect nouns and pronouns in the same case. If the substantive preceding the conjunction is in the nominative case, then the substantive following it is in the nominative case, etc. (See Rule 122.)

Case after pure conjunctions

Wrong: When she said that to Sister and I, we couldn't help laughing.

Right: When she said that to Sister and me, we couldn't help laughing.

Wrong: Between you and I, I think that she is mistaken.

Right: Between you and me, I think that she is mistaken.

215. An appositive should be in the same case as the noun with which it is in apposition.

Appositives

Right: All are going — he, she, and we two.

Right: He spoke to some of us — namely, her and me.

Right: We all met — she, the officer, they you mentioned, and I.

Substantive after than or as

216. The case of a single substantive following than or as is nominative or objective, according to its use in the incompleted clause of which it is a part. It is not the object of a preposition, because than and as are not prepositions, but conjunctions introducing subordinate clauses.

Right: He is happier than I. [“Than I” = “than I am.”]

Right: I can do it as well as they. [“As they” = “as they can do it.”]

Right: I should help him more willingly than her. [“Than her” = “than I should help her.”]

Than whom

NOTE. — The expression than whom is ungrammatical, but well established as an idiom.

“ . . . when Beelzebub perceived, — than whom, Satan except, none higher sat, — with grave Aspect he rose. . . . ”

— Paradise Lost, Book II.

Possessive
case:
Nouns not designating persons

217. In certain cases it is awkward to attribute possession to inanimate objects.

Awkward: The porch’s roof.

Improved: The roof of the porch.

Awkward: The store’s management.

Improved: The management of the store.

Permissible
exceptions

NOTE. — Good usage justifies many exceptions, including expressions designating time or measure, as a day’s journey, a stone’s throw, five minutes’ walk, a month’s wages; and expressions implying personification, as for pity’s sake, duty’s pleadings, the law’s delay.

Possessive
case in objective sense

218. Do not use the possessive case of a noun to indicate the object of an action; use an of phrase.

Wrong: Lincoln's assassination.

Right: The assassination of Lincoln.

Wrong: Mankind's benefactor.

Right: The benefactor of mankind.

219. Put the substantive modifying a gerund in the possessive case. Distinguish a gerund, a verbal noun, from a participle; as "His writing is poor" [gerund], "I found him writing a letter" [participle], and "She objected to his going alone" [gerund].

Possessive
with gerund

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS

220. In such expressions as he looks sad, he looks sadly, he stands firm, he stands firmly, the word following the verb should be an adjective if it describes the subject; if it designates the manner of action of the verb, it should be an adverb. Such verbs as appear, be, become, seem, smell, sound, taste, etc., either commonly or invariably require an adjective.

Adverb or predicate
adjective

Wrong: I feel badly. [The writer no doubt means in low spirits or sorry or in bad health. What he has said is: my sense of touch is impaired.]

Right: I feel bad [i.e., sorry or in low spirits or in bad health].

Right: I feel good [i.e., in good spirits or in a virtuous mood].

Right: I am well [i.e., in good health, an adjective use of well].

Right: I am ill [i.e., in bad health, an adjective use of ill].

Wrong: I am nicely. [Nicely is an adverb; an adjective should be used.]

Wrong: I am poorly. [Poorly is an adverb; an adjective should be used.]

Right: He appears good [i.e., appears to be a good man].

Right: He appears well in public [i.e., makes his appearance in a creditable manner].

Right: The music sounds loud [i.e., has the characteristic of loud music].

Right: The bugle sounded loudly through the ranks [i.e., sounded in a loud manner].

Right (poetic): Loud through the ranks sounded the bugle [i.e., the loud bugle sounded].

Right: It stands immovable. It smells sweet. It tastes sour. Your hand feels cold. She looks dainty. That statement sounds queer.

Comparative and superlative degrees

221. Use the comparative degree of an adjective or an adverb in speaking of two persons or things and the superlative degree in speaking of three or more persons or things.

Wrong: She was the most popular of the two sisters.

Right: She was the more popular of the two sisters.

Right: She was the most popular of the three sisters.

222. Certain adjectives and adverbs are logically incapable of comparison; as, for example, circular, round, perfect, absolute, immortal, faultless, unique, equal, entire, whole, conclusive, unanimous.

Illogical: I feel more equal to the task now than I have ever felt before.

Right: I feel more able to do the task now than I have ever felt before; [or] I feel more nearly equal to the task now, etc.

NOTE. — Words of this type tend through careless usage to lose their superlative force. Many good writers and speakers use a perfective adverb with these absolute words to restore their finality; as, for example, His satire on the corrupt society of the 17th century is quite perfect.

Adverb or
factitive
adjective

223. In such expressions as he holds it steady, he holds it steadily, he filled it full, he filled it fully, the modifier should be an adjective if it designates the condition of the object; if it designates the manner of action of the verb, it should be an adverb.

Right: He kept it safe [i.e., through his keeping, it was safe].

Right: He kept it safely [i.e., he performed in a safe manner the act of keeping].

Right: He wrapped it tight ["tight" designates the condition of the object].

Right: He wrapped it tightly ["tightly" designates the mode of wrapping].

Right: Sweep it clean. Hold it motionless. Shoot him dead. Nail it solid. Bury it deep. Raise it high.

MATTERS OF VOICE

224. Avoid awkward use of the passive voice. The active voice is usually clearer, terser, and more forceful than the passive. (See Rule 37.) Misuse of passive voice

Bad: Your letter was received and carefully read by me.

Right: I received and carefully read your letter. (See Rule 436 a.)

Bad: That was a crisis in my life which will never be forgotten.

Right: That was a crisis in my life which I shall never forget.

MATTERS OF MODE

225. Most educated and intelligent writers use the subjunctive mode for a wish, volition, or a condition improbable or contrary to fact. Be and were are practically the only special subjunctive forms in modern use. The subjunctive Right: If this were [not was] Wednesday, I could go with you.

Right: Don't you, John, wish you were [not was] in his place?

Right: I insist that he attend to the matter today.

Right: Everybody stand up.

Right (less common): If he be guilty, let him suffer the consequences. "If he is guilty" implies less doubt.

MATTERS OF TENSE

(Including shall and will)

Shall and will Expectation

226. To represent simple future use shall (or should) in the first person, and will (or would) in the second and third persons. Most of the errors in the use of shall and will consist in the use of will for shall in the first person, future. I will miss her very much means, in the idiomatic sense, I am willing or I am determined to miss her. The intended meaning is, of course, the simple future, I am going to miss her.

Memorize the following formula:

I shall (should)	we shall (should) you will (would)	you will (would)
he will (would)	they will (would)

Wrong: I don't believe I will be able to go.

Right: I don't believe I shall be able to go.

Right: I don't believe he will be able to go.

Wrong: I feared I would fail.

Right: I feared I should fail.

Right: I feared you would fail.

NOTE. — Excepted from the rules governing these auxiliaries are the use of should to express obligation — I should not have said that — and the use of would to express habitual action — I would sit by the hour in the parlor waiting for her to come down.

Determination, etc.

227. To represent determination, desire, willingness, or promise on the part of the speaker, use will (or would) in the first person, and shall (or should) in the second and third persons. The following is the formula for such expressions:

I will (would)	we will (would)
you shall (should)	you shall (should) he shall (should)	they shall (should)

Right: I will help you; I promise it. You shall not stir; I forbid it. They shall be hanged at sunrise; we, the court, decree it.

NOTE. — In the first person, the subject determines the action, for the subject and the speaker are the same person: I will go means I am determined to go. In the second and third persons, the subject does not determine the action, for the subject is not the speaker: he shall go means I am determined that he shall go.

228. The verbs like, prefer, care, be glad, be inclined, etc., use the auxiliary shall for the first person and will for the second and third. I will be glad to go means, in the idiomatic sense, I am determined to be glad.

Shall and will with like, etc.

Wrong: I would like to see her when she returns.

Right: I should like to see her when she returns.

Right: He would like to see her when she returns.

229. In a question containing shall or should, will or would —

(a) When the subject is in the first person, use the auxiliary shall or should, except in repeating a question addressed to the speaker. In questions

Wrong: Well, what will we do now?

Right: Well, what shall we do now?

Right (exception): Will I help you? Why, certainly.

(b) When the subject is in the second or third person, use the auxiliary that will be used in the answer.

Right form for a question as to expectations: Shall you be recognized, do you think? [The answer, according to Rule 226 would be either, "I shall be" or "I shall not be"; therefore shall should be used in the question.]

Right form for a question as to intention: Will you do the deed? [The answer, according to Rule 227, would be either "I will" or "I will not"; therefore will should be used in the question.]

In indirect
quotations

230. In an indirect quotation use the auxiliary that would properly be used if the quotation were direct.

Right: He said he thought he should ride. [The direct quotation would be, "I think I shall ride"; therefore should (an inflectional form of shall) should be used in the indirect quotation.]

Shall and should in contingent
statements

231. In subordinate clauses making conditional statements, shall and should are correctly used for all persons. In other subordinate clauses shall and should are commonly used in all persons for the simple future; will and would, for wishing, consenting, and willing.

Right: If they should find it, I should rejoice.

Right: A man who should do that would be hated.

NOTE. — Some of the rules for shall, will, should, and would are disregarded by many intelligent and educated persons. Therefore, "I will probably come on Thursday," although not the best usage, is correct colloquial English. The rule, however, indicates the practice of most writers.

Present
tense for statements permanently true

232. Statements permanently true should be put in the present tense. When they occur in a subordinate clause in indirect discourse, following a verb in past time, guard against their being attracted into the past.

Wrong: He said that oak was the best wood for floors.

Right: He said that oak is the best wood for floors.

Wrong: I have always heard that the four years of college were the happiest in a man's life.

Right: I have always heard that the four years of college are the happiest in a man's life.

The present tense is preferred, as a rule, in book reviews, criticisms, etc., for statements of permanent truth regarding a work of art. In statements relating the events of the author's life, etc., the past tense would, of course, be used.

Right: In Old China, Charles Lamb pictures most charmingly his home life with his sister Mary, to whom he was very devoted.

Right: Jane Austen's settings are of the English village life that she knew so well.

NOTE. — For the use of the historical present, see Rule 47.

233. Obscurity, or an effect of incompleteness, arises from the use of a verb in the past tense unaccompanied by a time modifier, when there is in the context no indication of the time of the action.

The undated past tense

Obscure and incomplete: In accounting for the origin of Lake Wingra, geologists say that a small stream ran through the territory where the lake now lies.

Clear [The necessary time modifier of "ran" is supplied]: In accounting for the origin of Lake Wingra, geologists say that at some remote period a small stream ran through the territory where the lake now lies.

NOTE. — When a sentence introduces a new or additional idea, obscurity is often avoided by the addition of a time modifier, no matter what the tense of the verb may be. Words expressing indefinite time, such as "now and then," "always," "frequently," etc., are at times indispensable. Similarly adverbs and adverbial phrases or clauses expressing place or attendant circumstances should not be omitted when they make the meaning clearer. An example of the first part of this suggestion is found in the use of "at times" in the second sentence of the text of this paragraph.

234. The past tense and the present perfect tense should not be confused. The past tense represents action completed in the past. The present perfect represents action going on at any time up to the present.

Confusion of past and present tenses

Wrong: I have asked her yesterday to give me her address.

Right: I asked her yesterday to give me her address.

Right: I have asked her many times to give me her address.

Wrong: At present we did not have a reply from them.

Right: At present we have not had a reply from them.

Past misused for past perfect

235. The past perfect tense represents action prior to some past time.

Obscure: Mitchell hired a jockey named Brunt to ride Shackles in the approaching race. Brunt was injured in a jump-race and gave up racing for a time. But Mitchell persuaded him to begin again. [The reader supposes that the events stated in the italicized sentence followed the employment of Brunt by Mitchell; whereas the writer intends to say that those events preceded the employment. The use of the past tense in the italicized sentence is thus entirely misleading.]

Clear: Mitchell hired a jockey named Brunt to ride Shackles in the approaching race. Brunt had been injured in a jump-race and had given up racing for a time. But Mitchell persuaded him to begin again.

Sequence of tenses

236. Maintain proper sequence of tenses. The past is not all one, but may be said to consist of the particular time of the main narrative, previous time, and subsequent time down to the present, each time having its appropriate tense.

Wrong: They informed us that they wrote to Paris for instructions.

Right: They informed us [past time, past tense] that they had written [previous time, past perfect tense] to Paris for instructions, but since then we have not heard [subsequent time, perfect tense] the outcome of their inquiry.

Relation of subordinate verbs:
perfect
infinitive

237. Maintain a proper relation between subordinate verb-forms and the verb of the main clause.

(a) An infinitive should be in the present tense unless it represents action prior to that of the governing verb. Guard against its being attracted into the perfect.

Wrong: It was not necessary for you to have gone.

Right: It was not necessary for you to go.

Wrong: I intended to have answered.

Right: I intended to answer.

(b) A conditional verb-phrase in a dependent clause should be in the present tense unless it represents action prior to that of the governing verb. Guard against its being attracted into the perfect. Perfect conditional Wrong: I should not have said it if I had thought it would have shocked her.

Right: I should not have said it if I had thought it would shock her.

238. The past participle represents action prior to that of the governing verb; the present participle action at the time expressed by the verb. Anachronous participles Wrong: It is old, being founded in 1809.

Right: It is old, having been founded in 1809.

Wrong: Starting for London, he arrived there two weeks later.

Right: He started for London and arrived there two weeks later.

EXERCISE

Correct any errors in grammar that you may find in the following sentences. Give your reasons for making changes. Grammar

1. An admirable descriptive ability piles up a succession of sharply defined impressions and convey intangible values as certainly as concrete ones. 2. A large number of the student body are going home for Thanksgiving. 3. A woman with three children, all thinly clad, were found frozen to death in the little cabin. 4. She would never have undertaken it but for you and I. 5. I felt so badly last night that I could not write my theme. 6. The question of whom should be selected to go is a very important one. 7. I think I will enjoy my classes. 8. I will gladly give her all that I have. 9. Will you go home next week? 10. I am determined that I shall pass the course. 11. I know that I will take cold if I sit here any longer. 12. He will not go if I can prevent him going. 13. Will they object to stopping on their return? 14. He said that he thought that he would leave tonight. 15. If they would want to buy it, I would be willing to sell it. 16. It was so warm that we thought we would not need our overcoats. 17. It was Franklin who said that honesty was the best policy. 18. I intended to have invited her here for the holidays. 19. Coming into the room he threw his books upon the desk. 20. A great mass of electric lights in the form of intricate designs are to be seen everywhere.

21. A large crowd, which had been watching the fight, were quickly dispersed. 22. As neither administration were in office, David Rice Atchinson of Kentucky, president of the Senate, served in the interim. 23. She has invited all of we girls. 24. I have never seen a more perfect day. 25. If I was to live my life over again, I would do just as I have done. 26. I could not understand him insisting on me reading his letter. 27. The old house stands dark and empty. 28. The crowd sat quiet at the sound of his voice. 29. Their work is as good as could be expected. 30. Who could be more fortunate than her? 31. The thing that angers me the most are his obvious attempts at flattery. 32. Those kind of people are the most difficult to understand. 33. Whom do you think will be nominated? 34. She often said that she longed to be I. 35. Every student in college, regardless of race or religion, were always welcome in his home. 36. He is a member of that radical group of students who meets every Sunday afternoon. 37. Three-fourths our wheat crop were harvested before the storm. 38. Neither brother or sister are capable of doing the work. 39. There is no doubt about who he likes the best. 40. If I had known that you had been going, I would have sent word to my mother.

41. Whether or not the city of Neenah shall go into the flying business is a question which is to be put up to the common council shortly. 42. The situation in these industries remain somewhat uncertain. 43. I sold the chair that I bought from the antique dealer. 44. Turning the corner he hurried down the street. 45. She said that she left before the news came. 46. He handed in the composition that he wrote. 47. It was a rare edition, being published in 1602. 48. There were Chinamen shuffling along in mottled silks under Oriental head coverings, with their slipper heels flapping on the sidewalks — so dogged sure of their destination. 49. The general reader as well as the student of New England history are both making the acquaintance of this book. 50. As I walked down the passageway, I noticed for the first time the dead silence of the house. I knew all the time that I was alone in the house, but now there came over me the actual realization of the fact. 51. Somebody, I do not remember whom, told me that they had moved to Chicago. 52. The president may seek advice from whoever he will. 53. He said that the subject of payments to her came up and were carefully considered.

PUNCTUATION

Punctuation between clauses
(i) Relationship between
clauses

239. The grossest errors in punctuation, the comma fault (see Rule 253) and the period fault (see Rule 73), are the result of confusion in the use of commas, semicolons, and periods between clauses. (See Grammatical Vocabulary.) This confusion, in turn, often is due to the writer's failure to organize his thoughts. For this reason, the rules which state the uses of these marks between clauses are brought together in order to make the difference clear.

The important difference in the use of commas, semicolons, and periods is one of degree. The period is the strongest mark, the semicolon next in strength, and the comma the weakest. In order to decide which mark is to be used, the writer must consider the relationship between the parts of the thought in his sentence, i.e., between the clauses. If the parts are very closely related, no mark of punctuation may be necessary, or a comma may be sufficient. If the parts are more remotely related, a semicolon may be sufficient. If, however, the relationship is so slight that the parts of the thought are not closely enough united to go into one sentence, then a period must be used. The degrees of relationship are not vague, and do not depend entirely upon the individual writer's whim. Whether the break requires a comma, a semicolon, or a period depends largely upon the kinds of clauses, the kinds of connectives, or the omission of connectives.

(a) A comma is sufficient—

(1) Between two principal clauses if they are connected by one of the pure conjunctions: and, but, for, or, nor, neither. (See Rule 253.) Note that very short clauses connected by one of the pure conjunctions do not usually require any punctuation.

Comma
between
clauses

Right: I spent the whole evening on my mathematics lesson, but I could not solve more than two problems out of ten.

Right: The winters are cold and the summers are hot.

(2) Between a subordinate clause and its principal clause if the subordinate clause precedes the principal clause. (See Rule 242 h.) If the principal clause precedes the subordinate clause, no mark of punctuation is necessary (unless the subordinate clause is non-restrictive). (See Rule 245.) A semicolon or a period should not be used between a principal clause and its subordinate clause, regardless of the order in which they are written.

Wrong: If I do not go tomorrow. She will be angry.
(Period fault.)

Wrong: If I do not go tomorrow; she will be angry.

Right: If I do not go tomorrow, she will be angry.

Right: I expect to go on with my engineering course if I pass in all of my courses; if I do not, I shall transfer to commerce. (Note that the semicolon is placed between two subordinate clauses, not between a principal clause and its subordinate clause. The semicolon is actually used to separate the principal clauses. See b following.)

Right: We expect to go as far as Chicago by train; if the roads are good from there to Detroit, we shall drive. (Note that the semicolon does not separate a subordinate clause from its principal clause.)

(b) A semicolon should be used —

(1) Between two principal clauses not joined by a

Semicolon between
clauses

pure conjunction. The gap in thought is too great for the use of a comma.

Wrong: He did not wait for an answer, he grabbed his hat and ran. (Comma fault.)

Right: He did not wait for an answer; he grabbed his hat and ran.

(2) Between principal clauses joined by one of the conjunctive adverbs: therefore, moreover, hence, etc. (See Rule 255 b.)

Right: We were delayed by the heavy rains; therefore we did not arrive in time for the meeting.

NOTE 1. — The conjunctive adverb, unlike the pure conjunction, does not need to stand between the clauses, but may occur within the second clause. Therefore it does not link the clauses so closely as the pure conjunction does.

Right: We were delayed by the heavy rains; we did not therefore arrive in time for the meeting.

NOTE 2. — If a semicolon is used, be certain that the conjunctive adverb is used between principal clauses and that the conjunctive adverb is used as a conjunctive adverb and not as an adverb.

Wrong: If he is right; then we must correct our mistake.

Right: If he is right, then we must correct our mistake.

Wrong: He may; however, be right.

Right: He may, however, be right; [or] He may however be right.

(c) A semicolon may be used between two principal clauses connected by a pure conjunction if the clauses are long and especially if they contain commas. The semicolon thus makes clear the grouping in the sentence.

The character of Machiavelli, was hateful to the new masters of Italy; and those parts of his theory which were in strict accordance with their own daily practice afforded a pretext for blackening his memory. — MACAULAY.

Bedlam would be comic, perhaps, if there were only one madman in it; and your Christmas pantomime is comic, when there is only one clown in it; but when the whole world turns clown, and paints itself red with its own heart's blood instead of vermilion, it is something else than comic, I think. — RUSKIN.

(d) A period is used between two principal clauses when the relationship in the thought is so remote that the clauses cannot be put into one sentence. Period between
clauses

Bad: Student organizations give one a training for leadership in business organizations, for they duplicate, to a large extent, conditions of a business organization; work with a student organization teaches one to coöperate with others, to take responsibility, and to direct others.

Improved: Student organizations give one a training for leadership in business organizations, for they duplicate, to a large extent, conditions of a business organization. Work with a student organization teaches one to coöperate with others, to take responsibility, and to direct others.

240. The importance or weight of clauses may suggest whether a comma, a semicolon, or a period is to be used. A semicolon or a period may be used between clauses connected by a pure conjunction, if the second clause is important even though it is short. It is given emphasis by the semicolon or period that it would not receive from the comma. (ii) Weight of clauses

There were four beds in the little upstairs room; and we slept six. — STEVENSON.

I took the story home to my father and mother and they were moved by it. For in their starved and lonely lives they had set all their hopes on me. And these hopes were liberal and fine.

— L. LEWISOHN.

THE PERIOD (.)

Close of a
sentence

241. Use the period —

(a) After a complete declarative or imperative sentence.

Abbrevia-
tions

(b) After an abbreviated word or a single or double initial letter representing a word; as etc., viz., Mrs., i.e., e.g., LL.D., *pp.

NOTE. — It is scarcely practicable to make a distinction here between abbreviations and contractions. Dr. for Doctor, Mr. for Mister, Mrs. for Mistress are usually called abbreviations although they are shortened by the omission of letters within the word. There is variation in the use of the period after them. Note that a period is not used after Miss, a contraction of Mistress.

THE COMMA (,)

242. Use the comma —

Direct
address

(a) To set off a substantive used in direct address.

Wrong: For once, Tom you are correct.

Right: For once, Tom, you are correct.

Right: Come here, my boys.

Appositives

(b) To set off appositives.

Wrong: We motored over to Greenfield, the county-seat to see the annual fair.

Right: We motored over to Greenfield, the county-seat, to see the annual fair.

Right: He introduced his uncle, Mr. Harris.

NOTE. — An appositive used to distinguish its principal from other persons or things called by the same name should not usually be separated from its principal by punctuation.

Right: The poet Masfield. Charles the Bold. My son Robert. The expression "Over the top."

Absolute
phrases

(c) To set off absolute phrases.

Wrong: It seems queer, the affair being as you say that he should be angry.

Right: It seems queer, the affair being as you say, that he should be angry.

Right: The brakes being worn, we stopped barely in time.

Right: I doubt whether they will come, the roads being so bad.

(d) To set off words, phrases, or clauses which have a parenthetical function, but for which parenthesis marks or double dashes are not suitable. (See Rules 264 b and 267.) Especially to be observed are parenthetical phrases indicating the character or the connection of a statement — for example, in the second place, of course, to tell the truth, for example, that is, in fact, I think, I believe, he says, I repeat. Parenthetical members Wrong: The house stood, I believe on this very spot.

Right: The house stood, I believe, on this very spot.

Right: For example, this morning the toast was burned.

Right: This is very considerate of you, to say the least.

Right: The trip was, to tell the truth, rather a failure.

NOTE 1. — For setting off a parenthetical expression, prefer commas to parenthesis marks where commas will make the sentence clear; but notice that the use of commas for this purpose may cause obscurity in some cases — particularly when the parenthetical expression is a complete sentence.

Obscure: By all appearances, of course this is a secret, he is likely to win.

Clear: By all appearances (of course this is a secret) he is likely to win; [or] By all appearances — of course this is a secret — he is likely to win [see Rule 264 b.]

NOTE 2. — The comma as a rule is not used to set off also, perhaps, indeed, therefore, of course, at least, in fact, nevertheless, likewise, and other parenthetical expressions that do not require a pause in reading.

NOTE 3. — This rule does not apply to however, moreover, and the other conjunctive adverbs when they are used to join principal clauses; a semicolon is necessary in such cases. (See Rule 255 b.)

Right: He will, however, understand why I did it.

Right: He will understand why I did it; however he will not approve of my doing it.

Geographical names,
addresses,
dates,
reference

(e) To separate the parts of addresses, dates, references, and geographical names.

Right: Her address is 233 West 118th Street, New York City.

Right: I returned on Friday, February 4, 1926.

Right: The quotation is from King Lear, II, 1.

Right: He lived in Summit, New Jersey.

Words in pairs

(f) To separate words or phrases that are contrasted, or arranged in pairs.

Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable.

Coördinate
clauses joined by a conjunction

(g) To separate coördinate clauses joined by one of the pure conjunctions, and, but, for, or, neither, nor, unless the clauses are short and closely connected. (Cf. Rule 255 b.)

Right: The telephone rang violently, but no one answered.

Right: The question which lay before them, and which had been argued for weeks, was still unsettled.

Right: I called but she was away.

Comma
before for

NOTE 1. — The observance of the foregoing rule is especially important in the case of clauses connected by the coördinating conjunction for. Unless a comma is placed between such clauses, the for is liable to be mistaken momentarily for a preposition.

Misleading: She was obliged to give up the dinner for her cook was leaving.

Clear. She was obliged to give up the dinner, for her cook was leaving.

NOTE 2. — This rule concerns only coördinate clauses joined by conjunctions; it does not refer to a clause containing a compound predicate of two verbs.

Comma unnecessary: He seized the rope, and hauled the boat alongside.

Right: He seized the rope and hauled the boat alongside.

NOTE 3. — Do not put the comma after the conjunction.

Wrong: The telephone rang violently but, no one answered.

Right: The telephone rang violently, but no one answered.

(h) As a rule, to set off a subordinate clause preceding its principal clause. When the subordinate clause follows the principal clause, a comma is not necessary if the clause is restrictive (See Rule 245), but a comma is usually required if the clause is non-restrictive.

Subordinate
clauses

Right: When the ship is in, the lock is closed.

Right: If you have time, telephone me from the station.

Right: Telephone me from the station if you have time.

Right: He was not in his room, though his light was burning.

Right: I am very glad to subscribe, especially since Pryor is to contribute.

Right: He told us that the boat was ready.

Right: I do not know how it occurred, and I have no idea whether Harris was mixed up in it.

(i) Usually, to set off an introductory adverbial phrase containing a verb. One not containing a verb should usually not be followed by any mark of punctuation. (But see Rule j, below.) Distinguish between adverbial phrases, that is, phrases modifying a predicate, an adjective, or an adverb; and parenthetical phrases, that is, phrases which modify the whole statement. (See Rule d, above.)

Introductory adverbial
phrases

Right: In order to live, we must eat.

Right: Despite his efforts to escape, he remained a prisoner.

Right: Upon opening the door, she smelled escaping gas. [Gerund phrase.]

Right: To succeed in your undertaking, you must follow your lawyer's advice. [Infinitive phrase.]

Right: After all the hardships he has suffered, he deserves some repose. [Phrase containing a clause.]

Right: In about an hour our belated friends arrived.

To prevent mistaken
junction

(j) To indicate separation between any sentence-elements that might be improperly joined in reading, were the comma not used.

Misleading: Ever since he has devoted himself to athletics.

Clear: Ever since, he has devoted himself to athletics.

Misleading: Inside the fire shone brightly.

Clear: Inside, the fire shone brightly.

Misleading: While we were washing the lieutenant a man for whom we had no affection, suddenly appeared.

Clear: While we were washing, the lieutenant, a man for whom we had no affection, suddenly appeared.

Ambiguous: He would not admit to himself that he loved her because she was wealthy.

Clear: He would not admit to himself that he loved her, because she was wealthy.

[A comma should be used before the abverbial because clause if the writer wishes to indicate that the clause does not modify the nearer verb.]

Ambiguous: He stepped up to his opponent shaking his fist under his nose.

Clear: He stepped up to his opponent, shaking his fist under his nose.

[Here the comma is used before the participle phrase to indicate that the phrase does not modify the nearest noun.]

For the comma before such as, see Rule 298; after namely, that is, etc., see Rule 299.

243. Two adjectives modifying the same noun should be separated by a comma if they are coördinate in thought; but if the first adjective is felt to be superposed on the second, they should not be separated by a comma. Consecutive adjectives

Right: A faithful, sincere friend. [The adjectives are coördinate in thought; both modify "friend."]

Right: A big gray cat. [The adjectives are not coördinate in thought; "gray" modifies "cat," but "big" modifies "gray cat."]

NOTE. — A comma should not be used between the last adjective and the noun it modifies.

Wrong: The heroine is a beautiful, young, and gay, lady.

Right: The heroine is a beautiful, young, and gay lady.

244. In a series of the form a, b, and c, a comma should precede the conjunction. The practice of omitting the comma before the conjunction is illogical and is not favored by the best modern usage. Series of the form a, b, and c

Objectionable: There were blue, green and red flags. [The punctuation here couples "green" and "red" and makes them appear to be set apart, as a pair, from "blue"; whereas the intention is to make all three adjectives equally distinct.]

Right: There were blue, green, and red flags.

NOTE 1. — This rule applies to a series with or or nor the same as to one with and.

Right: Is the man white, black, or yellow?

NOTE 2. — This rule applies also to phrases and clauses used in series. (See Rule 253.)

Right: The curtains fluttered, the windows rattled, and the doors slammed.

245. (a) A non-restrictive clause should be set off by the comma; a restrictive clause should not be set off by the comma. A non-restrictive clause is a Restrictive and non-restrictive modifiers: Clauses clause the omission of which would not change the meaning of the principal clause. (If it can be omitted, it can be set off by commas.) It is explanatory or parenthetical, giving additional information about a word that has already been limited or that needs no limitation.) A restrictive clause is a clause the omission of which would change the meaning of the principal clause. It limits a word that has not already been limited or defined.

Right: My old fountain pen, which never leaked or clogged, is broken. [Non-restrictive clause; can be omitted: "My old fountain pen is broken." The pen is already limited to one particular pen by the words my old fountain.]

Right: A fountain pen which leaks is worse than none. Restrictive clause; cannot be omitted: "A fountain pen is worse than none." [The pen is not already limited to one particular pen by the words a fountain.]

Right: Foch, whose genius won the war, was a theorist and a school-teacher. [Non-restrictive.]

Right: The general whose genius won the war was a theorist and a school-teacher. [Restrictive.]

NOTE. — The meaning of the sentence may be altered by the addition or omission of commas.

All of the students in this class who have not handed in the required number of themes will be failed in the course.

All of the students in this class, who have not handed in the required number of themes, will be failed in the course.

Phrases

(b) A non-restrictive phrase following its principal should be set off by the comma; a restrictive phrase following its principal should not be set off by the comma.

Right: The ruined spire, rising above the deserted village, marked the end of our journey. [Non-restrictive.]

Right: The tree standing in the corner of the garden was the favorite haunt of the children. [Restrictive.]

246. Such words as yes, no, surely, certainly, indeed may be used as introductory words or as elliptical sentences. They should be punctuated according to their use. Yes, no, surely, etc.

“Yes, it was bad,” said Austin. — MEREDITH.

“Me, Mr. Copperfield?” said Uriah. “Oh, no! I’m a very ‘umble person.” — DICKENS.

“Indeed, he is almost as good as the puppets, only of course not quite so natural.” — OSCAR WILDE.

“Indeed! But we thought you were going home?” — KIPLING.

247. After an interjection which is intended to be only mildly exclamatory, use a comma rather than an exclamation point. With interjections

Right: Oh, come when you are ready.

Right: But alas, this was not the case.

Right: Well, I am not going.

248. Separate a short direct quotation from the rest of the sentence by a comma. (Cf. Rule 257. For other rules of punctuation with quotation marks, see Rules 272–276.) Before quotations

Right: He said with a frown, “They are acting suspiciously.”

Right: “You are entirely mistaken,” she retorted.

249. Guard against the use of commas where they are not necessary. Especially, do not put a comma between a verb and its subject. As a rule, do not put a comma where no pause is made in reading. Unnecessary commas

250. Do not put a comma, or any other mark of punctuation, before the first member of a series of Misuse before a series sentence-elements unless it would be required there if one element instead of a series followed.

Wrong: During my senior year I studied, Latin, Greek, and chemistry.

Right: During my senior year I studied Latin, Greek, and chemistry.

Wrong: It is valuable, (1) to the student, (2) to the statesman, and (3) to the merchant.

Right: It is valuable (1) to the student, (2) to the statesman, and (3) to the merchant.

Misuse
after a series

251. Do not put a comma, or any other mark of punctuation, after the last member of a series of sentence-elements unless it would be required there if one element instead of a series preceded.

Wrong: Latin, French, and history, were my favorite subjects in high school.

Right: Latin, French, and history were my favorite subjects in high school.

Wrong: She planned, prepared, and served, all the meals without any help.

Right: She planned, prepared, and served all the meals without any help.

Misuse
before a substantive clause

252. Put no comma before a substantive clause introduced by that or how when the governing verb (such as said, thought, supposed) immediately or very closely precedes the clause.

Wrong: The boatswain said, that the wheel was damaged.

Right: The boatswain said that the wheel was damaged.

Wrong: I always supposed, that the foreman was to blame.

Right: I always supposed that the foreman was to blame.

Wrong: They told us, how they had escaped.

Right: They told us how they had escaped.

253. Do not use a comma between coördinate principal clauses that are not joined by one of the pure conjunctions, and, but, for, or, neither, nor, except when the clauses are short, have no commas within themselves, and are closely parallel in form and substance. Use a semicolon if it is rhetorically desirable to indicate close relationship between the clauses; otherwise use a period. This error is an inexcusable fault in writing, because, like the "period fault" (see Rule 73), it shows inability to recognize what constitutes a sentence. (See Rules 255 a and 255 b.)

Comma
fault

Wrong: He had not the habit of concentration, this was the cause of his failure.

Right: He had not the habit of concentration; this was the cause of his failure.

Wrong: He threw the weapon from him, it clattered noisily on the floor.

Right: He threw the weapon from him; it clattered noisily on the floor.

Wrong: We have won for two years, if we win today, we retain the trophy.

Right: We have won for two years; if we win today, we retain the trophy.

Wrong: Oh, come, you'd better.

Right: Oh, come; you'd better.

Right: The curtains fluttered, the windows rattled, the doors slammed.

Right: Nothing future is quite secure; states enough have inwardly rotted; and democracy as a whole may undergo self-poisoning. — WILLIAM JAMES.
[Although the clauses are closely parallel in form, yet commas would be too light.]

NOTE 1. — A worse fault than the "comma fault" is that of putting together two principal clauses without any mark of punctuation.

Wrong: I enjoyed my week in Chicago it was my first visit there.

Right: I enjoyed my week in Chicago. It was my first visit there.

NOTE 2. — A comma is sufficient between a statement and a question depending upon that statement.

Right: You are leaving today, aren't you?

Wrong: I liked the play very much, did you?

Right: I liked the play very much. Did you? [or]
I liked the play very much; did you?

NOTE 3. — In a sentence beginning with a that-clause from which the that is omitted, a comma is sufficient between the that-clause and the principal clause. In such cases the comma is not being used between principal clauses.

Right: Our vacation is over, I am sorry to say. [I am sorry to say that our vacation is over.]

Right: He will stay longer, he tells me. [He tells me that he will stay longer.]

Right: She did not understand a word of his talk, it could clearly be seen. [It could clearly be seen that she did not understand a word of his talk.]

Right: You can hardly walk, the chickens gather so closely about your feet. [The chickens gather so closely about your feet that you can hardly walk.]

Punctuation
consistent

254. Punctuation should be consistent throughout a sentence. Coördinate elements should be punctuated alike.

Wrong: We liked the house very much because it was on a quiet side street; because it had a large yard, and because it was spacious enough for our family.

Right: We liked the house very much because it was on a quiet side street, because it had a large yard, and because it was spacious enough for our family.

Wrong: A salesman should have a pleasing appearance; a courteous, and agreeable manner, and a persuasive tongue.

Right: A salesman should have a pleasing appearance, a courteous and agreeable manner, and a persuasive tongue.

Wrong: In the yard the pig iron is weighed; the grade of iron is marked on it, and it is then loaded upon cars.

Right: In the yard the pig iron is weighed, the grade of iron is marked on it, and it is then loaded upon cars.

Wrong: She had every kind of misfortune, her father's death, her mother's illness the loss of their property, but she continued her college work and graduated with high honors.

Right: She had every kind of misfortune: her father's death, her mother's illness, the loss of their property; but she continued her college work and graduated with high honors.

THE SEMICOLON (;)

255. Use the semicolon —

Between
clauses of a compound
sentence

(a) Between clauses of a compound sentence that are not joined by a conjunction.

Right: He did not go to Canada; he went to Mexico.

NOTE. — As a means of combining sentences into compound sentences, the semicolon may easily be abused. A series of sentences should not be grouped together in this way unless the compound sentence so formed has a distinct and readily felt unity.

Caution

(b) Between clauses of a compound sentence that are joined by one of the conjunctive adverbs, so, therefore, hence, however, nevertheless, moreover, accordingly, besides, also, thus, then, still, otherwise, and in fact.

Before so,
therefore,
etc.

Wrong: I saw no reason for moving, therefore I stayed still.

Right: I saw no reason for moving; therefore I stayed still.

Wrong: He went below and lit the fuse, then he returned to the deck.

Right: He went below and lit the fuse; then he returned to the deck.

Conjunctive adverbs distinguished from simple conjunctions

NOTE. — Good usage makes a clear distinction, as regards punctuation, between conjunctive adverbs and simple coördinating conjunctions (e.g., and, but, or, for). A comma is ordinarily used (see Rule 242 g) between clauses of a compound sentence that are connected by a simple conjunction; but a comma should emphatically not be used between clauses connected by a conjunctive adverb. Compare the two following sentences:

Right: The president bowed, and Hughes began to speak.

Right: The president bowed; then Hughes began to speak.

Before and, but, etc., in certain cases

(c) Ordinarily, between the clauses of a compound sentence that are joined by a simple conjunction, when these clauses are somewhat long, or are subdivided by commas.

Right: The care of his own health and morals is the greatest trust which is committed to a young man; and often the loss of ability, the degeneracy of character, the want of self-control are due to his neglect of them. — BENJAMIN JOWETT.

Between involved sentence-members

(d) To separate two or more coördinate members of a simple or complex sentence when those members, or some of them, have commas within themselves.

Right: He said that he had lent his neighbor an ax; that on the next day, needing the ax, he had gone to get it; and that his neighbor had denied borrowing it. [The three objects of "said" are separated not by commas, as ordinarily three objects of a verb should be, but by semicolons, because one of the objects has commas within itself.]

Instead of a comma, to prevent obscurity

(e) To separate any two members of a simple or complex sentence when, for any reason, a comma would not make the relation between them immediately clear.

Misleading: If I were a millionaire, I would have horses, and motors, and yachts, and the whole world should minister to my pleasure.

Clear: If I were a millionaire, I would have horses, and motors, and yachts; and the whole world should minister to my pleasure.

256. Do not use a semicolon between two members of a simple or complex sentence except in accordance with Rule 255 d or 255 e; use a comma if any punctuation is required at such a place.

Improper use in place of a comma

Wrong: If you get no thanks from a person you have favored; you have no respect for him.

Right: If you get no thanks from a person you have favored, you have no respect for him.

Wrong: He was black-eyed; dark-complexioned; and altogether very handsome.

Right: He was black-eyed, dark-complexioned, and altogether very handsome.

Right: Well, there I might live, I said; and there I did live, for an hour, a summer and a winter life; saw how I could let the years run off, buffet the winter through, and see the spring come in. — THOREAU.

[Note that the semicolons are used between principal clauses, the second semicolon being followed by an elliptical clause.]

THE COLON (:)

257. The colon should be used after a word, phrase, or sentence constituting an introduction to something that follows, such as a list, an extended quotation, or instances or explanation of a general statement preceding.

A sign of introduction

Right: There are three causes: poverty, injustice, and indolence.

Right: Burke said in 1765: [A long quotation follows].

Right: The case was this: I wouldn't and he couldn't.

Right: He did it in the following way: First, he cut an ash bough, which he bent into a hoop. Then . . .

Use after a salutation

258. A colon may be used after the salutation of a business letter.

Right: Dear Sir: Gentlemen: My dear Mr. Harris:

Use in titles,
references, numerals

259. A colon is used between the parts of titles, references, and numerals.

Right: The Ordeal of Richard Feverel: a History of a Father and Son.

Right: Proverbs 28:20.

Right: 6:15 P.M.

Misuse
before informal series, etc.

260. A colon is not used before an informal series or before an indirect quotation.

Wrong: You should wear: a heavy dress and a warm coat.

Right: You should wear a heavy dress and a warm coat.

Wrong: She said: that she could not come.

Right: She said that she could not come.

THE QUESTION MARK (?)

Direct, not indirect questions

261. Use the question mark after a direct question, but not after an indirect question.

Bad: He asked what caused the accident?

Right: He asked what caused the accident.

Right: He asked, "What caused the accident?"

Right: Will he come? and how long will he stay?

Use for conjectural statement

262. Use the question mark between parentheses to indicate that a statement is conjectural. It should not be used as a notice of humor or irony. (Cf. Rules 284 e and 388.)

Right: This event occurred in 411 B.C.(?)

Wrong: After his polite (?) remarks, we have nothing to say.

Right: After his polite remarks, we have nothing to say.

THE EXCLAMATION MARK (!)

263. Use the exclamation mark after a sentence, a virtual sentence, an exclamation in question form, or an interjection, to indicate strong emotion. Use of exclamation mark Right: I cannot and will not believe it!

Right: A pretty situation! What! How dare you say so!

THE DASH (—)

264. Use the dash —

(a) When a sentence is abruptly broken off before its completion.

Interruptions

Right: If the scythe is rusty — by the way, did you get that scythe at Pumphrey's?

(b) As a substitute for parenthesis marks. (See Rule 267.) Parenthetical use Right: I dressed — you may not believe this, but it is true — in ten minutes.

(c) Before a sentence-element summarizing the preceding part of a sentence. With summarizing words

Right: If you go to bed early, get up early, never loiter or trifle, always employ periods of enforced idleness in serious thought or instructive reading — if you do all this, you will be derided by the Omicron Pi Chi fraternity.

(d) Before a repetition or modification having the effect of an afterthought. Before an expression having the effect of an afterthought Right: Oh yes, he was polite — polite as a Chesterfield — obsequious in fact.

(e) After the word immediately preceding a sentence-element that is set apart on the page from the first part of the sentence. For illustration, see the text of Rules 242, 255, 264, 270, 276, and 284, and the Right examples under Rule 350. When a sentence-member is set apart on the page

NOTE. — If another mark of punctuation precedes the sentence-member set apart, the dash may be dispensed with. See the Right examples under Rules 348 and 349.

Before appositives

(f) Before an appositive that is prepared for by the preceding words; or before an appositive that is separated by several words from its principal substantive.

Right: I wish to ask regarding one particular law — the pension law.

Right: One of my old classmates hailed me on the street — a man named Roberts.

Comma
and dash

265. Commas may precede both dashes if a comma would be required were the material within the dashes to be omitted. Usage permits the omission of commas with dashes, however, even when the commas would be required if the dashes and the matter between them were omitted.

Right: If you should see him, — you might meet him on the train, — give him my message.

Right: If you should see him — you might meet him on the train — give him my message. [If you should see him give him my message.]

Right: The ruined spire, rising above the deserted village, — it has not been rebuilt since the war, — marked the end of our journey. [The ruined spire, rising above the deserted village, marked the end of our journey.]

Right: The ruined spire, rising above the deserted village — it had not been rebuilt since the war — marked the end of our journey.

NOTE. — The comma and the dash together are more emphatic than the dash alone. For this reason, a comma is sometimes used before a dash preceding a repeated word.

Right: Differences of course there are between the human type as developed in different regions of the country, — differences moral and intellectual as well as physical. — JAMES BRYCE.

266. Do not use dashes indiscriminately, where commas, periods, or other marks of punctuation belong. The free use of dashes as substitutes for other kinds of punctuation is a careless, slipshod, and debilitating practice that should be avoided like any excess.

Indiscriminate use

PARENTHESES ()

267. Material that is indirectly related to the main thought of the sentence may be put into parentheses. Parentheses, dashes, and commas are all used to set off parenthetical material. (See Rules 242 d and 264 b.) Commas are used for material closely related to the main thought, dashes and parentheses for material more remotely related. Dashes should be used for informal material, and parentheses for formal.

Indirectly related material

Right: She had, as strong natures always have, an unbounded confidence in her luck. — J. R. GREEN.

Right: And meantime there goes the idler, who began life along with them — by your leave — a different picture. — STEVENSON.

Right: The interpretation of "nature" for its own sake (in the narrower sense in which "nature" is opposed to man) is a modern and romantic development that would have been unintelligible to a Greek.

— G. L. DICKINSON.

268. When the parentheses and another mark of punctuation occur together —

Relative position of other marks

(a) The mark of punctuation follows the second parenthesis of the pair when this mark applies to the sentence containing the parentheses and not to the passage in parentheses. Note that the mark of punctuation should not precede the first parenthesis.

Wrong: I will ask him by telephone, (assuming he has a telephone) and I think he will agree (though I may be mistaken.)

Wrong: I will ask him by telephone (assuming he has a telephone,) and I think he will agree, (though I may be mistaken.)

Right: I will ask him by telephone (assuming he has a telephone), and I think he will agree (though I may be mistaken).

Right: The general law, then, respecting just or economical exchange, is simply this: There must be advantage on both sides (or if only advantage on one, at least no disadvantage on the other) to the persons exchanging; and just payment for his time, intelligence, and labor, to any intermediate person effecting the transaction (commonly called a merchant); and whatever advantage there is on either side, and whatever pay is given to the intermediate person, should be thoroughly known to all concerned. — RUSKIN.

(b) The mark of punctuation precedes the second parenthesis of the pair when this mark applies to the passage in parentheses.

Right: This essay ("Literature and Science") was first published in 1882.

Right: In general, the war powers of the President cannot be precisely defined, but must remain somewhat vague and uncertain. (See Wilson's Constitutional Government in the United States.)

Right: I will ask him by telephone (I do not wish to see him!) and I think he will agree (though I may be mistaken).

Incorrect
use of commas with parentheses

269. A comma should not be used with parentheses unless it would be required were there no parenthetical matter.

Wrong: The sheriff gave him (as his oath required), the most effective help. [The sentence "The sheriff gave him the most effective help" requires no comma after "him."]

Right: The sheriff gave him (as his oath required) the most effective help.

270. Do not use parentheses to enclose matter that is not parenthetical. Do not use them — Misuse in general

(a) To emphasize a word; italicize. (See Rule 379.) Misuse for emphasis Bad: "The man (who) they thought was dead surprised them" is correct.

Right: "The man who they thought was dead surprised them" is correct.

(b) To enclose a word about which something is said as a word. Such words should be italicized. (See Rule 379.) Misuse with words discussed Wrong: (Party) is often incorrectly used for (person).

Right: Party is often incorrectly used for person.

(c) To indicate the title of a book; italicize. (See Rule 379.) Misuse with literary titles Wrong: Garland's story (Among the Corn Rows) is pathetic.

Right: Garland's story Among the Corn Rows is pathetic.

(d) To enclose a letter, number, or symbol, unless it is used parenthetically. Misuse with letters and symbols

Bad: A (v) shaped plate of steel.

Right: A v-shaped plate of steel.

Bad: It is marked with the figure (2).

Right: It is marked with the figure 2.

(e) To cancel a word or passage. (See Rule 342.) Misuse for canceling

BRACKETS []

271. Square brackets, [], are used to enclose a word or words interpolated in a quotation by the person quoting. Words enclosed in parentheses, (), occurring in a quotation, are understood to belong to the quotation; words enclosed in brackets, [], are understood to be interpolated by the writer quoting. Words interpolated in a quotation

Right: "I would gladly," writes Landor, "see our language enriched . . . At present [in the nineteenth century] we recur to the Latin and reject the Saxon . . ."

QUOTATION MARKS (" ")

NOTE. — See Rules 155–158 for the paragraphing of direct quotations and of dialogues, and Rule 371 for the capitalization of direct quotations and of dialogues.

For direct,
not indirect,
quotations

272. Use quotation marks to enclose a direct quotation, but not to enclose an indirect quotation.

Wrong: He said "that he was grieved."

Right: He said that he was grieved.

Right: He said, "I am grieved."

Omission

273. Do not fail to put quotation marks at the beginning and the end of every quotation.

Misuse
within a
quotation

274. Do not punctuate sentences of a single speech as if they were separate speeches.

Bad: She said, "Is this the truth?" "Then I must tell my husband." "He ought to know."

Right: She said, "Is this the truth? Then I must tell my husband. He ought to know."

Note, however, that sentences that are not parts of a single speech should be punctuated as separate quotations.

Right: He antagonized nearly every one there by such sweeping statements as: "All of the officers were crooks; they got as much as they could by graft"; and "Ireland deserves all that she gets from England."

Right: We heard such questions as these: "Can I get a taxi?" "Oh! do you think I have missed the train?" "When does the next train go South?"

Quotations
with said he interpolated:

275. When an expression like said he is interpolated within a quotation or placed after it, the following rules apply:

(a) The expression should not be included within the quotation marks at the beginning and the end of the quotation. Said he: excluded

Wrong: "If that is true, he said, I am lost."

Right: "If that is true," he said, "I am lost."

(b) The quoted words preceding the expression should be followed by a question mark or an exclamation mark if they form a complete interrogatory or exclamatory sentence; otherwise by a comma; never by a period or semicolon. (See Rule 276 e.) Marks after part preceding said he

Wrong: "Will you help." he asked?

Right: "Will you help?" he asked.

Wrong: "I will help" he answered.

Right: "I will help," he answered.

Wrong: "I will help you;" he said, "you deserve it."

Right: "I will help you," he said; "you deserve it."

NOTE. — If a question is interrupted by the expression, the question mark is placed at the end of the sentence.

Right: "Are you planning to teach," he asked, "after you have taken your degree?"

(c) If the quoted words preceding the expression form a complete sentence, a period should follow the expression, even if a question or exclamation mark follows the words preceding. Marks after said he Period

Wrong: "Won't you come?" she said, "we need you."

Right: "Won't you come?" she said. "We need you."

(d) If, but for the expression, the quoted words preceding the expression would be followed by a semicolon, a semicolon should follow the expression. Semicolon

Right: "He didn't go to Canada," the teller informed me; "he went to Mexico."

(e) In every case in which no other mark of punctuation is required (according to Rules b, c, and d, above) Comma after the expression, a comma should follow the expression.

Right: "I am," growled the assassin, "your doomsman."

Relative
position of other marks of
punctuation

276. When a quotation mark and another mark of punctuation both follow the same word —

(a) A semicolon, colon, dash, a question mark, or an exclamation mark should stand first if it applies to the quotation and not to the sentence containing the quotation.

Wrong: He said, "Are you hurt"?

Right: He said, "Are you hurt?"

Right: "I am in such a hurry that — " she began, but she was gone before she had finished.

(b) The quotation mark should stand first if the semicolon, colon, dash, question mark, or exclamation mark applies, not to the quotation, but to the sentence containing the quotation.

Right: And, therefore, it is justly said of the Jewish people, who were charged with setting powerfully forth that side of the divine order to which the words conscience and self-conquest point, that they were "entrusted with the oracles of God"; as it is justly said of Christianity, which followed Judaism and which set forth this side with a much deeper effectiveness and a much wider influence, that the wisdom of the old Pagan world was foolishness compared to it. — ARNOLD.

Right: "I do not mean that I want to be poor; but there was a middle state" — so she was pleased to ramble on — "in which I am sure we were a great deal happier." — LAMB.

Right: He gave us this summary of "Sweetness and Light": Culture aims to make real beauty and intelligence prevail for every one.

Right: Did the letter say, "Come tonight at ten"?

(c) No comma or period should be used in addition to the quotation mark and the question or exclamation mark.

Wrong: He cried "Fire!", and began to run.

Right: He cried "Fire!" and began to run.

Wrong: Did he say, "I object."?

Right: Did he say, "I object"?

(d) A period or a comma should always precede, Period or comma always inside not follow, the quotation mark.

Right: "If you have a light," said John, "give it to me."

Right: He asked if I carried what he called "the makings," but I could not satisfy him.

(e) A semicolon or a colon should always follow, Colon or semicolon always outside not precede, the quotation mark.

Right: I have seen that "abode of poverty"; and the "poverty" is truly marvelous.

Right: I have this to say regarding the man's "abject poverty": that it is fictitious.

(f) Ellipsis marks and the abbreviation etc. indicating an omission from a quoted passage precede the quotation mark.

Right: "It is not given to us all to discover great general truths that are a light to all men and to future generations. . . ." L. S. MILLS.

277. Titles of literary, musical, and artistic works Titles and of periodicals may be inclosed in quotation marks, but the preferred practice is to italicize titles of whole publications or works and to use quotation marks for the titles of chapters, articles, etc. (See Rule 380.)

Right: The second chapter of Meredith's Evan Harrington is entitled "The Heritage of the Son."

Quotation
within a
quotation

278. A quotation within a quotation is marked by single quotation marks; one within that by double marks.

Wrong: I repeated those lines of Tennyson,
"Thou shalt hear the "Never, never," whispered by
the phantom years,
And a song from out the distance in the ringing of thine ears,"
until I knew them by heart.

Right: I repeated those lines of Tennyson,
"Thou shalt hear the 'Never, never,' whispered by
the phantom years,
And a song from out the distance in the ringing of
thine ears,"
until I knew them by heart.

Wrong: "Then," continued Brightman, "the captain
shouted, "Cast off!"

Right: "Then," continued Brightman, "the captain shouted, 'Cast off!'"

Quotations
of several paragraphs

279. When a quotation consists of several paragraphs (see Rule 349), quotation marks should be placed at the beginning of each paragraph, and at the end of the quotation; not elsewhere, except in accordance with Rule 275 a. For illustration, see the example under Rule 349.

Author's words in indirect
quotation

280. Quotation marks are used for direct borrowings and not for the ideas of an author put into other words. If, however, the author's words are embedded in an indirect quotation, they should be quoted.

Right: Newman's "great writer" is not one who can merely turn out "swelling sentences," but one who "has something to say and knows how to say it."

Quoted sentences in a context

281. Quoted sentences may be embedded in a context without capitals or periods. (A period would, of course, be required if the quoted sentence came at the end of the context.)

Right: Bacon's aphoristic style can be illustrated by such sentences as these: "studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability"; "reading maketh a full man; conference a ready man; and writing an exact man"; and "revenge is a kind of wild justice; which the more man's nature runs to, the more ought law to weed it out."

282. Quotation marks may sometimes be used to mark a technical term presumably unfamiliar to the reader.

With unfamiliar technical terms

Right: "Copy" for the printer should be prepared with great care.

Right: That kind of rhyme is called "feminine rhyme."

NOTE. — No such marking is needed for technical or quasi-technical terms that are perfectly familiar to the reader. None is ordinarily needed, for instance, for wire-puller, boss, off-year, touch-down, kick-off, haze, corner the market.

Familiar technical terms

283. Quotation marks may sometimes be used to indicate apology for slang or nicknames. But note:

Slang and nicknames

(a) No such apology is needed for hard hit, brace up, rough it, to duck, to oust, to loaf, to cut a figure, the whys and wherefores, the forties, willynilly, day dreams, proxy, bugbear, humbug, hoax, tomfoolery, bamboozle, whoop, ninny, milksop, skinflint, parson, and other good English expressions wrongly supposed to be slang.

Good English mistaken for slang

(b) In a humorous or colloquial context such apology for slang or for nicknames is artistically inconsistent with the style, and obstructs the legitimate purpose of the style.

Apology out of place

Inartistic: When radicalism "threw up its hat" for "Rob" Rowland, "rough-house," and reform, conservatism "took to the tall timbers." "Rob," though "cock of the walk" in the capital, has been "sassed" by his home paper, which attributes his influence to hypnotism and "hot air."

Improved in effectiveness: When radicalism threw up its hat for Rob Rowland, rough-house, and reform, conservatism took to the tall timbers. Rob, though cock of the walk in the capital, has been sassed by his home paper, which attributes his influence to hypnotism and hot air.

Nicknames that are virtually proper names

(c) The nicknames of persons in real life or in fiction who are known by nicknames altogether, or as commonly as by their proper names, should not be enclosed in quotation marks.

Wrong: "Cal" Coolidge, "Battling" Nelson, "Al" Smith, "Babe" Ruth and "Bill" Hart, were present.

Right: Cal Coolidge, Battling Nelson, Al Smith, Babe Ruth, and Bill Hart were present.

Wrong: Two women, "the Duchess" and "Mother" Shipton, and two men, Mr. Oakhurst and "Uncle Billy," were ordered to leave town.

Right: Two women, the Duchess and Mother Shipton, and two men, Mr. Oakhurst and Uncle Billy, were ordered to leave town.

Wrong: As I was "bucking" for "Perky's" "quiz," I was interrupted by "Fatty" Holmes and "Smudge" Williams, who refused to "clear out."
[See Rule b, above.]

Right: As I was cramming for Perky's quiz, I was interrupted by Fatty Holmes and Smudge Williams, who refused to clear out.

Sundry
misuses:
With the title of a composition

284. Do not use quotation marks—

(a) To enclose the title at the head of a composition, unless the title is a quotation.

(b) To enclose proper names, including names of animals. With proper names

Wrong: I expect to go to "Oberammergau."

Right: I expect to go to Oberammergau.

Wrong: "Thomas" and "Rover" were good friends.

Right: Thomas and Rover were good friends.

(c) To enclose proverbial expressions that do not constitute grammatically and logically complete statements. With proverbs

Wrong: It was "nipped in the bud."

Right: It was nipped in the bud.

Wrong: He seemed to be "as mad as a March hare."

Right: He seemed to be as mad as a March hare.

(d) To enclose words coined extempore. With words coined extempore

Wrong: The manning and "womaning" of the enterprise will be difficult.

Right: The manning and womaning of the enterprise will be difficult.

Wrong: It is not bronchitis or peritonitis or any of the "itises."

Right: It is not bronchitis or peritonitis or any of the itises.

(e) To serve the undignified and inartistic purpose of labeling your own humor or irony. (Cf. Rules 262 and 388.) For labeling humor

Bad: Such is the ardor of this "pious" Hotspur.

Right: Such is the ardor of this pious Hotspur.

Bad: Senator Platt's speech on the bill was a sort of "funeral oration."

Right: Senator Platt's speech on the bill was a sort of funeral oration.

(f) To enclose expressions which are quotations in form only. With quotations in form only Right: He resolved to himself: now, I'll hand in all of my themes on time.

Right: She thought to herself: I'll never do that again.

Right: She said to herself: I might have known that would happen.

Use without any reason

(g) For no reason at all.

Bad: If the Creator in his "power and munificence" is good to me, I shall gain "distinguished success."

Right: If the Creator in his power and munificence is good to me, I shall gain distinguished success.

THE APOSTROPHE (')

Possessive
case

285. Use the apostrophe to indicate the possessive case.

Right: Milton's poems; the girl's hat; the lady's dress; the ladies' dresses.

Position
of the apostrophe

286. In the possessive singular of a noun an apostrophe should precede the inflectional s; e.g., "the boy's cap." In the possessive plural of a noun of which the nominative plural ends in s, an apostrophe should follow the final s; e.g., "the boys' caps." In the possessive plural of other nouns, an apostrophe should precede the final s; e.g., men's, women's, children's, oxen's.

Nouns
ending
in s

287. Do not form the possessive singular of a noun ending in s by putting an apostrophe before or after the s; add 's to the complete word. If a word of two or more syllables ends in s and is not accented on the last syllable, the possessive may be formed by adding either the apostrophe or 's.

Wrong: Dicken's novels. Burn's poems.

Right: Dickens' novels, or Dickens's novels.

Right: Burns's poems.

Right: For conscience' sake. For righteousness' sake.

288. Never use an apostrophe with the possessive adjectives its, hers, ours, yours, theirs. The form it's is a contraction for it is. The possessive singular of one should be written one's and the possessive plural ones'. Misuse with its, etc.

NOTE. — Do not use the possessive with the intensives and reflexives.

Wrong: one'self

Right: oneself

289. If the possessive case is used for inanimate objects, the apostrophe should not be omitted. (See Rule 217.) With inanimate objects Right: an hour's delay; a day's work; two weeks' vacation, a hair's breadth.

290. In a contracted word an apostrophe should stand in the place of the omitted letter or letters, not elsewhere. With contractions Wrong: Hav'nt, do'nt, does'nt, ca'nt, is'nt, oclock.

Right: Haven't, don't, doesn't, can't, isn't, o'clock.

291. The plural of letters of the alphabet and of numerical symbols is formed by adding 's to the letter or symbol. The plural of a word considered as a word may also be formed in the same way. But the regular plural of a noun should never be formed by adding 's. The apostrophe is commonly omitted from the plural of figures referring to interest-bearing bonds. In forming plurals

Right: His U's were like V's and his 2's like Z's.

Right: In your letter there are too many I's and also too many and's.

Wrong: The Powers's, the Jones's, the Waters's and the Rogers's sold piano's and folio's.

Right: The Powerses, the Joneses, the Waterses, and the Rogerses sold pianos and folios.

Right: Rock Island 4s.

THE HYPHEN (-)

Compound
words

292. Hyphenate an adjective formed of two or more words when used before the noun. Examples:

(a) (Noun plus adjective) dirt-cheap, coal-black, water-tight.

(b) (Adjective plus noun or noun plus noun, plus d or ed) bright-eyed, strong-minded, silver-tongued, bull-necked, eagle-eyed.

(c) (Adverb plus participle, or numeral plus noun) far-reaching, well-meaning, well-educated, worn-out, three-inch.

(d) (Participle preceded by a substantive denoting means or agency) self-possessed, iron-clad, tear-stained.

(e) (Noun, adjective, participle, or gerund preceded by the name of an object acted upon or concerned) tax-collector, dog-catcher, self-control, labor-saving.

(f) (Groups of words which are to be read as a single part of speech, when the omission of the hyphen might obscure the sense) a matter-of-fact statement, my right-hand man, a high-school graduate, a month-old baby, an all-around man.

NOTE. — To-day, to-night, to-morrow, good-bye are sometimes written with a hyphen.

No simple rule can be given for determining whether a compound word should be hyphenated or written "solid." One must simply learn, from observation and from dictionaries, what is the correct practice in each case. Note that the following words should not be hyphenated: together, without, nevertheless, moreover, inasmuch, instead, childhood, farewell, wardrobe, chipmunk, nickname, surname, midnight, railroad, misprint, pronoun, semicolon, withstand, outstretch, rewrite.

293. Do not join an adverb in ly to an adjective or participle; e.g., carefully laid plans.

294. Use a hyphen between the numerator and the denominator of a fraction written in words unless either part is written with a hyphen; three-fourths, three twenty-fourths, nineteenth, thirty-one fortieths. Do not hyphenate one half in "He gave me one half and kept the other half."

295. Usually hyphenate compounds of fellow, father, mother, brother, sister, daughter, great, life, world, ex, pan, ultra, and of a noun derived from a transitive verb.

Examples: fellow-beings, father-in-law, mother-tongue, great-grandmother, life-interest, world-power, ex-President Taft, pan-American, ultra-violet, story-teller.

296. Use a hyphen in compound numbers from twenty-one to ninety-nine. Use with numerals Right: twenty-six; sixty-three; but one hundred thirty.

297. In dividing a word at the end of a line (see Rules 352-355 below), place a hyphen after the first element of the word, and there only; never put a hyphen at the beginning of a line. At the beginning of a line

MISCELLANEOUS RULES

298. When such as is used to introduce one or more short examples, it is usually preceded by a comma. Punctuation with such as
When it introduces a long or complicated example or series of examples, it may be preceded by a semicolon or dash. It is usually followed by no mark of punctuation unless a parenthetical expression is inserted between the such as and the word that it introduces.

Right: I read many historical novels, such as Romola, Rienzi, and Quo Vadis.

Right: He asked us about a number of rules of punctuation: such as the use of the comma with non-restrictive relative clauses; the use of the semicolon between clauses of a compound sentence, etc.

Punctuation
with namely,
viz., etc.

299. In introducing an example or an explanation with one of the expressions namely, viz., e.g., that is, and i.e., apply the following rules:

(a) The expression should be followed by a comma.

Wrong: I selected it for two reasons namely: because it was well made, and because it was inexpensive.

Right: I selected it for two reasons: namely, because it was well made and because it was inexpensive.

NOTE. — When the expression introduces a sentence or a principal clause, it may be followed by a colon.

Right: Dickens's novels were influential in bringing about social reform in England; for example: the measures for the treatment of the poor were greatly improved through Oliver Twist and Our Mutual Friend; the debtors' laws were amended through Little Dorrit; the procedure in the court of Chancery was remedied through Bleak House; and the conditions in boys' schools were changed through David Copperfield.

(b) When the expression introduces a sentence or a principal clause, the expression should be preceded by a period or a semicolon (see Rules 253, 255 a).

Right: There is a vital difference between them; i.e., the Greek is an artist, and the Roman is a statesman.

(c) When the expression introduces a merely appositive member, or several such, the expression should be preceded by a semicolon (see Rule 255 e), by a dash (see Rule 264 a), or by a colon (see Rule 257).

Right: They arrested the man who was really responsible — namely, the cashier.

Right: There are three parties: namely, Tories, Whigs, and Radicals.

NOTE. — When the expression and the words it introduces are enclosed in parentheses, the foregoing Rules b and c do not apply.

300. Never put a period, a comma, a semicolon, a colon, an exclamation point, or a question mark at the beginning of a line; put it instead at the end of the preceding line.

Marks of punctuation at the beginning of lines

NOTE. — A dash may be placed either at the end of a line or at the beginning of the following line.

EXERCISE 1

Punctuate the following sentences. State the reason for the use of each mark of punctuation.

General exercise in punctuation

1. Surely Emma you will not go out in this storm 2. Your answer by the way brings up another question 3. He wrote that theme you would hardly believe it during the class hour 4. Never have I heard such nonsense 5. Congress felt somewhat as did Hamilton that a declaration of war would be a useless formality against a horde of pirates as the Barbary Powers were considered but to remove the Presidents scruples an act was passed empowering him to proceed with hostilities 6. The title page reads thus Pamela or Virtue Rewarded in a series of familiar letters from a beautiful young damsel to her parents published in order to cultivate the principles of virtue and religion in the minds of the youth of both sexes 7. It is curious how odors everlastingly haunt me I remember my aunts fragrant hen house not the house itself by any means but that peculiar penetrating smell typical of fowl roosts 8. The delay being longer than we expected we did not arrive until night 9. She unpacked her trunk and settled down for a long visit an hour after she was gone 10. I had reached the age when boys begin to long for bebe guns bicycles and carbide lamps and to make extensive collections of badges marbles stamps and knives

11. My new address will be 816 Wabash Avenue Chicago Illinois 12. She often prepared the dinner for her mother did not come home until late in the afternoon 13. I might dive under into or over the breakers according as to what was most expedient at the time the breakers had a lot to do with this 14. Before I started to work my father bought me my first pair of long trousers 15. In Oxford and Cambridge than which no universities have turned out finer cleaner more manly more highly cultivated and more practically trained scholars statesmen empire builders or more generous enthusiasts for general athletics and clean sport in Oxford and Cambridge the purpose is study and the honors are paid to the scholar. — C. M. GAYLEY. 16. The largest part of the day however was spent lazily basking in the sun 17. With several manufactured sets of miniature steel beams girders pulleys etc I set up monumental structures of all kinds 18. While we were cooking the boys raced into the tent 19. All of the children who whispered when the teacher was out of the room must stay after school 20. When you come to see us again you know that you are coming soon you must plan to stay longer 21. For the first assignment in the textbook we shall use the same text as last semester read all of the tenth chapter 22. He really should not have been a coward if one believes in heredity because his forefathers for several generations had been pioneers and Indian fighters 23. It threw a dark shadow over all my waking thoughts try as I might to control them and filled my nights with restless panic stricken dreams 24. I said with conviction I was afraid this time and I know I shall be next time 25. Indeed I shall do no such thing

26. Oh don't hurry I have plenty of time 27. In the spring when my mother helped plant the corn which was dropped by hand into the furrow I had to keep the chickens from the supply of seed and also to keep them from picking up the kernels in the row until they were covered 28. Mother never allowed the farm work of which there was always plenty to encroach upon my schooling she always said that her children should have an education even if she couldnt give them anything else 29. You are returning to the university in the fall arent you 30. A man will feel the loss of money more keenly than loss of his bodily health so long as he can keep his money take his money away and deprive him of the means of earning any more and his health will soon break up but leave him his money and even though his health breaks up and he dies he does not mind it so much as we think. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

31. When I applied for the position I had to answer many questions such as my church affiliation my age my fathers occupation the number in my family etc 32. There is only one clause in the Constitution which expressly confers upon the President any power relating directly to war namely the clause which makes him Commander in Chief of the army and navy of the United States and of the militia of the several states when called into the actual service of the United States 33. I am going to move for two reasons namely my room is not warm enough and I am too far from the campus 34. I got the highest mark in the course I dreaded the most namely mathematics 35. The house had no floor and a part of its roof had long since been blown away however my father made it over into a fairly comfortable home for us 36. It is not only when we cross the seas that we go abroad there are foreign parts of England and the race that has conquered so wide an empire has not yet managed to assimilate the islands whence she sprang. — R. L. STEVENSON. 37. You can count on the childrens not understanding what you are talking about 38. If he gave me three fourths and I returned one half what have I left 39. I have missed two weeks work 40. There are too many sos in your theme 41. He is a half breed Indian 42. Oh she answered cant you forget your foolish acting for just a little while 43. For several minutes Nina regarded her mother who had not greeted them when they entered then she said Mother can we go over to Hatties for a while 44. The mother replied Stay here and talk to me Ill be through in a bit what have you been doing 45. If there is anything I can do he said will you let me know 46. Wont you wait he said I should like to go with you 47. The second book of Carlyles Past and Present is entitled The Ancient Monk 48. I thought to myself Ill show you old girl what I can do 49. Youll never see me again you but the door slammed before we heard the rest 50. Do you know who it was who died saying dont give up the ship

EXERCISE 2

General
exercise in
punctuation

Punctuate the following passage, stating the reason for the use of each mark of punctuation.

We had a pleasant journey of it seaward again we found that for the three past nights our ship had been in a state of war the first night the sailors of a British ship, being happy with grog came down on the pier and challenged our sailors to a free fight they accepted with alacrity repaired to the pier and gained their share of a drawn battle several bruised and bloody members of both parties were carried off by the police and imprisoned until the following morning the next night the British boys came again to renew the fight but our men had had strict orders to remain on board and out of sight they did so and the besieging party grew noisy and more and more abusive as the fact became apparent to them that our men were afraid to come out they went away finally with a closing burst of ridicule and offensive epithets the third night they came again and were more obstreperous than ever they swaggered up and down the almost deserted pier and hurled curses obscenity and stinging sarcasms at our crew it was more than human nature could bear the executive officer ordered our men ashore with instructions not to fight they charged the British and gained a brilliant victory I probably would not have mentioned this war had it ended differently but I travel to learn and I still remember that they picture no French defeats in the battle-galleries of Versailles. — MARK TWAIN.

SPELLING

The way to reform bad spelling is to work at it determinedly, correcting a few faults at a time. In most cases, the bad speller does not see words correctly; his mental photograph of them is wrong, or blurred. Sometimes his vision is defective and he needs to visit an oculist. In many cases he does not hear and pronounce the words correctly; he fails to include syllables, he transposes or omits letters, and he confuses one word with another. A misspelling should never be hastily corrected. The student should look up the correct spelling and fix it in memory by careful observation and by writing it out. He should keep a list of words he misspells, and should refer to it regularly.

Careful study of the following rules, and of the lists in Rule 319 and in Appendix C will aid the student to recognize his misspellings, and will provide him with principles by means of which he can remember more easily the correct spellings.

301. Careless pronunciation is often the cause of misspelling.

Accurate
pronunciation

(a) Do not mispronounce vowels in unaccented syllables. Examples: adviser, beggar, conqueror, despair, description, cabbage, student, separate, apology, divide, privilege, Illinois.

(b) Do not omit vowels. Examples: boundary, really, interesting, laboratory.

(c) Do not add vowels. Examples: disastrous (not disasterous), hindrance (not hinderance), mischievous (not mischievious), umbrella (not umberella).

(d) Do not omit consonants. Examples: candidate, government, probably, recognize. Watch the g in the suffix ing, as in going, doing, etc.

NOTE. — As an aid in remembering whether a consonant is doubled or not, observe that a double consonant usually indicates that the preceding vowel is short as in hopping (compare with hoping), occasion (compare with omission).

(e) Do not omit the al in adverbs derived from adjectives ending in al. Examples: accidentally, occasionally, generally. (See Rule 312.)

(f) Do not transpose letters. Examples: prescription (not perscription), perspiration (not prespiration), perform (not preform), prefer (not perfer), tragedy (not trade-gy), prejudice (not predujice), irrelevant (not irrevelant).

Doubling
final consonants:
General
rule

302. A monosyllable or a word accented on the last syllable, if it ends in one consonant preceded by one vowel, doubles the final consonant when a suffix beginning with a vowel is added. Thus: bid, bidden; quiz, quizzes; drop, dropped, dropping; glad, gladder, gladdest; man, mannish; tin, tinny.

Benefit, etc.

Worship, travel, etc.

NOTE 1. — The final consonant in words not accented on the last syllable is not usually doubled before a suffix; thus: benefit, benefited. In the words worship and kidnap and words like berel, counsel, quarrel, etc., the final consonant may be doubled, but it is better not to double it; e.g., worshiper, worshipping, worshipped; kidnaped; traveler, traveling, traveled, etc.

Suffix
beginning with consonant

NOTE 2. — A final consonant is not doubled before a suffix beginning with a consonant. Thus: fit, fitting, but fitness.

Receding
accent

303. This rule does not apply to words in which the accent is shifted to a preceding syllable. Thus: refer, referred, but reference; confer, conferring, but conference. But excel, excellence. Nor does it affect: chagrin, chagrined; transfer, transferable; infer, inferable; gas, gaseous.

304. Words ending in c add k before a suffix beginning with e, i, or y. Thus: picnic, picnicked; traffic, trafficking; panic, panicky. Picnicked, etc.

305. Words ending in silent e usually drop the e before a suffix beginning with a vowel. Thus: love, lovable; stone, stony. Hence, a verb ending in silent e drops e when ing is added. Thus: shine, shining. Dropping final e: General rule before ing

306. An exception to Rule 305: Words ending in ce or ge do not drop the e when ous or able is added. Thus: notice, noticeable; outrage, outrageous. Derivatives from words in ce and ge

NOTE. — C and g in words of French, Latin, and Greek derivation usually have the soft sound before e, i, and y, as cede, genial, civil, giant, cyanide, gymnasium; elsewhere they have the hard sound, as calendar, Gallie, code, gorgon, acute, gusto. (Get, geese, gew-gaw, geld, giddy, gift, gig, giggle, gild, begin, gird, girdle, girl, and give are not of the above-mentioned derivation.) Notice how the principle applies to accent, accident, flaccid, occiput, accept, accurate, desiccate, except, excuse. On account of this principle, the e must be retained in such words as noticeable and courageous, in order to keep the soft sound of c and g.

307. A noun ending in y preceded by a consonant forms the plural in ies; as library, libraries. A noun ending in y preceded by a vowel forms the plural in ys; as valley, valleys. Change of y to i: Nouns

308. A verb ending in y preceded by a consonant forms its present third singular in ies and its past in ied. Thus: rely, relies, relied; marry, marries, married. Verbs

309. Words ending in y preceded by a consonant usually change the y to i before a suffix. Thus: happy, Happiness, etc.

happiness; beauty, beautiful; busy, business. But verbs ending in y do not drop the y before ing. Thus: study, studying; hurry, hurrying.

Studying,
etc.

Change of ie to y

310. Verbs ending in ie change ie to y before ing. Thus: lie, lying.

Suddenness,
etc.

311. Adjectives ending in n do not drop the n before ness. Thus: sudden, suddenness; green, greenness.

Finally,
etc.

312. Words ending in l do not drop the l before ly. Thus: final, finally; cool, coolly.

Plurals in s and es

313. (a) Nouns ending in a consonant add es to form the plural when the plural has an extra syllable; when the plural has no extra syllable, they add only s. Thus: lass, lasses; lad, lads.

Leaf, thief,
etc.

(b) Most words like leaf, thief, self form the plural in ves. Thus: leaves, thieves, ourselves. Some words ending in f form the plural in fs. Thus: beliefs, chiefs, griefs, hoofs, scarfs, dwarfs.

Nouns in o

(c) Some nouns ending in o add es to form the plural. Thus: buffaloes, calicoes, echoes, mosquitoes, negroes, potatoes, volcanoes, dominoes, embargoes, heroes, jingoes, mulattoes, noes, tomatoes, tornadoes. Some add only s. Thus: banjos, dynamos, Eskimos, pianos, silos, solos, sopranos, zeros. A few plurals may be written either os or oes.

Letters, symbols,
etc.

(d) The plurals of letters of the alphabet, of numerical symbols, and of a word considered as a word are formed by adding 's. (See Rule 291.) Thus: "Mind your p's and q's," "His well's and his and's made up half his story."

(e) Observe that certain words of foreign origin retain their foreign plurals. Note especially datum, data; phenomenon, phenomena; analysis, analyses; parenthesis, parentheses; thesis, theses. Foreign nouns

NOTE. — The plural of some words may have either the foreign or the anglicized form. Thus, formula, formulae, or formulas; syllabus, syllabi, or syllabuses.

314. Verbs ending in a consonant add es to make the present third singular form when that form has an extra syllable; when it has no extra syllable, they add only s. Thus: miss, misses; proclaim, proclaims. Present third singular in s and es

315. There are three verbs ending in eed: exceed, succeed, and proceed. Other verbs have ede.

316. For the sound ee, use ei after c and ie after any other letter. If c precedes the digraph, e follows c, as in Alice. If another letter precedes the digraph, i follows the letter, as in Alice. Exceptions: weird, seize, neither, leisure, financier, obeisance. Receive, believe, etc.

For any other sound of the digraph use ei. Exceptions: friend, view, sieve, mischievous, handkerchief.

317. In case of doubt whether to use principal or principle, remember that principle is always a noun and that the word which contains a (principal) is the adjective. Principal is occasionally a noun: the principal of the school, both principal and interest. Principal and principle

318. The common interjection is spelled oh. It is capitalized only at the beginning of a sentence, and is followed by an exclamation point, a comma, or no mark at all. Oh and O

Examples: "Oh, no, it is no trouble." "Oh! you ought not to do that," "My child! oh, my child!" "I will do it — and oh, by the way, where's the key?"

The sign of direct address (poetic or archaic) is spelled O. It is always capitalized, and is not followed by punctuation.

Examples: "I am come, O Caesar," "O ye spirits of our fathers," "O God, we pray thee," "I fear for thee, O my country."

A list of words that are commonly misspelled

319. The following list is composed chiefly of ordinary words which are often misspelled. With many of these are grouped — for the sake of comparison and distinction — related words, words not often misspelled, and words of different derivation commonly confused with them. (Numbers refer to rules.)

absence	affect (verb, to influence) absorb	effect (verb, to produce) absorption	effect (noun, result) absurd	(There is no noun affect) accept (receive)
except (exclude, aside from)	aggravate access (admittance)	aghost
excess (greater amount)	aisle (in church) accessible	isle (island)
accident	all right (There is no such word as "alright" or "allright") accidentally	alley (small street) accommodate	alleys 307
accompanying 309	allies 307
accumulate	alliteration
accustom	allotted
acquainted	allusion (hint)
acquitted	illusion (false image) across	ally (confederate)
additionally	already
address	all ready
advice (noun)	altar (shrine) advise (verb)	alter (change)
adviser	altogether
Æ neid	alumna (feminine singular) airplane

alumnae (feminine plural)	assassinate
alumnus (masculine singular)	association
alumni (masculine plural)	athlete (two syllables)
always	athletic
amateur	athletics
among	attack (present)
analysis	attacked (past)
analyze	attendance
angel (celestial being)	audience
angelic	auxiliary
angle (corner)	awkward
annual	bachelor
answer	balance
anxiety	banana
apart	Baptist
apartment	baptize
apiece 316	barbarous
apology	bare
apparatus	barely
apparent	baring
appearance	barring
appreciate	based
appropriate	bearing
arctic	becoming
arguing 305	before
argument	beggar 302
arise	believe 316
arising 305	benefit
arithmetic	benefited
around	berth (bed)
arouse	birth (beginning of life) arranging 305	boarder (one who boards) arrangement	border (edge)
arriving 305	born ("I was born in 1890")
arrival 305	borne ("borne by the wind"; "She has borne a son") article	boundary
ascend	breath (noun)
ascends 314	breathe (verb)
ascent	bridal (nuptial) assent (agreement) assassin

- bridle (for a horse)
 brilliant Britain (the country)
 Britannia
 Britannica
 Briton (a native)
 buoyant bureaus burglar buries 308
 bus (omnibus)
 Buss means kiss
 business 309
 cafeteria calendar candidate can't canvas (cloth)
 canvass (review)
 capital (city)
 capitol (building) career carry carriage 309
 (Cf. marry, marriage) caucus ceiling cemetery certain change changeable 306 changing 305 chaperon characteristic chauffeur chautauqua choose choosing 305 } (present) chose } (past) chosen }
 chord (of music)
 cord (string)
 clothes (garments)
 cloths (kinds of cloth)
 coarse (not fine)
 course (path, series)
 colonel column coming 305 commission commit committed 303 committee 302 committing 303 comparative comparatively compel compelled competent complement (verb)
 complement (completing part) compliment (pleasing speech) complimentary (gracious) comrade comradeship concede 315. See precede conceit 316
 conceive 316
 confidant (noun)
 confidence confident (adjective) confidently confidentially (secretly) connoisseur conquer conqueror conscience (inner guide) conscientious conscientiousness conscious (aware) consciousness considered

contemptible (worthy of scorn)	dependant (noun)
contemptuous (scornful)	dependent (adjective)
continuous	depth
control	descend
controlled 303	descends 314
cool	descent (slope)
coolly 312	decent (proper)
copy	dissent (disagreement)
copied 308	describe
copies 304, 308	describing 314
corps (squad)	description
corpse (dead body)	desert (waste place) costume (dress)	dessert (food)
custom (manner)	despair
council (noun, assembly)	desperate councilor (member of a council)	destroys counsel (noun, legal advice, adviser)	develop (preferable to develope)
counsel (verb, to advise)	device (noun)
counselor (adviser)	devise (verb)
country	diary (daily record) courteous	dairy (milk room) courtesy	dictionary
creep	die
crept	dying 310
criticism	difference
criticize	different } cruelty	digging
cylinder	dining room 305
dealt	dinning
debater	diphtheria
deceased (dead)	dirigible
diseased (ill)	disappear (dis+appear) deceit 316	disappoint (dis+appoint)
deceive 316	disaster
decide	disastrous
decision	discipline
deep	disease
defendants	diseased. See deceased definite	dissatisfied
	dissipate distribute

- divide doctor don't dormitories 307
 dual (twofold)
 duel (fight)
 dying ecstasy effect. See affect eight eighth elicit (to draw out) illicit (unlawful) eligible eliminate embarrass eminent emphasize encouraging enemy enemies 307 equipped ere (before) e'er (ever) especially
 etc. (et cetera)
 everybody exaggerate exceed excellence excellent except exceptionally excess. See access
 exercise
 exhaust exhilarate existence expense experience
 explanation extraordinary facilities familiar fascinate
 February
 fiery finally 312
 financier forbode foreboding 305 forehead foreign foremost forfeit
 formally (ceremoniously) formerly (at a former time) forth (forward)
 fourth (4th)
 forty. But — four fourteen fourth frantically fraternities 307
 freshman (adjective)
 freshman (noun, singular) freshmen (noun, plural) friend fulfill or fulfil furniture
 gambling (wagering)
 gamboling (frisking)
 gauge or gage ghost government grabbing 303
 grammar grandeur grief 316
 grievous guard guess guidance

handkerchief	instance (occasion)
handsome	instant (moment) harass	intellectual
having 305	intelligence
hear (verb)	intentionally
here (adverb)	intercede
height	invitation
heinous	irrelevant
hinder	irresistible
hindrance	itself
hop	knowledge
hopping 303	laboratory
hope	laid
hoping 305	later (subsequent)
human (of mankind)	latter ("the former, the latter") humane (merciful)	lead (metal) humorous	led (past tense of lead) hurried 308	legitimate
hypnotize	lessen (make less) hypocrisy	lesson
illiterate	liable
imaginary	library
imagining 305	lightening (making less heavy) imitation	lightning (noun)
immediately	likely
impetuosity	literature
impromptu	livelihood 309
incident (occurrence)	liveliness 309
incidence (way a thing falls or strikes — scientific term)	loneliness 309
incidentally	loose (adjective)
incredible	lose (verb)
incredibly	lying
independence	maintain
independent	maintenance
indictment	maneuver
indispensable	mantel (chimney shelf)
infinite	mantle (cloak)
ingenious (clever)	manual
ingenuous (frank)	manufacture
innocence	manufacturer

marriage 309	oneself
marries	operate
mathematics	opportunity
mattress	optimism
meant	organization
metal (e.g., iron)	origin
mettle (spirit)	outrageous millionaire	overrun
miniature	pageant
minute	paid
mischievous	pamphlet
misspelled	parallel
momentous	paralysis
murmur	parliament
muscle	parliamentary
mystery	particularly
mysterious	partner
naïve	passed (verb, past tense of pass) naphtha	past (adjective, adverb, and preposition)
necessary	pastime
negroes	peace
neither	perceive 316
nine	perform
nineteen	perhaps
ninety	permissible
ninetieth. But ninth	perseverance noticeable 306	persistent
notoriety	personal (private) nowadays	personnel (persons · collec- tively employed) nucleus	persuade oblige	Philippines. But Filipino obstacle	physical
occasion	physician
occasionally	plan
occur	planned 303
occurred 303	plain (adjective, clear, sim- ple)
occurring 303	plain (noun, flat region) occurrence 302	plane (adjective, flat) officer omit omitted
omission

plane (noun, geometric term; carpenter's tool)	reign (rule)
pleasant	rein (of a bridle)
politics	religion
pore (read intently)	religious pour	repetition
possess	replies
possible	representative
practically 312	reservoir
practice (noun and verb)	respectfully (with respect)
prairie	respectively (as relating to each) precede 315	restaurant
prece'dence	rhetoric
pre'cedents	rheumatism
preference 303	rhyme
prejudice	rhythm
preparation	ridiculous
presence	right
presents (gifts)	rite (ceremony) principal 317	sacrificing 305
principle 317	sacrilegious
privilege	safety
probably	sandwich
proceed. See precede	scene professor (pro+fessor)	schedule
promenade	secretary
pronunciation	seize
prove	separate
pumpkin	sergeant
pursue	severely
quiet (still)	shining 305
quite (entirely)	shone (past of shine) quiz	shown (past participle of show) quizzes 302	shriek
really 312	siege 316
recede 315. See precede	similar receipt	simultaneous
receive 316	sincerely
recognize	site (place)
recommend	cite (refer to)
reference 303	sight (view) referred 303

soliloquy	thorough
sophisticated	thousandths
sophomore (three syllables)	threw (past tense of throw) specifically	through (preposition and adverb)
specimen	to ("Go to bed")
speech. But speak	too ("Too bad!" "Me too!") statement	two (2)
stationary (adjective)	together
stationery (noun)	track (mark)
statue (monument)	tract (area) stature (height)	tragedy
statute (law)	tries
stopping	truly
stops	Tuesday
stretch	typical
studying 309	tyrannically succeed 315. See precede	undoubtedly suffrage	unprecedented
suit (of clothes)	until. But till suite (of rooms)	usage
superintendent	use
supersede 315. See precede	using 305
suppress	usually
sure	vengeance
surprise	village
syllable	villain
symmetry	weather
symmetrical	whether (which of two) temperament (four syllables)	weird 316
temperature (four syllables)	who's (who is) tendency	whose
their (possessive of they)	woman (singular)
there ("here and there")	women (plural)
there (expletive; e.g., "there is no use")	writer
therefor (Cf. thereof , thereby , therein)	writing 305
therefore (for that reason)	written yacht you're (you are)

320. The members of each of the following expressions should be written as separate words:

Incorrect
uniting of separate words

all ready	every time
(already means previously)	ex officio in fact
all right	in order
any day	in spite
any one	near by
any time	no one
by and by	(on the) other hand
by the bye	per cent (but percentage)
by the way	pro tempore
each other	some day
en route	some one
every day	some way
every one

NOTE. — The members of the expressions a while, any way, and some time should be written as separate words when while, way, and time are used as nouns; but each expression should be written as a single undivided word when it is used as an adverb.

321. Each of the following expressions should be written as a single undivided word:

although	overcome
altogether	overhead
anybody	somebody
anything	somehow
beforehand	something
downright	sometimes
downward	somewhat
everybody	steadfast
extraordinary	themselves
furthermore	thereupon
herself	throughout
himself	together
inasmuch	twofold
indoors	upright
itself	upstairs
likewise	upward

moreover	whatever myself	whenever
nevertheless	whereas
nobody	whichever
nothing	whoever
notwithstanding	without nowadays	yourself
oneself	yourselves
ourselves

EXERCISE 1

Doubling
final consonants

Write the infinitive, the present participle, and the past participle of each of the following verbs (e.g., stop, stopping, stopped): rob, crib, stab, bed, shed, bud, beg, flog, sprig, rig, hem, ram, hum, plan, skin, shun, pin, rip, drop, stop, grip, tip, equip, dip, whip, slip, scar, mar, debar, occur, demur, prefer, refer, confer, bat, pet, rot, flit, quit, regret, omit, commit, permit, admit, repel, propel, compel, expel, impel.

EXERCISE 2

Dropping
final e

Write the following words, together with the adjectives ending in able derived from them (e.g., love, lovable): love, excuse, believe, name, tame, sale, deplore, appease, use, forgive, live, shake.

EXERCISE 3

Final e
retained

Write each of the following words together with its derivative ending in ous (e.g., courage, courageous): courage, advantage, outrage, umbrage. Write each of the following words together with its derivative ending in able (e.g., notice, noticeable): notice, peace, manage, change.

EXERCISE 4

Change of
y to i:
Plurals

Write the singular and the plural of each of the following nouns (e.g., lady, ladies): lady, body, buggy, lily, folly, dummy, ninny, company, harmony, copy, berry, library, century, country, courtesy, city, party, frivolity, valley, monkey, chimney, money, pulley, volley, kidney, trolley, donkey, galley.

EXERCISE 5

Change of
y to i:
Verbs

Write the first and third persons, present indicative, and the first person past, of each of the following verbs

(e.g., I cry, he cries, I cried): cry, fly, fry, try, apply, supply, defy, deny, satisfy, classify, hurry, marry, carry, tarry, bury.

EXERCISE 6

Write the infinitive and the present participle of each of the following verbs (e.g., lie, lying): lie, die, tie, vie. Change of ie to y

EXERCISE 7

Write each of the following words, together with its derivative in ly (e.g., final, finally): final, usual, actual, continual, principal, practical, casual, general, oral, original, occasional, special, partial. Adverbs in ly

Write each of the following words together with its derivative in ally (e.g., accident, accidentally): accident, incident, heroic, poetic, dramatic, prosaic, occasion. Accidentally, etc.

EXERCISE 8

Write the singular and the plural of each of the following nouns (e.g., bead, beads): bead, road, leak, freak, wheel, pail, beam, seam, screen, steep, leap, paradox, hiss, heir, fair, repair, pass, glass, beet, boat, boot, flash, crash, cow, row, crow, dish, box. Plurals in s and es

EXERCISE 9

Write the indicative present, first and third persons singular, of the following verbs (e.g., refer, refers): refer, deem, claim, gleam, disdain, feel, squeal, pass, rush, differ, assign, toss, gash, miss, fix, eat, twist. Present third singulars in s and es

EXERCISE 10

Study the following:

receive	receipt
believe	belief
deceive	deceit
relieve	relief
conceive	conceit perceive

Receive, believe, etc.

EXERCISE 11

Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with principal or principle: 1. The — street runs north. 2. The — of the school was a man of strong —s. 3. The — involved is what I —ly object to. 4. It Principal and principle was against his ——s to use more than the interest; the —— he kept intact. 5. His —— occupation was to master the ——s of geometry.

EXERCISE 12

The endings
le and el

Study the following words, observing that in the great majority the ending is le, only a few ending in el. Observe that in most of the words ending in el, the final syllable is preceded by v, m, or n. Able, amble, addle, axle, apple, Bible, babble, bramble, buckle, battle, bubble, bridle, affle, cable, cradle, coddle, crackle, candle, castle, dandle, dazzle, dawdle, double, dwindle, eagle, feeble, fable, fondle, fickle, gale, giggle, goggle, gamble, handle, huddle, ingle, icicle, juggle, jangle, jingle, ladle, marble, muddle, maple, middle, noble, nibble, ogle, paddle, poodle, people, quibble, riddle, rabble, rifle, ripple, stable, sable, sample, staple, subtle, saddle, sprinkle, sickle, table, tackle, title, topple, trestle, twinkle, wrinkle, wrestle, whistle, mantle (a garment).

Bevel, drivel, gavel, gravel, hovel, level, navel, novel, ravel, revel, dishevel, shrivel, snivel, travel. Camel, enamel, trammel. Flannel, funnel, panel, tunnel. Babel, label, libel. Angel, vessel, chisel, nickel, mantel (a chimney-piece).

EXERCISE 13

The
adjective ending ful

Study the following adjectives, observing that in all, the ending is not full, but ful: useful, beautiful, careful, merciful, joyful, awful, skillful, hopeful, vengeful, mournful, cheerful, wonderful, delightful.

EXERCISE 14

The
adjective
ending ous

Study the following words, observing that in all, the ending is not us, but ous: humorous, courageous, plenteous, mischievous, simultaneous, miscellaneous, pretentious, luminous, ridiculous, grievous, glorious, bounteous, outrageous, hideous, heinous, troublous, garrulous, bibulous.

EXERCISE 15

The adverb
prefix al

Study the following words, observing that in all the prefix is not all, but al: already, altogether, almost, also.

EXERCISE 16

Disappear
and disappoint

Study the following words, observing that in each the prefix is not diss, but dis: dis+appear, dis+appoint, dis+grace, dis+close, dis+gorge, dis+honor, dis+band, dis+locate, dis+dain, dis+turb.

EXERCISE 17

Study the following words, observing that in each the prefix is not prof, but pro: pro+fessor, pro+fession, pro+fessional, pro+vide, pro+found, pro+voke, pro+tect, pro+bation, pro+nounce, pro+ceed, pro+gress. Professor, etc.

EXERCISE 18

Study the following words, observing the variations in the spelling of the last syllable: Precede, proceed, etc.

precede	proceed (but procedure)	supersede recede	exceed concede	succeed
intercede

EXERCISE 19

Study the following pairs of words:

Business

happy	happi+ness	dizzy	dizzi+ness
rosy	rosi+ness	lonely	loneli+ness
fluffy	fluffi+ness	busy	busi+ness
crazy	crazi+ness

EXERCISE 20

Lose is a verb; loose is an adjective. "Lose" is pronounced looz; "loose," loos. Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with lose or loose: 1. The screw is —. 2. Don't — it. 3. If it gets —, you will — it. 4. His coat is —er than yours, but mine is the —est of all. 5. By —ing his — change, the — jointed traveler suffered. Lose and loose

EXERCISE 21

The principal parts of lead are lead, led, led. Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with lead or led: 1. He met me and — me in. 2. They will — us astray, as our friends were — astray. 3. It was this act that — to his success. 4. I was — to think that this would — to misfortune. Lead and led

EXERCISE 22

Too, to, and two

Too is an adverb; it means excessively (as "He is too weak") or also. To is a preposition. Two is a number (= 2). Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with too, to, or two: 1. It is — weak — withstand — winters. 2. He thought the — men were — harsh, and I thought so —. 3. — say that, is — say a thing with — meanings. 4. He was — miles from home and was hungry —.

EXERCISE 23

Accept and except

Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with accept or except; affect or effect: 1. I would — the offer, — for my religious scruples. 2. He is the best pianist in Europe; I do not — even Liszt. 3. Most of the rebels were offered pardon and —ed it; but the leaders were —ed from the offer. 4. He burned all the household goods, not —ing even the heirlooms.

Affect and effect

1. That statement is true, but it does not — the case. 2. The failure of the bank did not — his equanimity. 3. The admonition of the dean had a good —. 4. The generals —ed a junction, but this action had no — on the enemy.

EXERCISE 24

*Advice, advise,
device,
devise*

Regarding advice, advise, device, devise, remember the following formula:

Nouns	Verbs
advice	advise
device	devise

Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with advice or advise: 1. I — you to buy. 2. He was —ed not to take the lawyer's —. 3. A message from his —er brought important —es. 4. He —ed me, and I thought it —able to follow his —.

Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with device or devise: 5. It is an ingenious —, but can't we — a better one? 6. Many —es were employed.

EXERCISE 25

Write the following sentences, filling each blank with a while or awhile. After each sentence state in parenthesis the construction of the expression supplied. 1. Stay — longer. 2. — ago there were not any houses here. 3. He stood — in thought. 4. I'll try it for — and see how it works. 5. I'll try it —. 6. You'd better sleep —. Awhile and a while

EXERCISE 26

Write the following sentences, filling each blank with some time or sometime. After each sentence state in parenthesis the construction of the expression supplied. 1. I'll visit you — next summer. 2. There must have been a volcano here —. 3. He came in last night and stayed — with us. 4. Be careful; — you'll get caught. 5. He pondered over the matter —. 6. He pondered over the matter for —. 7. — was spent in the examination of the books. Sometime and some time

EXERCISE 27

Write the following sentences, filling each blank with any way or anyway. In parenthesis after each sentence, state the construction of the expression supplied. 1. — you arrange it will suit me. 2. I can't explain it in —. 3. Well, —, what's the difference? 4. I don't care, —. 5. They could not find — to gain entrance. 6. I'm not anxious; for, —, he knows how to swim. Anyway and any way

MECHANICS

LEGIBILITY

Space between lines

322. Leave a liberal space between consecutive lines in a manuscript. Do not let the loops of f's, g's, j's, q's, y's, and z's in any line descend below the general level of the loops of b's, f's, h's, k's, and l's in the line below. (Compare Plates I and II.)

Space between
words

323. Do not crowd consecutive words close together. (Compare Plates I and II.)

Extra space
after period,
etc.

324. Between a period, a question mark, an exclamation mark, a semicolon, a colon, a word immediately before a direct quotation, the last word of a direct quotation — between any of these and a word following on the same line, leave double the usual space between words. (See Plate II, lines 1, 2, 3, and 9; and compare the corresponding places in Plate I.)

Spaces in typewritten matter

325. In a typewritten manuscript (type-script) leave two (or three) spaces between a period, question mark, or exclamation mark at the end of a sentence and the word following on the same line. After a comma, semicolon, or colon leave one space.

Crowding
marks of
punctuation

326. Do not crowd marks of punctuation close to one another or to the words next them. (See Plate I, lines 1, 2, and 9, and compare the corresponding places in Plate II, pages 248 and 249.)

Crowding
at bottom of page

327. Do not crowd the writing at the bottom of a page; take a new page.

328. Do not leave gaps between consecutive letters in a word. Especially avoid leaving a wide interval between an initial capital and the rest of the word.

Gaps between
letters

329. Do not write and on an oblique line.

Oblique and

330. Do not neglect dotting i's and j's and crossing t's and x's. Use dots, not circles, over i's and j's.

Dots and cross-strokes

331. Place the cross of a t across the stem of the t, not elsewhere. Place the dot of an i or a j immediately above the i or the j, not elsewhere.

332. Making the crosses of t's conspicuous for their length, peculiar shape, or peculiar direction is a hindrance to legibility and an annoyance to the reader. Cross a t with a straight horizontal stroke not more than a quarter of an inch long. Make a t a closed stroke, not a loop.

333. Do not form quotation marks and apostrophes as in this illustration:

Shape of quotation marks and apostrophes

Ann's motto is "What's the use?"

but as in this:

Ann's motto is "What's the use?"

334. Do not write Roman numbers in this manner:

Shape of Roman numbers

II, III, IV, VIII, IX

but in this:

II, III, IV, VIII, IX.

1 You may well ask "What are his
 2 qualifications?" "Qualifications in deed!
 3 He goes none. He has passed his life in 4 a blacksmith shop.
 5 Doubtless this qualifies him — or does
 6 qualify him? To make horseshoes;
 7 that will this ability if he was it? No, he 8 to represent our world worthily in the 9 City Council? Start it from me to disprove 10 a citizen for no better reason than that he 11 is a working man, unrefined to go into 12 that to fulfil properly the functions of an elec-13 man in this great City — a man of knowledge, of 14 certain experience, certain familiarity with 15 the business is independent and 16 thereby are you a competitor of the business
 17 his knowledge, his experience, his familiarity?

1 You may well ask, "What are his
2 qualifications?" Qualifications in-
3 deed! He has none. He has passed
4 his life in a blacksmith shop. Doubt-5 less this qualifies him — or may
6 qualify him — to make horseshoes;
7 but will this ability (if he has it)
8 enable him to represent our ward
9 worthily in the City Council? Far

Conspicuous ornament

335. In forming a letter do not decorate with unnecessary flourishes or with shading. Avoid especially such forms as the following:

B. C. D. E. F. H. M. N. O. T

Prefer plain forms like the following:

B. C. D. E. F. H. M. N. O. T.

ARRANGEMENT OF MANUSCRIPT

The Manuscript as a Whole

Writing materials

336. The paper for composition should be unruled unless special circumstances, such as the regulations of a class, require the contrary. The writing should be done either with a typewriter or with black, or blue-black, ink. Write on only one side of each sheet of paper. A manuscript should never be rolled; it should go to its destination either flat, or folded as simply as possible.

Only one side of paper to be used Rolling not permissible

Pages

Page numbers

337. The pages of a manuscript should be numbered at the top in Arabic, not Roman, numbers.

Position of title

338. The title should be written at least two inches from the top of the page. Between the title and the first line of the composition, at least an inch should intervene.

Margin at the top

339. The first line of each page should stand at least an inch from the top of the page.

Margin at the left

340. There should be a blank margin of at least an inch at the left side of each page.

ALTERATIONS IN MANUSCRIPT

341. Words to be inserted should be written above the line, and their proper position should be indicated by the sign $\wedge$ (not "v") placed below the line. Words so inserted should not be enclosed in parentheses or brackets unless these marks would be required were the words written on the line.

Insertion

NOTE. — Obscurity results from writing an insertion in the manner shown in the Bad example below:

Bad:

as an agreeable means

Although tennis is at present very popular $\wedge$ it of exercising the muscles, probably will never rank with football as a game for supremacy between colleges.

Right:

as an agreeable means of exercising the muscles,

Although tennis is at present very popular $\wedge$ it probably will never rank with football as a game for supremacy between colleges.

Right:

as an agreeable means

Although tennis is at present very popular $\wedge$ ~~it~~ of exercising the muscles, it probably ~~probably~~ will never rank with football as a game for supremacy between colleges.

342. Erasures should be made by drawing a line through the words to be canceled. Parentheses or brackets should not be used for this purpose.

Erasure

343. Words written in one place which are to be transposed to another should be canceled (see Rule 342) and inserted in the proper place by the method shown in Rule 341. No other method of transposition should be used.

Transposition

344. When it is desired that a word standing in the midst of a paragraph should begin a new paragraph, the sign ¶ should be placed immediately before that word. The change should not be indicated otherwise.

Indicating a new paragraph

Canceling a paragraph division

345. A paragraph division should be canceled by writing "No ¶" in the margin. The change should not be indicated otherwise.

WRITING VERSE

Run-over
lines

346. If an entire line of poetry cannot be written on one line of the page, the part left over should be placed as shown below:

Wrong:

Lombard and Venetian merchants with deep-laden
argosies;
Ministers from twenty nations; more than royal pomp and ease.

Right:

Lombard and Venetian merchants with deep-laden
argosies;
Ministers from twenty nations; more than royal pomp and ease.

Grouping of verse into lines

347. A quotation of poetry should be grouped into lines exactly as the original is grouped.

Bad:

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide
In the strife of truth with falsehood for the Good or evil side.

Right:

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide
In the strife of truth with falsehood for the good or evil side.

Verse set apart on
the page

348. A quotation of verse occurring in a prose composition should begin on a new line. The prose following such a quotation should also begin on a new line, indented if it begins a new paragraph, and flush with the left-hand margin if it continues the paragraph containing the quotation. But a single phrase, a part of a line, may be quoted without beginning a new line.

Wrong:

While Tennyson admits that sorrow may be for our ultimate advantage and that, as his great memorial says, "Men may rise on stepping stones

Of their dead selves to higher things,"
yet he finds it impossible to get any present consolation from the thought.

Right:

While Tennyson admits that sorrow may be for our ultimate advantage and that, as his great memorial says,

"Men may rise on stepping stones
Of their dead selves to higher things,"
yet he finds it impossible to get any present consolation from the thought.

EXTENDED QUOTATIONS OF PROSE

349. A passage of prose quoted from a written composition or a formal speech, if it is three or four sentences long or longer, should be set apart from the matter preceding and following it, in the same way as a quotation of verse (see Rule 348).

Extended
quotations
set apart
on the page

Right:

The part of the letter of instructions providing for an examination of candidates I quote verbatim. This part is as follows:

"and that, furthermore, all candidates be examined as to their knowledge of constitutional law; that this examination be conducted in writing; and that the following questions, among others, be asked:

"1. What power has Congress to punish crimes?

"2. State in what cases the Supreme Court has original jurisdiction.

"3. How are presidential electors chosen?
Would it be constitutional for a state legislature to choose them?"

These instructions, it will be perceived, leave the committee no discretion in regard to waiving the examination.

TABULATED LISTS

Indention

350. In a list of items set down in tabular form, the first line of each item should extend farther to the left than the remaining lines of the item. (See Rule 196.)

Wrong:

The principal powers of the President are —

- (a) The power to conduct foreign affairs.
- (b) The power to command the army and navy in time of war.
- (c) The power to veto bills.
- (d) The power to appoint officers (subject to the approval of the Senate).

Right:

The principal powers of the President are —

- (a) The power to conduct foreign affairs.
- (b) The power to command the army and navy in time of war.
- (c) The power to veto bills.
- (d) The power to appoint officers (subject to the approval of the Senate).

Tabulated matter set apart on
the page

351. A list of items in tabular form should be set apart from the matter preceding and following it, in the same manner as a quotation of verse (see Rule 348).

Bad:

Under this subject there are three important headings:

- (a) Position of pronouns
- (b) Use of connectives
- (c) Position of phrases; all of which are to be carefully studied.

Right:

Under this subject there are three important headings:

- (a) Position of pronouns
 - (b) Use of connectives
 - (c) Position of phrases
- all of which are to be carefully studied.

NOTE. — Another way of correcting the errors above shown is to write the passage without tabulating the items; thus:

Right:

Under this subject there are three important headings: (a) Position of pronouns; (b) Use of connectives; and (c) Position of subordinate expressions — all of which are to be carefully studied.

SYLLABICATION

352. In dividing a word at the end of a line, make the separation between syllables, not elsewhere. (See also Rule 297.)

There is no uniform principle for determining just what are the several syllables of any given word; one must rely largely on learning, by observation and by reference to dictionaries, what is the correct syllabication in individual cases. Nevertheless, a good many errors may be avoided by observing the following simple rules:

Rules for syllabica-
tion:

(a) Do not set apart from each other combinations of letters the separate pronunciation of which is impossible or unnatural.

Follow
pronunciation

A. Wrong: Exc-ursion; go-ndola; illustr-ate; instr-uction; pun-ctuation.

Right: Ex-cursion; gon-dola; illus-trate; in-struc-tion; punc-tuation.

B. Wrong: Prostr-ate; pri-nciple; abs-urd; fini-shing; sugge-stion.

Right: Pros-trate; prin-ciple; ab-surd; finish-ing; sug-ges-tion.

C. Wrong: Nat-ion; conclus-ion; invent-ion; introduct-ion; abbr-eviat-ion.

Right: Na-tion; conclu-sion; inven-tion; intro-duc-tion; abbre-via-tion.

D. Wrong: Diffic-ult; tob-acco; exc-ept; univ-ersity; dislo-dgment.

Right: Diffi-cult; to-bacco; ex-cept; uni-versity; dis-lodg-ment.

Prefixes

(b) As a rule, divide between a prefix and the letter following it.

Wrong: Bet-ween; pref-ix; antec-edent; conf-ine; del-ight.

Right: Be-tween; pre-fix; ante-cedent; con-fine; de-light.

Suffixes

(c) As a rule, divide between a suffix and the letter preceding it. Divide, e.g., before -ing, -ly, -ment, -ed (when it is pronounced as a separate syllable, as in delight-ed), -ish, -able, -er, -est.

Right: Lov-ing; love-ly; judg-ment; invit-ed; Jew-ish; punish-able; strong-er; strong-est.

Doubled consonants

(d) As a rule, when a consonant is doubled, divide between the two letters. This rule often takes precedence of Rule c above.

Right: Rub-ber; ab-breviation; oc-casion; ad-dition; af-finity; Rus-sian; expres-sion; omis-sion; com-mit-tee; ex-cel-lent; stop-ping; drop-ping; ship-ping; equip-ping.

The digraphs th, ch, etc., not to be divided

(e) Never divide in the midst of th pronounced as in the or thin; sh as in push; ph as in phonograph; ng as in sing; gn as in sign; tch as in fetch; and gh pronounced as in rough, or silent. Never divide ck except in accordance with Rule f, below. Do not divide vowel digraphs.

Wrong: Cat-holic; ras-hness; disc-harge; diap-hragm; gin-gham.

Right: Cath-olic; rash-ness; dis-charge; dia-phragm; ging-ham.

Wrong: Consig-nment; wat-ching; doug-hty.

Right: Consign-ment; watch-ing; dough-ty.

Wrong: Bo-at, sa-il, Spa-in.

Right: Boat, sail, Spain.

The divisions post-humous (see page 256), dis-habille (see page 256), Lap-ham, nightin-gale, distin-guish, sin-gle, sig-nature, and Leg-horn form no exceptions to the foregoing rule, for in them th, sh, etc., are pronounced each as two distinct sounds.

(f) In dividing words like edible, possible, bridle, trifle, beagle, crackle, twinkle, staple, entitle, do not set le apart by itself; always place with it the preceding consonant. (But see Rule 355.)

Final le
not to be set apart

Right: Edi-ble; possi-ble; bri-dle; tri-fle; bea-gle; crac-kle; etc.

NOTE. — To Rules b, c, and d, above, there are exceptions. For a statement of these, and for a comprehensive treatment of syllabication, the reader is referred to the Introduction of Webster's New International Dictionary.

353. Never divide a monosyllable.

Monosylla-
bles

Wrong: Tho-ugh, stre-ngth.

354. Do not divide a syllable of one letter from the rest of the word.

A syllable of one letter

Wrong: Man-y, a-gainst, a-long, ston-y.

355. Dividing words at the end of lines should be avoided as much as possible. And such awkward divisions as the following should never be made:

Awkward and too frequent division

Bad: eve-ry, ev-en, on-ly, eight-een.

ABBREVIATIONS

356. Abbreviations are in bad taste in literary compositions of any kind, including letters. A few abbreviations — such as i.e., e.g., q.v., viz., etc., A.D., B.C., a.m., p.m. — are excepted from the rule, being commonly used in good literature. Use no abbreviations

Generally objectionable

except those which you know are employed, not by the newspapers or the writers of commonplace business letters, but by recognized masters of English prose.

Bad: Last summer I worked for the Chandler Mfg. Co. in Casey, Ill. Casey is on the C. and E. I. R.R.

Right: Last summer I worked for the Chandler Manufacturing Company in Casey, Illinois. Casey is on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad.

NOTE. — Spell in full the names of streets, including those designated by the lower numerals, usually the numerals less than ten (see Rule 401), and the names of months and states. The abbreviations St., Ave., and Ct. are sometimes employed in addresses in business correspondence but should not be used in literary discourse or in the addresses of letters of friendship and formal notes.

Abbreviations right in some places; wrong elsewhere

357. Observe that many abbreviations that are proper when combined with other expressions are improper when standing alone. Thus:

Vulgar: I came this p.m.

Right: I came at 10 p.m.

Bad: Let me know the No. of your room.

Right: He lives in room No. 12.

Vulgar: My dear Dr.

Right: My dear Dr. Hart.

Observe also that many abbreviations (such as vol., ch., p., Co., ed.) that are permissible in footnotes, parenthetical citations, and similar places are not permissible in formally constructed sentences. In writing the name of a company, use & only with the abbreviation Co., unless the company uses the symbol in its letterhead.

Abbreviation of titles

358. Abbreviation of titles is, in general, inelegant and objectionable. Spell out Professor, President, Captain, General, Colonel, etc. Some abbreviations are, however, always proper; viz.: (1) Mr., Mrs., Messrs., and Dr., when prefixed to names; (2) Esq., and the initial abbreviations D.D., Ph.D., Jr., Sr., etc., when suffixed to names. (See Rule 357.) Reverend and Honorable are usually abbreviated.

THE REPRESENTATION OF NUMBERS

359. Do not spell out dates, street numbers, page numbers, or numbers of divisions (parts, chapters, paragraphs, sections, rules, etc.) of a book or a document. Dates, folios, etc., and house numbers

Wrong: On October thirteen, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, I was born at three hundred and sixty-two Adams Street. See page nine hundred and sixteen of our family Bible.

Right: On October 13, 1881, I was born at 362 Adams Street. See page 916 of our family Bible.

NOTE. — Ordinal numbers designating days of a month may be either spelled out or represented by figures.

Right: The thirteenth of May fell on Friday.

Right: The 13th of May fell on Friday.

Ordinal numbers designating pages or divisions of a book or document are governed by Rule 361.

360. In designating a sum of money in connected discourse, apply the following rules: Sums of money

(a) Do not use the sign $ for sums less than one dollar. The sign $ improper for sums less than a dollar Wrong: It costs $0.20.

Right: It costs twenty cents.

(b) Do not write .00.

Wrong: He subscribed $342.00 to the fund.

Right: He subscribed $342 to the fund.

The expression .00 never to be used

(c) For a sum amounting to a number of dollars and a number of cents, always use the sign $ and figures. Fractional sums

Right: It costs $3.18.

Even sums:
frequent

(d) If several sums are mentioned within a short space, use figures for all, putting the sign $ before all numbers representing dollars.

Right: My room costs $5 a week and my board $6.50; my contribution to the church is 30 cents; my incidental expenses range from $9.35 to $22.50 a month.

Isolated:
a sum in cents

(e) In case of an isolated mention of a sum in cents, spell out the number.

Right: The price is ninety cents.

A sum in
dollars

(f) In case of an isolated mention of a sum in dollars without a fraction, spell out a number expressed in one or two words, such as three, sixteen, two hundred, six thousand, one million; for other numbers, such as 102, 350, 1130, 1,500,000, use the sign $ and figures.

Right: He contributed twenty thousand dollars.

Right: It sold for eighteen hundred dollars.

Right: His fortune amounts to $72,500.

A sum used as an adjective

(g) It is preferable to spell out a sum used as an adjective.

Right: I sent her a ten-dollar bill.

Numbers
not treated in Rules 270,
271

361. In representing, in connected discourse, numbers other than those treated in Rules 359 and 360, apply the following rules:

Frequent
numbers
— figures

(a) In case several numbers are mentioned in a short space, use figures for all. See for example the text of Rules 161 and 162, where numbers occur frequently and representation of them by words would inconvenience the reader.

Numbers
not frequent

(b) If the numbers to be represented are not frequent, spell out numbers that may be expressed in one or two words, such as eighteen, ninety-seven, two hundred, eighteen hundred, twenty thousand, one million, fifty million; use figures for those that require three or more words, such as 108, 233, 1,250, 18,231, 1,500,230.

Wrong: The college is 25 miles from Columbus and has 900 students.

Right: The college is twenty-five miles from Columbus and has nine hundred students.

Wrong: In this city there were four hundred and thirty-four saloons to three hundred and eighty-five thousand, one hundred and ninety-two people.

Right: In this city there were 434 saloons to 385,192 people.

Bad: He lives on 2nd street.

Right: He lives on Second Street. (See Rules 356 and 401.)

NOTE. — In informal and business correspondence, numbers used as the names of streets (usually numbers above ten) may be expressed in figures followed by st, nd, rd, d, or th.

Right: 618 98th Street.

(c) Do not use numerals at the beginning of a sentence. Spell the numbers out or recast the sentence so as to begin it with another word.

Wrong: 1914 was a momentous year.

Right: The year 1914 was momentous.

Right: Nineteen hundred fourteen was a momentous year.

362. From Rule 361 b it follows that a number representing a person's age or one designating an hour of the day should nearly always be spelled out. (See Rule 361 a.)

Ages, and hours of the day

Right: At twelve o'clock all the children below eight years of age are sent home.

NOTE. — The abbreviations A.M. and P.M. are usually used with figures.

Right: The train arrives at 3:42 P.M.

Use of st,
nd, etc.,
with day of the month

363. It is better not to use st, nd, rd, d, or th after a figure designating the day of the month if the year is also designated.

Bad: January 8th, 1927.

Right: January 8, 1927.

Parenthetical
repetition
of numbers

364. A sum of money or a number that is spelled out should not be repeated in parenthesized figures, except in legal or commercial letters and instruments. When such repetition is made, (a) a parenthesized sum should stand at the end of the expression that it repeats, not elsewhere; and (b) a parenthesized number should stand immediately after the number that it repeats, not elsewhere.

Wrong: I enclose ($10) ten dollars. [a]

Wrong: I enclose ten ($10) dollars. [b]

Right: I enclose ten dollars ($10). [a]

Right: I enclose ten (10) dollars. [b]

NOTE. — The figures should be put within the parenthesis; the words should not be spelled out.

Wrong: I enclose $10 (ten dollars).

Right: I enclose ten dollars ($10).

CAPITALS

Proper names

Days and months

365. Capitalize proper nouns in general, including the names of the days of the week, the names of the months, the names of political parties, historical events, periods, documents, geographical names, names of buildings, titles, organizations and institutions, names of governmental bodies and departments, names of the Deity and pronouns used instead of those names, names for the Bible, and divisions of a book. Thus: The Socialist Party, the Fall of Rome, the Middle Ages, the Declaration of Independence, the Azores, the Woolworth Building, the Red Cross Society, the Home for the Friendless, the Senate, the Department of Labor, God the Father, Jehovah, Chapter III. But note:

(a) The words spring, summer, midsummer, autumn, fall, winter, and midwinter should not be capitalized. Not seasons

(b) North, south, east, west, and their various forms (northwest, etc.) and derivatives (northern, etc.) should not be capitalized except when they designate divisions of the country. North, south, etc.

Right: As we sailed north we saw a ship going west.

Right: The West is prosperous. — The people of the South are migrating westward. — The Northern delegates clashed with the Southern.

366. Capitalize words denoting family relationship, such as father, mother, sister, only when they are used with the name of a person or as a substitute for it. Words denoting family relationship Right: I heard that Uncle John had written to Mother.

Right: She accompanied her brother.

367. Titles of persons should be capitalized when they precede proper names. When used without proper names, titles of governmental officers of high rank should be capitalized; other titles should not. Titles of persons

Right: There go Professor Cox and Colonel Henry. —

A certain professor became a colonel in the volunteer army. — The President and the Postmaster-General sent for the postmaster of our town and the secretary of our society. — There goes A. H. Cox, Professor of Latin.

NOTE. — Academic degrees, when abbreviated, are written with capital letters; when not abbreviated, they are written with either capital letters or small letters.

Right: LL.D., Ph.D., Master of Arts, master of arts.

Common-noun elements of proper names

368. Capitalize club, company, society, college, high school, railroad, county, river, lake, park, street or any other common noun, when it is made a component part of a proper name; not otherwise.

Wrong: I went to that College one year.

Right: I went to that college one year.

Wrong: Do you mean Hamilton college?

Right: Do you mean Hamilton College?

NOTE. — Many writers consistently go contrary to this rule. Thus: Bleeker street, Portland county, Pennsylvania railroad, the Saturday club, Wilson school.

Words of race and language

369. Capitalize nouns and adjectives of language or race, such as German, Latin, Indian, Negro, etc. Negro and gypsy are often written with small letters, especially when used to designate an individual.

Words in literary titles

370. Capitalize only the important words of literary titles.

Right: I read The Light that Failed and A Tale of Two Cities.

NOTE. — Capitalize both words of a compound noun in a title, but only the first word in compound adjectives, adverbs, etc.

Right: Walking-Stick Papers.

Right: The House on Forty-ninth Street.

At the beginning of a sentence or quotation

371. Capitalize the first word of a sentence. This rule applies in general to quoted sentences.

Wrong: The conductor cried, "hands off!"

Right: The conductor cried, "Hands off!"

Note, however, that capitals are not used in the following instances:

The part of a sentence following he said

(a) The part of the quotation following the expression, he said, or its equivalent, unless that part is a new sentence.

Wrong: "Hammer on the window," advised the policeman, "Until he gets up."

Right: "Hammer on the window," advised the policeman, "until he gets up." [or] "Hammer on the window," advised the policeman. "He's probably asleep."

(b) The expression, he said, or its equivalent. He said

Wrong: "Hammer on the window," Advised the policeman. "He's probably asleep."

Right: "Hammer on the window," advised the policeman. "He's probably asleep."

(c) A quoted sentence from which words are omitted at the beginning. Quoted sentence with words omitted

Right: ". . . . the outer passes away, in swift endless changes; the inmost is the same yesterday, today and forever." — CARLYLE.

(d) A quoted sentence-element incorporated in a sentence. Quoted sentence-element

Wrong: It seemed to be "Without form and void."

Right: It seemed to be "without form and void."

(e) An indirect quotation. Indirect quotation

Wrong: He said, "He could not come."

Right: He said he could not come.

Right: He said, "I cannot come."

372. Capitalize the first word of every line of poetry.

See the Right examples under Rules 346–348. Do not capitalize, however, when part of a line is omitted. At the beginning of lines of poetry

Right:

" he went, unterrified,
Into the gulf of death; but his clear Sprite Yet reigns o'er earth; the third among the sons of light." — SHELLEY.

373. Capitalize the pronoun I and the interjection O, but not the interjection oh except at the beginning of a sentence. I, O, and oh

Salutation
and complimentary close of letters

374. Capitalize the first and last words in the salutation of a letter and only the first word in the complimentary close.

Wrong: Dear sir:

Right: Dear Sir:

Wrong: Yours Sincerely,

Right: Yours sincerely.

Misuse after a semicolon

375. Do not capitalize the part of a sentence following a semicolon.

Wrong: Send him to the library; His father wants to speak to him.

Right: Send him to the library; his father wants to speak to him.

Misuse after a colon

376. Do not capitalize, as a rule, the part of a sentence following a colon, unless that part is a formal, complete statement.

Wrong: Bring the following articles with you: One pair of heavy shoes, one pair of light shoes, over-shoes, a heavy coat, a rain coat, and a pair of woolen blankets.

Right: Bring the following articles with you: one pair of heavy shoes, etc.

Right: Here is the old question of campaign funds: If I take a hundred thousand dollars from a group of men representing a particular interest that has a big stake in a certain schedule of the tariff, I take it with the knowledge that those gentlemen will expect me not to forget their interest in that schedule, and that they will take it as an implicit honor that I should see to it that they are not damaged by too great a change in that schedule. — WOODROW WILSON.

Series of short questions
in one
sentence

377. In a sentence composed of a series of short questions, only the first question need begin with a capital.

Right: What is freedom but machinery? what is population but machinery? what is coal but machinery? what are railroads but machinery? what is wealth but machinery? what are, even, religious organizations but machinery? — ARNOLD.

378. Do not capitalize words which there is no reason for capitalizing, such as locomotive, forest, organ, rhetoric, mathematics, history, whooping cough, land-lady, bulldog, electricity, citizen, flour mill, profession, gold mine, teachers' convention, high school. Use without reason

ITALICS

379. To italicize a word in a manuscript, draw one straight line below it. Representation in MS.

380. Italicize titles of literary, musical, and artistic works, and of periodicals. Do not italicize the author's name. Italics with titles of books, etc.

Right: Walter Scott's The Talisman, Rider Haggard's King Solomon's Mines, Talfourd's Ion, and the Atlantic Monthly furnished his principal amusement.

NOTE. — It is permissible to enclose titles in quotation marks instead of italicizing them; but the simpler and better approved practice is to italicize. (See Rule 277.)

381. If the title of a single literary, musical, or artistic work begins with the, this word should not be omitted in writing the title, and it should be capitalized and italicized. Titles beginning with the: Single works

Wrong: Do you like Kipling's Man Who Was and Chaminade's Silver Ring?

Right: Do you like Kipling's The Man Who Was and Chaminade's The Silver Ring?

Wrong: I felt depressed after reading the House of Mirth.

Right: I felt depressed after reading The House of Mirth.

Periodicals

382. In writing the name of a newspaper or other periodical, however, a the limiting the noun of the title should not be capitalized or italicized even if it is part of the title; and the name of a city modifying adjectively the noun of the title should not be italicized.

Right: She found there some copies of the Pall Mall Gazette, the Evening Telegraph, the Century Magazine, the New York Evening Post, and the Madison (Wisconsin) Democrat.

Names of ships

383. Italicize names of ships.

Right: I cut the Hispaniola from her anchor.

Italics with words discussed

384. When a word is spoken of as a word — not used to represent the thing or idea that it ordinarily represents, and not quoted — it should be italicized. When a word is spoken of as a quoted word, it should usually be enclosed in quotation marks and not italicized.

Right: The misuse of grand, awful, and nice is a common fault.

Right: In the expression “we, the people,” “people” is in apposition with “we.”

NOTE. — With words discussed, it is permissible to use quotation marks instead of italics, even when the words are not quoted; and it is sometimes necessary and advisable to do so. In this book, for example, quotation marks are used with incorrect expressions discussed, because this practice helps, in some cases, to distinguish the wrong phraseology from the right. But the better practice in general is to italicize.

With foreign words

385. Italicize unnaturalized foreign words introduced into an English context.

Right: He is a bona fide purchaser.

Latin words in footnotes

386. Italicize the following Latin words or abbreviations used in reference and in footnotes: circa, c., et al., ibid., idem., infra, loc. cit., op. cit., passim, sic, supra, vide. (See Rule 18.)

387. Avoid the habit of frequently italicizing words for emphasis; do not emphasize a word in this way unless there is some especially good reason — as, for instance, the fact that obscurity would result from lack of emphasis.

Bad: The curse of this age is commercialism coupled with hypocrisy.

Right: The curse of this age is commercialism coupled with hypocrisy.

NOTE. — For examples of necessary emphasis by italics, see Rule 384.

388. Do not italicize for the purpose of calling attention to your humor or irony; this practice is undignified and inartistic. (Cf. Rules 262 and 284 e.)

Bad: The villain in the play was charming.

Right: The villain in the play was charming.

EXERCISE 1

Show how each of the following words may be correctly divided at the end of a line. For example:

re-mem-ber
in-com-plete

A. gradual, genuine, signal, crimson, ridiculous, cholera, popular, optimist, emphasis, comparison, account, quarrel, recognize, gorgeous, scientific, artificiality, happiness, justifiable.

B. depict, entire, expend, admire, convene, detest, inspire, interrene, obscure, postpone, submit, superstitious, expound, bequile, forlorn, address, endure, conscript, catalogue.

C. kindly, shaving, peaceable, preferment, healthful, sweeter, pianist, heartless, payable, heaviest, goodness, wholesome, wholly, bowing, serviceable.

D. sinner, flannel, cellar, robber, saddest, goddess, ripple, giggle, trammel, carriage.

For emphasis

Improper use for marking humor

Syllabication:

Miscellaneous

Prefixes

Suffixes

Doubled consonants

Digraphs

E. Catherine, strengthen, splashing, hydrophobia, singing, alignment, switchboard, doughnut, roughness, bother.

EXERCISE 2

Abbreviations,
numbers,
capitals,
italics

Correct in the following sentences any errors in abbreviations, numbers, capitals, and italics. State the reasons for the changes made.

1. We lived on Delaware ave. for 9 years. 2. The agent asked me whether the Mrs. was home. 3. The children enjoyed the stories about Capt. Smith. 4. He is writing a History of the U.S. navy. 5. We paid $.75 for our tickets. 6. 10 of us are leaving on the 6 o'clock train. 7. My allowance was soon gone, for I spent ten dollars and thirty-five cents for books, four dollars and a half for a lamp, five dollars for lab. fees, and twenty-five dollars for tuition. 8. We are starting at 8 in the A.M. and we hope to return by 6 P.M. 9. My father sent me ten ($10) dollars. 10. The new building is on 2nd street. 11. He graduated from a High School in Cal. in nineteen hundred and eighteen. 12. The events of the novel take place in Mass. during the American revolution. 13. The old steamboat Mary Jane has gone up and down the Mississippi river for 20 years. 14. He is the dullest Prof. I have ever had.

15. Dr. Reed, Professor of History, will spend his Summer in the west. 16. He entered the University after graduating from Hyde Park high school. 17. My brother does not write to mother as often as he should. 18. The boys liked stories about indians. 19. I enjoy reading again and again that 2nd chapter in David Copperfield called I observe. 20. Terrible is derived from the french terrible, which comes from the latin terribilis, from terrere, meaning to frighten. 21. Did you notice how often she used the words intrigue and precious? 22. She said that "She had been writing for two hours." 23. "I cannot wait," He said, "Until you have finished your work." 24. I studied Astronomy in Grinnell college. 25. I am a member of the first baptist church of Springfield, Ill. 26. In the attic she found old copies of The Century, Scribner's, The Atlantic, and early editions of The Virginians, The Newcomes, and The Mill On The Floss.

PREPARATION OF COPY FOR THE PRINTER AND CORRECTION OF PROOF

389. Manuscript prepared for a publisher or a printer is called "copy." The general directions for the preparation of manuscript given in the chapter on Mechanics (pages 246-270) should be carefully observed.¹

Copy should be typewritten on one side only of paper about $8\frac{1}{2}$ by 11 inches in size, in double or triple space, with ample margins on all edges. Sheets should be arranged in their proper order and numbered. The name and address of the writer should be written in an upper corner of the first page.

390. Copy should be prepared exactly as the writer wishes it to appear in print. After it is completed it should be gone over with care to make sure that every detail of arrangement, of spelling, punctuation, paragraphing, capitalizing, etc., is unmistakably clear and consistent throughout. Copy that is not uniform has to be edited, often at the expense of the author, and causes unnecessary delay. Alterations made after copy is in type are usually charged to the author.

Complete, consistent,
and accurate
copy

391. Typographical details are usually left to the editor or publisher, but the author must indicate some

Technical
practices

¹ For more detailed information on the preparation of manuscript and the correction of proof than is given in this book, see the Manual of Style, University of Chicago Press, 1925; Notes for the Guidance of Authors, Macmillan, 1918; Style Manual, Government Printing Office, 1923.

of them. Draw one line under matter to be italicized; two lines under matter to be printed in SMALL CAPITALS (small caps); three lines under matter to be printed in CAPITALS (caps); and a wavy line under matter

Sample of corrected and marked
copy

Copy that is not uniform has to be edited, ~~and~~ often at the expense of the author, and causes unnecessary delay. Alterations made after copy is in type are charged usually to the author. ¶ Typographical details are usually left to the editor ~~for~~ publisher, but the ~~author~~ must indicate some of them. ○ draw one line under matter to be italicized; two lines under matter to be printed in small capitals (small caps); three lines under matter to be printed in capitals (caps); and a wavy line under matter to be printed in bold-face.

to be printed in bold-face. For italic capitals, draw three lines under the matter and write "italic caps" opposite it in the margin. Quoted matter not embodied in a paragraph with other matter is often printed in smaller type or with a wider margin than that of the body of the text. The publisher will usually follow his office practice in this regard, but the author may properly indicate his own preference by extra indention or by using single-space typing, or both, with such quoted matter.

392. If it is necessary to insert new material after the copy is written, this new material should be written on a separate sheet marked "Insert A" and attached to the sheet to which the new material is to be added. On the former, the same words "Insert A" should be written at the point where the insertion is to be made. If several pages of new material are to be inserted at the same point, they should be marked with the number of the page on which the insertion comes and should be marked A, B, C, etc. Thus inserts for page 18 should be marked 18A, 18B, 18C, etc. If pages are to be omitted after the copy has been numbered, the omission may be made clear in this manner: If pages 6-10 are to be omitted, there should be a note at the bottom of page 5 stating "page 11 follows." (For the correct placing of footnotes in copy, see Rules 14-17.)

Insertions
in the copy

393. Manuscript should be sent flat, not folded, and never rolled, in a strong covering, either heavy envelope or substantial wrapping paper, securely tied and sealed. If sent by mail, it requires letter postage. Manuscript weighing more than a few ounces can usually be sent at less expense by express than by mail. It should always be insured.

Sending manuscript

394. After the copy is set in type, a proof is taken and corrected by the proofreader of the printer or the publisher. This "galley" proof, with the original copy, is then sent to the author, who makes his corrections in ink in the margin of the proof. The corrections and changes should be indicated by the standard proofreader's marks. (See Rule 396.) If new material is added, it should, if possible, fill one or more complete lines, in order that alteration may be easier; if a substitution is made, it should be of the same length as the original matter. The printer's errors are corrected without charge to the author, who should make such corrections and put a circle around them.

Galley proof

Changes from the copy must be paid for by the author. Any necessary alterations must be made in the galley proof; changes in the page proof are very difficult and expensive to make. In no case should alterations in page proof require changes beyond the page on which they occur. The galley proof and copy should be returned to the publisher.

Page proof

395. After the corrections are made, the type is arranged in pages,¹ and page proof is sent to the author with the marked galley proof. In the page proof, the author must be certain (1) that the corrections in the galley proof have been made; (2) that the titles or "folio heads" at the top of the pages are correctly worded and placed; (3) that the pages are correctly numbered; (4) that no lines have been omitted or transposed at the bottom or top of the pages; (5) that footnotes are correctly placed; (6) that no letters or marks of punctuation have been dropped from the end of the lines; and (7) that no words are divided at ends of lines except between syllables. The page proof should be marked "O.K.," if there are no correc-

¹The handling of proof here described represents the practice in publishing books, rather than magazine articles, tions; or "O.K. with corrections," if there are corrections to be made. The page proof with the galley proof should then be returned to the publisher.

396. Proofreader's Marks.

Proof-reader's marks

- ∂ Dele, or delete: take ~~it~~ out.
- ∅ Letter ~~r~~versed—turn.
- # Put in space.
- ⌒ Close up—no space.
- ^ Bad spacing; space more evenly.
- wf Wrong font: character of wrong size or style.
- tr Transpose.
- ¶ Make a new paragraph.
- Indent; or, put in an em-quad space.
- ⌈ Carry to the left.
- ⌋ Carry to the right.
- ⌒ Elevate.
- ⌊ Depress.
- X Imperfect type—correct.
- ⌒ Space shows between words—push down.
- // Straighten crooked line.
- ||= ||Straighten alignment.
- stt Restore or retain words ~~crossed out~~.
- ⌒ Print (æ, fi, etc.) as a ligature.
- out-see copy Words are omitted from, or in, copy.
- ⑧ or (?) Query to author: Is this correct?
- cap Put in capitals.
- sc. Put in SMALL CAPITALS.
- lc Put in LOWER CASE.
- rom Put in roman type.
- ital Put in italic type.
- bf Put in bold face type.

LETTER WRITING

LETTERS IN THE FIRST PERSON

The Heading

Address
before date

397. The first member of a correct letter written in the first person is the heading — i.e., a statement of the address of the writer and the date of writing. The address should precede the date.

Right:	Groveport, Ohio, June 4, 1928
Right:	Groveport, Ohio, June 4, 1928.
Right:	Groveport, Ohio June 4, 1928

The
address:
Sufficient
address

398. The address in the heading should be such as would be sufficient for a postal direction.

Right:	212 State Street, Chicago, Illinois.
Right:	Route 3, La Salle, Illinois.
Right:	Route 3, La Salle, Illinois

Street
direction before city

399. If the address contains a street direction, this should precede the name of the city.

Right:	28 High Street, Columbus, Ohio.
Right:	28 High Street Columbus, Ohio

House
numbers

400. A house number should be written in Arabic figures and should be preceded by no word or sign.

Right: 15 H Street; not #15 H Street, or Fifteen H Street.

401. Street numbers less than ten are usually spelled out. (See Rule 356.) Numbers of streets Right: 285 Second Street.

Right: 285 42nd Street.

402. In writing a street direction do not omit Street. Do not omit Street

Wrong: 17 Main.

Right: 17 Main Street.

403. The date should consist of the name (not the number) of the month, the number of the day of the month, and the complete number of the year. The date: Complete-ness

Inelegant: 3/21/'28.

Right: March 21, 1928.

Right: 21 March, 1928.

404. All the numbers in the date should be written in Arabic figures, not represented by words. (See Rule 359. But cf. Rule 439.) Figures, not words Wrong: March the twenty-first, nineteen hundred and twenty-eight.

Right: March 21, 1928.

405. The number of the day should not be followed by st, nd, rd, d, or th. St, nd, etc., not to be used Undesirable: March 21st, 1928.

Right: March 21, 1928.

406. Do not use any abbreviations in the heading. It is permissible to waive this rule in business letters, but it is more dignified to observe it invariably. The name of the month should not be abbreviated. Abbreviations not to be used Undesirable: Norton, Mass., Jan. 3, 1928.

Right: Norton, Massachusetts,
January 3, 1928.

407. The entire heading, if short, may be written on one line. If two lines are necessary, the date should Grouping of the heading into lines be written alone on a separate line. If three are necessary, the street direction should stand on the first line, the name of the city and state on the second, and the date on the third.

Right: Fayette, Ohio, May 21, 1928.

Wrong: 21 North Street,
Lima, Ohio, June 1, 1928.

Right: 21 North Street, Lima, Ohio,
June 1, 1928.

Right: 5051 Madison Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois,
August 27, 1928.

Position of
the heading

408. The lines of the heading may have the same indentation, or each line may be indented about one-fourth of an inch more than the preceding line.

Right: 5743 Dorchester Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.
June 18, 1928.

Right: 5743 Dorchester Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.
June 18, 1928.

Right: Alfred A. Black 730 Fifth Avenue, New York
June 18, 1928

409. The heading should be written at the beginning of the letter at the right side of the page. (See the letters on page 289.)

410. In printed, lithographed, or engraved letter-heads, the name of the writer or of the firm, and the address are usually placed in the middle of the page; the date may be written at the right of the page or in the center under the address.

Separation or repetition of members

411. Do not write a part of the heading at the beginning of the letter and a part at the close (see Rule 397); and do not repeat the heading or a part of it at the close when it has been written at the beginning.

Bad:

Dear John,
 * * *
 Yours sincerely,
 Robert Graves,
 20 Charlotte St.

Bad:

Dear John,
 * * *
 Yours sincerely,
 Robert Graves.
 20 Charlotte St.,
 York, Ia.

Right:

20 Charlotte Street,
 York, Iowa,
 May 1, 1928.
 Dear John,
 * * *
 Yours sincerely,
 Robert Graves.

NOTE. — In informal social letters the address of the writer and the date of the writing may be placed on the last page of the letter on a space lower than the signature and at the left-hand margin.

412. Punctuation may be used or may be omitted at the end of the lines of the heading, but care should be taken to follow a consistent practice. (See also Rule 420.) If end-punctuation is used, there should be a comma after Street, Avenue, etc.; a comma or a period after the state; and a period after the year. There should be punctuation within the lines. A comma should be used after the city and after the

Punctua-
tion of the heading day of the month, but not between the month and the day. All abbreviations should be followed by periods. (See the letters on page 289.)

The Inside Address

Essential to a complete letter

413. The inside address — a statement of the name and address of the person written to — is an essential part of a complete business letter.

Position in commercial
letters

414. The inside address, which may be written in two or three lines, in commercial letters should be placed at the left-hand side of the page two or more spaces below the last line of the heading. The first line should be flush with the left-hand margin; the rest of the address may also be placed at the margin-line or indented, each line about one-fourth of an inch more than the preceding.

Right: Henry White and Company,
19 West Forty-fourth Street,
New York City.

Right: Henry White and Company,
19 West Forty-fourth Street,
New York City.

415. In letters of friendship, in business letters not dealing with mercantile transactions, and in professional letters, the inside address may stand either above the salutation or at the bottom of the letter at the left-hand side of the page. Placing the inside address at the end is a little more elegant than placing it at the beginning. In letters of friendship the inside address may be omitted unless the one written to is almost a stranger or occupies a position of honor.

Letter to an individual
in a firm

416. If, in the case of a letter to a firm, the particular attention of a member of the firm is desired, the following forms may be used:

Right: Messrs. Meade, Brown, and Harrison,
19 Wabash Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.

Attention of Mr. M. L. Brown.
Gentlemen:

Right: Messrs. Meade, Brown, and Harrison
19 Wabash Avenue
Chicago, Illinois

Attention: Mr. M. L. Brown
Gentlemen:

Or: Gentlemen: Attention of Mr. M. L. Brown

417. The street direction may be omitted from the inside address. In a letter of which a copy is kept the street direction in the copy is often found convenient. Omission of street direction permissible

Right:

The Tiffany Company,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

418. Do not write a name alone above the salutation. Name without address

Wrong:

Mr. Harvey Myers.
My dear Sir:

Right:

Mr. Harvey Myers,
Seattle, Washington.

My dear Sir:

419. In the inside address do not omit Mr. or whatever other title is proper, before the name of an individual. Before a firm name composed of individual names, it is correct to write Messrs. or to omit the title. Messrs. is improper before a name not composed of individual names. Use no abbreviations of titles except Mr., Esq., Messrs., Mrs., Dr., Rev., and Abbreviations not to be used

Hon., and suffixed initial titles, like Ph.D. (See Rule 358.)

Right: Messrs. Hoyt and Marsh,
Chicago, Illinois.
Hoyt and Marsh,
Chicago, Illinois.

Lacking in courtesy and propriety:
J. H. Woolson,
Morristown.
Heath Pub. Co.,
N. Y. City.

Right:
Mr. J. H. Woolson,
Morristown, New Jersey.
D. C. Heath and Company,
New York City.

Permissible
exceptions

NOTE 1. — By way of exception, the long names United States of America and District of Columbia may be abbreviated respectively to U. S. A. and D. C. It is permissible in business letters to abbreviate the names of States also; but the better practice is to spell out those names. Abbreviation of the short names Maine, Ohio, and Iowa is objectionable in any letter.

Use of the title Esq.

NOTE 2. — The title Esq. is a proper substitute for Mr. When Esq. follows a name, no title should precede the name.

Wrong: Mr. Ralph Williams Esq.

Right: Ralph Williams, Esq.

Punctuation
of the
address

420. Punctuation marks may be used or may be omitted at the end of the lines of the inside address; but care should be taken to follow a consistent practice. If marks are used at the end of the lines, a period should be placed after the last line and commas after the others. Punctuation marks may be necessary within the line; for example, a comma should be placed between the city and the state. Periods should be used after all abbreviations.

Open Punctuation

Right: Marshall Field and Company
State and Madison Streets
Chicago, Illinois

Close Punctuation

Right: Marshall Field and Company,
State and Madison Streets,
Chicago, Illinois.

The Salutation

421. The following are proper salutations for business letters: Business letters

Dear Sir:	Dear Madam:
Gentlemen:	Ladies:
My dear Sir:	My dear Madam:
My dear Mr. Park:

NOTE 1. — The first word of the salutation and all nouns are capitalized.

NOTE 2. — There is no hard and fast line drawn between business letters and letters of friendship, and the usages of the latter may be employed in the former when the degree of acquaintance allows. Dear Mr. Park is more intimate than My dear Mr. Park. Dear Sir is more common than My dear Sir in business letters, the omission of the my in this case not implying any greater degree of intimacy.

422. The following are proper salutations for letters of friendship: Letters of friendship

Dear Susan,	Dear old Dad,
My dear Mr. Smith,	My dear Miss Jones,
Dear John,	Dearest Mother,
Dear Mrs. Jackson,	Dear Aunt Edith,

NOTE — Salutations without My are more intimate than those with My.

423. The salutations "Dear Friend," "My dear Friend," and "Friend John" are not in reputable use; avoid them. Improper salutations

A name for a salutation

424. Never use a name alone as a salutation.

Bad:

Melmore, O., Sept. 3, '28.

Mr. Percy Clapp: —

Please inform me . . .

Right:

Melmore, Ohio, September 3, 1928.

My dear Mr. Clapp,

Will you please inform me . . .

Abbrevia-
tions not to be used

425. In the salutation never use any abbreviation, except Mr., Mrs., and Dr. (See Rule 358.)

Bad: My dear Prof. Walker,

Right: My dear Professor Walker,

Bad: Dear Capt. Ayer,

Right: Dear Captain Ayer,

Punctuation

426. The salutation of a business letter should be followed by a colon. The comma is customarily used after the salutation of an informal letter of friendship, but a colon is allowed. See the two letters on page 289.

Position of
the
salutation

427. The salutation should be written flush with the left-hand margin. The body of a pen-written letter should begin on the line below; of a typewritten letter, two spaces below. All paragraphs should receive the same indentation, one inch; the first should not be indented farther than the others.

If a single-spaced typewritten letter has double spacing between the paragraphs and if the block style is used in the heading and the address, it is allowable to write all paragraphs flush with the left margin, without indentation.

The Complimentary Close

Business
letters

428. The following are proper complimentary closes for business letters:

Yours truly,
Yours very truly,
Very truly yours,

Respectfully yours and Yours respectfully are used in writing to school, college, and government officials.

429. The following are proper complimentary closes for letters of friendship, or for business letters in which there is an intimate relation between the writer and the person addressed: Letters of friendship

Yours very truly, Cordially yours,
Yours sincerely, Faithfully yours,

430. Do not use any abbreviation, such as "yrs" or "resp'y" in the complimentary close; nor write "respectively" for respectfully; nor write "and oblige" in the place of the complimentary close. Do not omit the word yours. Vulgar closes

431. The complimentary close should be written on a separate line, about two spaces below the last line of the body of the letter (in typewritten letters), should stand near the middle of the line, should have only the first word capitalized, and should be followed by a comma. Position and punctuation

432. Expressions introducing the complimentary close, such as "I am," "believe me," "good-bye," now rarely used, should occupy their regular positions in the body of the letter. Position of preceding words

Right:

Accept my congratulations upon your new appointment; and believe me

Yours sincerely,
Henry Cobb.

The Signature

433. The signature should be placed about two Position of the signature spaces below the complimentary close, and near the right-hand margin of the letter.

Signatures
in business
letters

434. The signature should always be written by hand. In a typewritten letter in which the name of the writer does not appear on the letterhead, the name may be typewritten beneath the written signature or at the left-hand side of the page with the initials of the stenographer. Letters from firms should be signed with the name of the firm, typewritten, and directly beneath that, in handwriting, the name of the person who is responsible for the letter. Sometimes in the signature of a letter from a firm the name of the firm is omitted; sometimes the writer's official capacity is indicated.

Right: D. C. Heath and Company
Allen Grant Odell

Right: John R. Clark
Business Manager

In business letters a woman should sign her full name and add below in parenthesis her title (Mrs.) and her husband's name. If she is a widow, she should sign her own name, preceded by Mrs. in parenthesis. An unmarried woman should sign her name preceded by Miss in parenthesis.

Right: Mary Osborn Williams.
(Mrs. John R. Williams.)

Right: (Mrs.) Mary Osborn Williams.
Right: (Miss) Elizabeth Elliot.

Signatures
in social notes

435. In informal social notes, the name should never be preceded by the title (Mrs., Miss). A married woman should sign her given name, her maiden name, if she chooses, and her surname.

Wrong: Mrs. John R. Williams.
Right: Mary Osborn Williams.

Literary Style

436. The following faults, characteristic of ill-educated writers and of writers without good taste, are to be especially avoided in letters: Certain vulgarisms:

(a) The omissions of pronouns, articles, and prepositions. Ellipsis

Bad: Received your letter of the 6th ult. While very doubtful of the result, will try to carry out your instructions.

Right: I have received your letter of August 6. (See Rule 437.) Though I am very doubtful about the results, I will try to carry out your instructions.

Bad: We enclose check for three dollars.

Right: We enclose a check for three dollars.

Bad: Direct letter care Thomas Cook.

Right: Direct the letter in care of Thomas Cook.

Bad: Mr. H. P. Thurston, Editor Jenksville Patriot.

Right: Mr. H. P. Thurston, editor of the Jenksville Patriot.

NOTE. — The omission of I is proper in diaries and in letters written in the style of a diary — i.e., intended to present mere hasty memoranda jotted down without any attempt at completeness of form. Thus, Tennyson to his wife: "Slept at Spedding's where I found they expected me. Started this morning 11 a.m. Hay fever atrocious with irritation of railway, nearly drove me crazed, but could not complain, the only other occupant having a curiously split shoe for his better ease . . ." In such letters, clipped expressions harmonize with the context. In a letter, however, that is intended to be complete and regular in form, the omission of I and of other grammatically essential words is incongruous and in bad taste. (See Rule 437, below.)

(b) Writing "yours," "your favor," or "your esteemed favor" for your letter. (See Rule 45.) Yours, your favor

Yours received

(c) The use of the formula "yours of the 17th received," or "yours of the 17th at hand." Write a grammatically complete expression, such as "I have your letter of June 17."

In reply would say

(d) The use of the formula "in reply would say" or "will say." Write a grammatically complete expression, such as "In reply allow me to say."

*I would,
will, or can say*

(e) The use of the formula "I would say," "I will say," or "I can say." Write "Allow me to say" or "I desire to say," or else omit any such introduction.

Same

(f) The use of the expression "same" or "the same." Use it or they. (See Same in Appendix A.)

Bad: Yours of the 3rd at hand, and in reply would say we are at present out of lamps desired but will send same as soon as possible.

Right: Thank you for your order of March 3. The lamps you wish are out of stock at present, but we will send them as soon as possible.

Please

(g) The use of the expression "please" alone. Rather write "Will you please."

Please find enclosed

(h) The use of the formula "Please find enclosed." Write "I enclose."

($10) ten dollars

(i) The use of the formula "($10) dollars" or "ten ($10) dollars." (See Rule 364.)

Name of city abbreviated

(j) The abbreviation of the name of a city; e.g., of Cincinnati to "Cin.," of Philadelphia to "Phil.," or of New York City to "N. Y. City."

*Participial
close*

(k) Monotonously closing all letters with a sentence introduced by a participle, as "Hoping to hear soon . . ." "Thanking you again . . ."; or monotonously closing all letters of request with "and oblige." These old-fashioned endings lack force.

and oblige

437. The rule often taught, that it is improper to begin the body of a letter with I, is nonsense; beginning with I is always permissible and often desirable. The use of I

438. The monotonously frequent use of I in letters is a common fault which it is well to guard against. But one should not, in order to avoid this fault, commit the worse fault of simply omitting I; as "Have not heard from you for a long time. Should think you ought to have written before this." The noticeably frequent use of I is nothing worse than an awkwardness; the ellipsis of I is a vulgarism. (See Rule 436 a.) As between the two, the awkwardness is preferable. To avoid the repetition of I, practice variety of sentence structure, not ellipsis. Not to be avoided by mere ellipsis

A Correctly Written Business Letter

17 Lumber Exchange
Minneapolis, Minnesota
January 2, 1928

Specimen
letters

Mr. Henry Coleman
Chicago, Illinois

My dear Sir:

I have your letter of December 29. The house about which you inquire is still for sale.

Yours truly
Frank Shaw

A Correctly Written Letter of Friendship

Murray Hill Hotel,
New York City,
September 20, 1928.

My dear Mr. Crawford,

The composition you inquire about is L. Pabst's Aria con Variazioni in D flat major. I forget who publishes it; but you can get it by sending to Schirmer's New York house.

Yours sincerely,
Edith Morris.

Mr. George Crawford,
1301 Beacon Street,
Boston, Massachusetts.

FORMAL NOTES IN THE THIRD PERSON

Solely in third person

439. Formal notes written in the third person should have no heading, no salutation, no complimentary close, no inside address, and no signature. They should be written consistently and solely in the third person; the writer should not refer to himself as I or to the addressee as you. Except Mr., Mrs., Messrs., and Dr., no abbreviations whatever should be used; and numbers occurring in dates should — unlike those in ordinary letters — be spelled out. For information about other matters, the following examples will suffice:

No abbreviations

Numbers spelled out

Mrs. Burton requests the pleasure of Miss Irwin's company at dinner on Friday, May the second, at seven o'clock.

935 Webster Street,

April the twenty-third.

Miss Irwin accepts with pleasure Mrs. Burton's invitation to dinner on May the second.

1720 Princeton Avenue,

April the twenty-fourth.

Mr. Matthews regrets that, on account of illness, he is unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. Eliot's invitation for January the fifteenth.

500 Anderson Street,

January the tenth.

Use present tense

NOTE. — Use the present tense in letters of regret or acceptance.

Wrong: Mr. Smith will be pleased to accept . . .
[The being pleased to accept is present, not future.]

Right: Mr. Smith accepts; [or] Mr. Smith is pleased to accept.

Wrong: . . . regrets that he will be unable to accept . . . [The inability to accept is present, not future.]

Right: . . . regrets that he is unable to accept . . .

SUNDRY MECHANICAL DIRECTIONS

440. Use black or blue-black ink in letter writing. Envelopes should always match the paper in color and quality, and envelopes should be of a size to receive the paper when it is properly folded.

Ink, paper, envelopes

NOTE. — Commercial letters are sometimes typewritten in brown or other color to harmonize with the tint of the stationery used. The use of ink in violet, green, or other striking color for social correspondence is a fad of questionable taste.

441. Letter-paper consisting of sheets so folded that each sheet is like a little book of four pages, is suitable for all letters — commercial, professional, or social; and for the letters of private individuals, as distinguished from those of public officials and those of business firms. The use of flat sheets is best confined to business or professional correspondence. Writing-paper that is ruled, or limp and flimsy in texture, or conspicuous because of unusual color, should not be used for letters — except in case of emergency.

Writing-paper:

Four-page sheets

Flat sheets

442. The writing should begin an inch or two below the top of any page. It is best to keep a blank margin at least half an inch wide at the left side of every page. Rules 322-335 and 146-150 should be observed in letters as well as in other manuscripts. In typewritten letters a double space should be left between paragraphs.

Margin at top

Margin at left

Legibility

Flat sheets

443. When flat sheets of paper are used, it is best that only one side of each sheet be written on.

Four-page sheets

444. When four-page sheets are used, all four pages may be written on. The letter should be so written that a person reading the first page has at his left the fold, and at his right the coinciding edges opposite the fold. If the letter occupies more than one but not more than two pages of the sheet, the first and third pages may be written on and the second be left blank. If the letter occupies more than two pages, it is best that the pages be written on in their natural order — viz., 1, 2, 3, 4; not in the order 1, 3, 2, 4 or 1, 4, 2, 3. The lines of writing on all the pages should be at right angles to the fold, not parallel with the fold.

Order of pages

Folding and enclosing:
Four-page sheets

445. A letter on a four-page sheet should be enclosed in an envelope in which it will fit when folded with one horizontal crease through the center. The letter should be so folded that the upper and the lower halves of page 1 face each other; or, in other words, so that the horizontal crease will appear as a groove on pages 1 and 3, and as a ridge on pages 2 and 4. The letter should be so placed in the envelope that the horizontal crease is at the bottom of the envelope.

Flat sheets
of note size

446. A letter written on flat sheets of paper of note size (approximately 6×8 inches) may be enclosed —

(a) In an envelope into which it will fit when folded with one crease running through the center. In this case, the two halves of page 1 should be made to face

Envelope
of note size

each other; or, in other words, the crease should appear, to a person reading page 1, as a groove, not as a ridge. Place the letter in the envelope with the crease at the bottom, and with the half containing the heading next to the face, not the sealed side, of the envelope.

(b) In an envelope of commercial size (approximately $3\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches). In this case, fold the letter

Commercial
envelope

into three sections — a central section and two flaps. As the letter lies right side up on the table, fold up from the bottom about one-third and then from the top fold down over the lower third about one-fourth.

Writing
parallel with short sides

Writing parallel with long sides

The letter so folded should be placed in the envelope with the two flaps next to the back, not the face, of the envelope; with the top edge of the letter at the bottom of the envelope. The foregoing directions apply to letters in which the lines of writing run parallel to the short sides of the paper. Letters in which the lines run parallel to the long sides should be folded into the same shape: but the right third should be folded first, and the left part folded over it. Such a letter should be placed in the envelope with the flaps next to the back, with the left third flap on top of the right one, and with the outward edge of the left flap pointing upward.

Flat sheets
of full commercial size

447. A letter written on flat sheets of paper of full commercial size (approximately $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11$ inches) may be enclosed —

Commercial
envelope

(a) In an envelope of commercial size (approximately $3\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches). As the letter lies face up on the table, raise the lower part and fold it upward over the upper part with a horizontal crease running slightly below the center. Keeping the upper part lying next the table, and keeping the horizontal crease toward you, raise the right-hand part and fold it toward the left, making a vertical crease about one-third of the distance from right to left. Finally, raise the left-hand part and fold it toward the right, making a vertical crease about one-fourth of the distance from left to right. When page 1 is read, the horizontal crease and the two vertical creases that divide the upper half of the page should appear as grooves, and the two vertical creases that divide the lower half should appear as ridges. The letter, as folded, consists of a central section and two flaps. Place it in the envelope with the two flaps next to the sealed side, not next to the face, of the envelope; with the smaller flap on top of the larger one; and with the outward edge of the smaller flap pointing upward.

(b) In an envelope of official size (approximately 10 × 4 inches). In this case, it should be folded and enclosed according to the method shown in Rule 446 b. Official envelope

(c) In an approximately square envelope, into which it will fit when folded with one horizontal and one vertical crease, both running through the center. In this case, make the horizontal fold first, laying the upper and the lower halves of page 1 face to face — or, in other words, making a crease that will appear as a groove in page 1; then fold with a vertical crease that will appear as a groove in the upper half of page 1, and as a ridge in the lower half. Place the letter in the envelope with the vertical crease at the bottom and the two coinciding halves of the horizontal crease at the right hand, with respect to a person looking at the sealed side of the envelope. Square envelope

448. The foregoing rules in regard to the manner of folding letters and inserting them in envelopes are merely detailed applications of the simple rule of courtesy: Fold and enclose the letter in such a way that the receiver will be able, with the least possible effort, to get it right side up in his hand, ready to read. A few experiments will show that if any of the directions in Rules 445-447, above, are disregarded in the folding and enclosing of a letter, the addressee, on taking the letter from the envelope and unfolding it in the natural way, will find it with the first page turned from him or with the writing upside down.

The fundamental principle underlying Rules 445–447

THE ENVELOPE

The super-scription

449. In writing the address on an envelope, apply Rules 400, 401, 402, 418, and 436 a.

Examples:

Abbreviations not to
be used

Mr. Thomas Howe
In care of Captain William Fisk
Wabasha
Minnesota

Street
numbers

The Reverend Charles Wentworth, 463 Ninth Street,
Bridgeport,
Connecticut.

Bad:

Street not to be omitted

Editor Centerville Ledger,
65 North Liberty,
Centerville,
O.

Right:

Ellipsis not to be used

For the Editor of the Centerville Ledger
65 North Liberty Street
Centerville
Ohio.

Margin and
punctuation

450. The margin, straight or diagonal, and the punctuation, open or close, should correspond with those of the letter.

Right:

Professor Henry D. Lennington
1436 Putnam Avenue
Woonsocket
Rhode Island

Right:

Colonel Charles Kent,
The Southwick Hotel,
Kansas City,
Missouri.

451. The postage stamp should be attached in the upper right-hand corner. It should be right side up, and its edges should be parallel to the edges of the envelope. A postage stamp upside down or affixed in a haphazard fashion raises against the sender of the letter a suspicion of slovenliness.

The postage stamp

APPENDIX A

A Glossary of Miscellaneous Faulty Expressions

A.D. Means in the year of the Lord. Should not, therefore, be appended to the name of a century. Should not be appended to a date self-evidently modern. When used, should precede the date and should not be preceded by a preposition.

Wrong: The sixth century A.D.

Right: The sixth century after Christ.

Right: Arminius died A.D. 21.

About. See At about.

Above. When used as an adjective (e.g., The above statement) while not incorrect, is less desirable than the foregoing, the preceding.

Accept. See Except.

Ad. Slang abbreviation for advertisement. Write the word in full.

Addicted to, subject to. Addicted to means devoted to persistently, as to a habit or indulgence. Do not confuse with subject to, which means exposed to some agency. A man may be addicted to opium, but subject to attacks of rheumatism.

Affect. Means to influence; as "War is almost sure to affect trade seriously." Is never used as a noun — always as a verb. Often confused with effect: Effect (verb) means to bring to pass; as "He will effect a reconciliation." Effect (noun) means result; as "The drug had a fatal effect."

After. Is redundant when used with the past participle.

Redundant: After having written.

Right: After writing.

Aggravate. Means to make worse; as, "The shock aggravated his misery." Means also to exasperate, embitter (a person). In the sense of provoke, arouse the evil feelings of, it is familiar, not literary usage.

All right. There is no such word as alright.

All-round. There is no such word as all-around recognized by good usage. All-round is a colloquialism.

All the. "All the farther," "all the higher," "all the faster," or a similar expression should not be used mistakenly for as far as, etc. All the with an adverb means by that amount, just so much.

Wrong: That was all the farther we went that day.

Right: That was all the distance we went that day; or, That was as far as we went that day.

Right: We shall go all the faster for our rest.

Allude. Means to refer indirectly. Refer means an open, direct mention. "When he alluded to profiteers, we knew whom he meant."

Already, all ready. Distinguish already, meaning beforehand, or by this time, from all ready, which means completely ready. "The hotel was already full." "They were all ready to go."

Alternative. Strictly, means choice between two things, or one of two things between which choice is possible; as "The alternative is difficult." "One alternative was to jump from the window; the other was to be burned to death." Expanded in familiar usage to mean a choice between more than two things.

Altogether, all together. "The story is altogether false" [i.e., completely false]. "We were all together in the room."

And etc. Never put and before etc.

Wrong: Pillows, flags, posters, and etc.

Right: Pillows, flags, posters, etc.

Anent. The use of this synonym of about or concerning suggests affectation.

Any place, every place, no place, some place. Vulgarisms for anywhere, everywhere, nowhere, somewhere. (See Rule 28.)

Anywheres and nowheres. Vulgarism for anywhere and nowhere.

Appreciate. Means to esteem adequately or to value highly; as "I appreciate the service." Should not be modified by greatly or very much.

As (1). Should not be used too frequently in the sense of because. The conjunctions for or since may often be advantageously substituted. Where as occurs in this sense there should often be no conjunction.

Bad: I want you to come home now as it is time for supper.

Better: I want you to come home now; it is time for supper.

As (2). In negative statements and in questions implying a negative answer, good usage requires the correlatives so . . . as rather than the correlatives as . . . as.

Doubtful: The modern nations are not as artistic as the ancient nations were.

Preferable: The modern nations are not so artistic as the ancient nations were.

As (3). Not to be used in place of that or whether. "I don't know that [not as] we can go."

Asset. Asset means property applicable in the payment of debts. Should not be loosely used in the sense of anything valuable or useful; as, "Smith is an asset to the team."

At about. Prefer about.

Inferior: He came at about three o'clock.

Right: He came about three o'clock.

Aught. Means anything. The name of the symbol 0 is naught, not ought.

Auto. A colloquialism for automobile. Not yet proper in formal writing.

Avail. Of no avail is properly used only with some form of be; elsewhere use to no purpose.

Wrong: He tried, but of no avail.

Right: He tried, but to no purpose.

Right: His attempt was of no avail.

Awful. Means inspiring with awe; as "The awful presence of the king." Colloquial or slang as epithet of disapproval. Say not "an awful mistake," but "a serious or disastrous mistake"; not "an awful blunder," but "a ludicrous blunder."

Badly. Colloquially used for a great deal or very much.

Wrong: I want badly to see you.

Right: I want very much to see you.

Balance. Bad English when used in the sense of remainder, except as a balance at the bank. (Cf. Bank on, Take stock in.)

Bad: One was an Italian; the balance were Greeks.

Right: One was an Italian; the rest (or the others) were Greeks.

Bank on, take stock in. Colloquial in the sense of rely on, trust in, receive as trustworthy, confidently expect. (Cf. Balance.)

Barbarous, barbaric. Barbarous means, in its restricted sense, cruel; barbaric is especially related to the barbarian love of noise or show, as, barbaric music.

Barn. Means a farm building used for storing grain or hay. Should not be used for stable.

Beg. When used in asking permission to do a thing, beg should govern a noun — permission, leave, or some synonym of these words.

Elliptical: I beg to state. — I beg to differ. — I beg to be absent.

Better: I beg leave to state. — I beg leave to differ. — I beg permission to be absent.

Besides. Means additionally, or in addition to. Not to be confused with beside, which is always a preposition, meaning "by the side of"; as, beside the house.

Between. Usually applies to only two persons or objects. For three or more, use among. But: "A railroad between Chicago, Philadelphia, and New York."

Blame . . . on. Crudely used instead of blame.

Wrong: You needn't blame it on me.

Right: You needn't blame me for it.

Borrow. Not to be confused with lend.

Vulgar: He refused to borrow me his knife.

Right: He refused to lend me his knife.

Right: I wanted to borrow his knife from him.

Bunch. Slang for group or party.

But. See Hardly.

But that, or but what. After doubt, that is considered more logical than but that. But what is incorrect.

Wrong: I had no doubt but what he would bite.

Right: I had no doubt that he would bite.

Calculate. A provincialism for think, suppose, expect, or intend.

Can. Denotes power or ability. Should not be used to denote permission.

Wrong: Can students hand in their theses in manuscript?

Right: May students [or, are students allowed to, or permitted to] hand in their theses in manuscript?

Can't seem. See Seem.

Cause. Complete such an expression as the cause was with a predicate noun or a noun clause. (See Rule 105.)

Wrong: The cause of his failure was on account of his imprudence.

Right: The cause of his failure was his imprudence; [or] . . . was that he was imprudent.

Certainly. The use of the word certainly, as a means of emphasis in relation to matters on which no doubt has been cast, is a colloquialism, and its over-use is monotonous, as in the expressions, "We certainly had a good time"; "That certainly was a hard examination"; "I certainly wonder where she bought that hat."

Characteristic. Means a distinguishing quality; as "His chief characteristic is absent-mindedness." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: One characteristic of my daily life is climbing College Hill.

Right: One incident of my daily life is climbing College Hill.

Charge. Should be combined, when it means accuse, not with of, but with with.

Wrong: They charged him of many crimes.

Right: They charged him with many crimes.

Claim. Means to demand as due; as "I claim the reward." Colloquial for assert or maintain, when there is no question of right, title, or advantage.

Wrong: He claimed that the William Tell story was only a legend.

Right: He asserted that the William Tell story was only a legend.

Coincidence. Means the occurrence of two events at the same time or in remarkable connection with each other; as "My forgetting my ticket and Bob's appearance just then with a ticket he didn't need, made a lucky coincidence." Should not be used to designate a single event.

Company. A vulgarism for companion, escort, or the plurals of these words.

Complected. Not to be used for complexioned.

Wrong: A light-complected girl.

Right: A light-complexioned girl.

Conscience, consciousness, conscious, conscientiousness. Conscience is the power of making moral distinctions; not to be confused with consciousness, which is simply the power of being aware of anything. Conscience is moral consciousness. Similarly, distinguish conscious, an adjective meaning aware or mentally alert, and conscientiousness, a noun meaning loyalty to conscience.

Considerable. A colloquialism when used as a noun.

Wrong: He lost considerable in the fire.

Right: He lost considerable property [or, a good deal of property] in the fire.

Contemplate. Should not be combined with a preposition.

Wrong: He contemplated on [or over] a trip to Alaska.

Right: He contemplated a trip to Alaska.

Contemptible. Means worthy of being despised; as "He is a contemptible sneak." Not to be confused with contemptuous, which means showing scorn; as "He made a contemptuous answer."

Contemptuous. See Contemptible.

Continual. Not synonymous with continuous, according to modern usage. Continual means occurring in close succession, frequently repeated; as "Continual hindrances discouraged us," "He coughs continually." Continuous means without cessation, continuing uninterrupted; as "Continuous opposition discouraged us," "He slept continuously for ten hours."

Continuous. See Continual.

Could of. See Of.

Couldn't seem. See Seem.

Credible, credulous, creditable. Credible means believable. Distinguish from credulous, meaning easily imposed on, believing too easily, and from creditable, which means praiseworthy.

Criticize. May mean to censure, but may mean merely to pass judgment on, whether favorable or adverse.

Crowd. Not to be used for party or company.

Cunning. Means artful, ingenious, or giving evidence of art or ingenuity; as "a cunning intriguer," "cunning workmanship." As pretty or amusing it is a colloquial Americanism.

Cute. Slang. Use pretty, vivacious, lively, amusing, dainty, piquant, engaging, or some other word in reputable use and of definite meaning.

Data, phenomena, strata. Plural, not singular forms. The singular forms are datum (rarely used), phenomenon, and stratum.

Date. Inelegant for engagement or appointment.

Deal (1). Should be combined with with, not with on or of, when the intended meaning is discuss.

Wrong: He deals on three subjects.

Wrong: He deals of three subjects.

Right: He deals with three subjects.

Deal (2). Colloquialism for transaction, agreement, or arrangement.

Demand. Means to claim or call for peremptorily. The object of this verb should be the thing claimed, never the person from whom the thing is claimed.

Wrong: Japan demanded Russia to leave Manchuria.

Right: Japan demanded that Russia leave Manchuria. [The object of "demanded" is the substantive clause "that . . . Manchuria."]

Demean. To demean oneself is merely to conduct oneself; as "He demeaned himself as a gentleman." Incorrect in the sense of to lower or degrade oneself.

Depot. Best applied to a building for the deposit of merchandise. To designate a building for the accommodation of passengers, it is better to say station.

Different. Should not be completed by a than clause, but by a from clause. Different to is correct according to British usage.

Wrong: The method is different than the one that formerly prevailed.

Right: The method is different from the one that formerly prevailed.

Diner, sleeper, smoker. Colloquial in the United States for dining car, sleeping car, and smoking car. Not vulgarisms.

Disinterested. Means without self-interest, unselfish; as "the judge's disinterested performance of his duty." Not to be confounded with uninterested.

Done. An ungrammatical error when used as the past tense of do, or as an additional auxiliary indicating past time. Typical illiterate sentences are "He done fine," "He done real good," for "He did well," (see fine (1), real, and good); and "I done lost it," for "I lost it" or "I have lost it."

Don't (1). A contraction of do not. Therefore ungrammatical when used with a subject in the third person singular. (See Rule 206.)

Wrong: He don't know.

Right: He doesn't know.

Right: I don't know, we don't know, you don't know, and they don't know.

Don't (2). This contraction and other similar ones are suitable for conversation, but not for formal writing.

Dove. Should not be used as the past tense of dive. Say "dived."

Due to. Should be attached to a substantive and not to an idea implied in the sentence. Should not be used in place of because of, on account of, owing to, which have become compound prepositions.

Wrong: The forces were divided, due to a misunderstanding.

Right: The forces were divided through [or because of] a misunderstanding.

Right: The division of the forces was due to a misunderstanding.

Each other. Properly used as referring to only two. To be distinguished from one another, which refers to more than two.

Effect. See Affect.

Either, neither. Preferably used to designate one of two persons or things; less commonly, one of three or more.

Less common: I asked Leahy, Mahoney, and McGinty, but neither of them was willing.

Preferable: I asked Leahy, Mahoney, and McGinty, but none of them was willing; [or . . . no one of them was willing.

Elegant. Means excelling in the power to discriminate properly and select properly, or giving evidence of such excellence; as "an elegant gentleman," "elegant ornamentation." Should not be used loosely. Say not "an elegant view," but a "beautiful view"; not "an elegant game of football," but "an excellent or a masterly game"; not "an elegant march," but "a spirited or rousing march"; not "an elegant pie," but "a delicious pie." Choose an adjective that expresses your meaning precisely.

Element. Means a component part; as "The elements of training are exercise, diet, and regularity." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: Next, the logs are "driven" down stream. Great danger besets the lumbermen in this element.

Right: Next, the logs are "driven" down stream. Great danger besets the lumbermen in this process.

Else. To be followed by but, not by than. Often used redundantly, as "no one else but him" for "no one but him."

Redundant: It is nothing else but selfishness.

Right: It is nothing but selfishness.

Both expressions, somebody else's and somebody's else, are right; the former is preferred, the latter is pedantic.

Enormity, enormousness. Enormity ordinarily means outrageous wickedness. Enormousness means of abnormal size.

Enough. A result complement limiting enough should have the form of an infinitive, not of a clause introduced by that or so that.

Wrong: It was near enough that I could touch it.

Right: It was near enough for me to touch it.

Wrong: There is humor enough so that the story isn't dull.

Right: There is humor enough to keep the story from being dull.

Enthuse. The word is unknown to good usage. (See Rule 29.)

Vulgar: He doesn't enthuse me.

Right: He doesn't rouse any enthusiasm in me.

Vulgar: She never enthuses.

Right: She never becomes enthusiastic.

Etc. The use of etc. is incongruous in a context intended to be artistic. Use a definite term in place of etc. or simply omit etc.

Wrong: She was more beautiful, witty, virtuous, etc., than any other lady.

Right: She was more beautiful, witty, virtuous, and loyal than any other lady.

Right: She was more beautiful, witty, and virtuous than any other lady.

In any context, avoid the vague use of etc.; use it only to dispense with useless repetition or to represent terms that are entirely obvious.

Every place. See Any place.

Every so often. A colloquial expression for at regular periods or intervals.

Except (verb) means to exclude; as "He alone was excepted from the amnesty." Except (preposition) means with the exception (i.e., exclusion) of; as "All's lost except honor," Except is not to be confused with accept, which means to receive.

Exceptional, exceptionable. Exceptional, which means unusual, is to be distinguished from exceptionable, which means objectionable. "It was an exceptional offer." "Your language is exceptionable."

Expect. Should not be used for suppose.

Wrong: I expect it's time for us to go.

Right: I suppose it's time for us to go.

Extra. Not to be used in the sense of unusually, as "an extra fine day."

Factor. Means a force or agent cooperating with other forces or agents to produce a certain result; as "The factors of success are industry and perseverance." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: Being ducked in the lake is an inevitable factor in the freshman's experience.

Right: Being ducked in the lake is an inevitable part of the freshman's experience.

Falls, ways, woods. Plurals, not singulars.

Wrong: Go a little ways down stream till you come to a falls.
Beside it is a woods.

Right: Go a little way down stream till you come to a fall.
Beside it is a wood.

Right: The falls of the river; the woods and the fields; the ways of men.

Faze. A colloquialism.

Bad: You could not faze her by your criticisms.

Right: You could not daunt her by your criticisms.

Fellow. A colloquialism when used to mean a person, an individual.

Colloquial: Many of the fellows are wearing fur coats.

Right: Many of the men are wearing fur coats.

Fine (1). Means refined, delicate, free from impurity, of excellent quality: "fine cutlery," "fine dust," "fine sense of honor," "fine gold."
Loosely used it is a general epithet of approval: "a fine fellow," "a fine day," "a fine ship."

Fine (2). The use of this adjective as an adverb is a gross error; as "You look fine" for "You look finely."

First-rate. May be used as an adjective but never as an adverb.

Right: It is a first-rate building.

Wrong: He plays tennis first-rate.

Right: He plays tennis very well; [or] He plays a first-rate game of tennis.

Firstly. Most writers prefer first, even when followed by secondly, thirdly, etc.

Fix (1). Slang for plight, situation, or condition.

Fix (2). Colloquial in the United States for repair or arrange. The expression "fix up" used in one of these senses is likewise a colloquialism.

Former, latter. Properly used to designate one of two persons or things, not one of three or more. (Cf. Either, neither.) For designating one of three or more, say "first," "first-named," "first-mentioned," or "last," "last-named," "last-mentioned."

Frighten, scare. Provincialisms when used intransitively.

Wrong: Does the horse frighten easily?

Right: Is the horse frightened easily?

Genial, congenial. Genial means cordial and pleasant in manner. Do not confuse it with congenial, which means suited to one's disposition; as "a congenial friend," "a congenial occupation."

Gent. A vulgarism for gentleman.

Gentleman, lady. Terms properly used to designate persons of refined speech and manners, as distinguished from ill-bred or uncultivated people; the use of them to designate mere sex is incorrect.

Wrong: Saleslady, business gentleman, lady stenographer. — There are lady cab-drivers in Paris. — There are more ladies than gentlemen who play the piano. — Cornell admits ladies, but Williams admits only gentlemen. — Ladies' cloak room.

Right: Saleswoman, business man, woman stenographer. — There are woman cab-drivers in Paris. — There are more women than men who play the piano. — Cornell admits women, but Williams admits only men. — Women's cloak room.

The use of man and woman need never be shunned; even where lady or gentleman may be used correctly, man or woman is equally polite, and is often preferable.

Right: Is your wife a Massachusetts woman? — You are the only woman I know who drives a motor. — Are you the man I met last spring in Denver?

Gentleman friend, lady friend. These terms, not in themselves objectionable, have, through the use that has been made of them, become objectionable. Prefer man friend (plural: man friends) or gentleman of one's acquaintance, woman friend (plural: woman friends) or lady of one's acquaintance.

Get. "I didn't get to go" is a provincialism for "was not able to go." "She got around the old lady" is colloquial for "persuaded," "coaxed." Get on to, get next to, get away with, get across, get left, are slang.

Get up. A colloquialism for organize, institute, compose, prepare, arrange, print, bind, dress, decorate, or ornament. "A get-up" is a colloquialism for a dress, a costume.

Going on.

Tautological and provincial: How old is he? Sixteen, going on seventeen.

Right: How old is he? Sixteen.

Good. An adjective; must not be used as an adverb.

Wrong: Do it good this time.

Right: Do it well this time.

Got. The perfect tense is colloquial in the sense of possess. It is correct in the sense of obtained.

Colloquial: Have you got a knife with you?

Preferable: Have you a knife with you?

Right: Have you got what you wanted?

Got up, gotten up. See Get up.

Gotten. Often used still, but "got" is the accepted modern form.

Undesirable: He has gotten his reward at last.

Right: He has got his reward at last.

Grand. Means on a large scale, imposing; as "a grand mountain range." Should not be used loosely. Say not "a grand day," but "a beautiful or brilliant day."

Grip. Colloquial in the United States for valise or bag. Gripsack is likewise a colloquialism.

Guess. Colloquial in the United States to express supposition, expectation, or intention. Say "think," "suppose," "expect," "mean," or "intend."

Had better, had best, had rather. Entirely grammatical and fully approved by good usage. Would better, would best, and would rather are not preferable. Had better is preferable to would better; had best and would best, had rather and would rather are equally good.

Correct but undesirable: You would better not stay long.

Right: You had better not stay long.

Right: They had best attempt no violence.

Right: I had rather go than stay.

Had have or had of. Often incorrectly used for had.

Bad: If we had have [or had of] tried, he would have succeeded.

Right: If he had tried, he would have succeeded.

Had ought. See Ought.

Hardly, scarcely, only, but. Should not be used with a negative.

Wrong: It was so misty that we couldn't hardly see.

Right: It was so misty that we could hardly see.

Wrong: For a minute I couldn't scarcely tell where I was.

Right: For a minute I could scarcely tell where I was.

Wrong: They are not allowed to go only on Saturdays.

Right: They are allowed to go only on Saturdays.

Wrong: There isn't but one store.

Right: There is but one store.

Have got. See Got.

Heap, heaps. Vulgarisms for very much, a great deal, a great many.

Hear to it. A vulgarism. Say "consent to it," or "allow it."

Help (1). Colloquial in the United States for a servant, servants, or employees.

Help (2). Should not be followed by but when used in the sense of avoid; should be followed by a gerund.

Wrong: I can't help but regret.

Right: I can't help regretting.

Hired girl. Colloquial for maid or servant.

Home. Properly used as an adverb expressing motion, as "He went home." "He is home" is wrong when it means "He is at home," but right when it means "He has come home." (See Rule 113, note.)

Honorable. See Reverend.

Hung. Improper when used in reference to an execution. Say "hanged."

Wrong: He was found guilty and hung.

Right: He was found guilty and hanged.

Right: We hung the flag on the balcony.

Hustle. Colloquial in the United States when used intransitively to mean hasten, hurry, or be energetic or industrious. Correctly used with a direct object.

Colloquial: People were hustling about in confusion.

Right: People were hurrying about in confusion.

Right: The police hustled the loiterers from the hall.

Hustler. A colloquialism for an energetic or capable person.

i.e. Means that is; denotes, therefore, that what follows is equivalent to what precedes. Should not be used when what follows is not equivalent to what precedes, or when that is will not fit grammatically into the place of i.e.

Right: The act is treated as a capital crime — i.e., a crime punishable by death. ["A crime punishable by death" is equivalent to "a capital crime"; and that is may be grammatically substituted for "i.e."]

Wrong: I like to read the Bible, i.e., some of the stories in the Old Testament. ["Some of the stories in the Old Testament" is not equivalent to "the Bible."]

Wrong: I like some parts of the Bible, i.e., the stories in the Old Testament. [That is cannot be grammatically substituted for "i.e."]

Right: I like some parts of the Bible — namely, [or viz.,] the stories in the Old Testament.

Right: He had committed lese-majesty — i.e., had given an affront to the Emperor. ["Had . . . Emperor" is equivalent to "had . . . majesty" and that is may properly be substituted for "i.e."]

If. A colloquialism used as a synonym of whether after see, ask, learn, know, doubt, and the like.

Inadvisable: I don't know if I can.

Right: I don't know whether I can.

Ilk. An archaic adjective meaning same. In the expression of that ilk, as correctly used, ilk is an adjective modifying estate understood; "Sir George Urquhart of that ilk" means Sir George Urquhart of that same (estate) — i.e., Sir George Urquhart of Urquhart.

The use of ilk as a noun meaning kind is a blunder.

Wrong: I'm not of her ilk, I'm glad to say.

Right: I'm not of her sort, I'm glad to say.

In. Generally incorrect when used to express motion. Say "into."

Wrong: He went in the bank.

Right: He went into the bank.

In back of. In front of is correct; "in back of" is a vulgarism. Say "behind."

In our midst. See Midst.

Incredible, incredulous. The former means unbelievable; the latter, disinclined to believe. "He had caught an incredible number of fish, and I was incredulous when he told me."

Individual. Should not be used indiscriminately for person. Properly used to mean individual person.

Right: He made a general address to the class, and also gave special advice to the individuals in the class.

Wrong: He is a tall, gaunt individual.

Right: He is a tall, gaunt fellow [or person, or man].

Indulge. Means (a) to treat with forbearance; as "Will you indulge me for a moment?" or (b) to put no restraint upon oneself; as "He indulges in [i.e., puts no restraint upon himself in regard to] gambling." Indulge in is often misused for practice or engage in.

Bad: Practice in surveying is indulged in in the autumn.

Right: Practice in surveying is engaged in [or taken] in the autumn.

Inferior. See Superior.

Ingenious, ingenuous. An inventor is ingenious; a person of a frank, trusting nature is ingenuous.

Inside. Does not require of following. Say simply "inside."

Right: They were trapped inside the walls.

Inside of. A colloquial Americanism for within, in time expressions.

Bad: It will disappear inside of a week.

Right: It will disappear within a week.

Instance, instant, incident. Instance means a single occurrence, an example; as "I will give you an instance of this habit." Incidents are happenings.

Just. A colloquialism when used as an intensive.

Bad: I shall be just delighted to come.

Right: I shall be quite delighted to come.

Kind, sort.

Crude and incorrect: I don't like those kind [or those sort] of photographs.

Right: I don't like that kind [or that sort] of photographs.

Kind of, sort of (1). A low colloquialism when used to modify verbs or adjectives. Say "somewhat," "somehow," "for some reason," "rather," or "after a fashion."

Bad: People who kind of chill you . . .

Right: People who somehow chill you . . .

Bad: The man who does nothing but study, gets sort of dull.

Right: The man who does nothing but study, gets rather dull.

Bad: I kind of felt my way at first.

Right: I felt my way, after a fashion, at first.

Kind of, sort of (2). Should not be followed by a or an.

Inelegant: What kind of a house is it?

Right: What kind of house is it?

Inelegant: It is a sort of a castle.

Right: It is a sort of castle.

Kindly. Misused in business letters.

Wrong: I thank you very kindly. [Implies that the writer is doing a kindness.]

Right: I thank you very much.

Right: I thank you for your kindness.

Wrong: I would kindly ask you to send me your circular. [Implies that the writer is doing a kindness to the receiver of the letter.]

Right: Will you kindly [please] send me your circular?

Lady, lady friend. See Gentleman and Gentleman friend.

Latter. See Former.

Lay. Often confounded with lie. Remember that lay is the causative of lie; i.e., to lay means to cause to lie. Remember the principal parts of each verb:

I lie

I lay

I have lain.

I lay

I laid

I have laid.

Learn. A provincialism when used in the sense of teach; as "He learned us our lessons."

Leave go of. A colloquialism. Say "leave hold of" or "let go."

Wrong: He left go of the rope.

Right: He left hold of the rope; [or] He let go the rope.

Less. Should not be used in place of fewer.

Wrong: Less men were hurt this year than last.

Right: Fewer men were hurt this year than last.

Liab. Means (a) easily susceptible; as "It is liable to injury"; or (b) likely; as "It is liable to be misunderstood." But NOTE: Liab. is not properly used in the sense of likely except in designating an injurious or undesirable event which may befall a person or thing.

Wrong: We are liable to have a clear day tomorrow.

Right: We are likely, etc.

Like. Incorrect when used to introduce a subject with a verb. Say "as" or "as if." Like is correct when followed by a substantive without a verb.

Vulgar: He acted like the rest did.

Right: He acted as the rest did.

Right: He acted like the rest.

Vulgar: I felt like I had done something generous.

Right: I felt as if I had done something generous.

Right: I felt like a philanthropist.

Liked. Should not be compounded with would or should.

Bad: He would liked to have gone.

Right: He would have liked to go. (See Rule 237.)

Likely. Not in good use as an adverb meaning probably except after most or quite.

Line. The following uses of line are loose and incorrect:

(a) The loose use of line in the sense of kind or business, or in other senses for which there are precise words.

Bad: What line of work are you now doing?

Right: What kind of work are you now doing?

Bad: I am now engaged in the hardware line.

Right: I am now engaged in the hardware business.

(b) The use of line shown in the following Bad examples.

Bad: I like anything in the card line.

Right: I like any game of cards.

Bad: Was there anything in the refreshment line?

Right: Were there any refreshments?

Bad: He said a few things in the advice line.

Right: He gave me a little advice; [or] He said a few things by way of advice.

Bad: I'm not very good in the walking line.

Right: I'm not very good at walking.

(c) The use of "along the line of" or "in the line of" for in connection with, in regard to, about, on the subject of, in the nature of, by way of, in, of.

Bad: He was also famous along the line of literature.

Right: He was also famous in literature.

Bad: The dean said some things along the line of athletics.

Right: The dean said some things about athletics.

Bad: We are planning something in the line of a surprise.

Right: We are planning something by way of surprise.

(d) The use of "along this or that line" or "in this or that line," for in or on or in regard to this or that subject, in this or that respect, of this or that sort.

Bad: Let me tell you something along that line.

Right: Let me tell you something in connection with that subject.

Bad: If he is so weak in physics and chemistry, he needs some tutoring along those lines.

Right: If he is so weak in physics and chemistry, he needs some tutoring in those subjects.

Bad: I need some tacks. Have you anything along that line?

Right: I need some tacks. Have you anything of that sort?

Lines. A provincialism for reins.

Loan. Objectionable as a verb.

Inelegant: He loaned me a book.

Right: He lent me a book.

Right: The loan was a great assistance.

Locate. A colloquialism for settle. Correct when used transitively.

Bad: He located in Ohio.

Right: He settled in Ohio.

Right: He located his factory in Lima.

Lose out, win out. Slang, not proper except in connection with sports.

Lot, lots, a whole lot. Colloquialisms for much, many, a great deal.

Bad: We had lots of fun on my grandfather's farm.

Right: We had a great deal of fun on my grandfather's farm.

Lovely. Means lovable or inspiring love; as "a lovely character." A colloquialism when used loosely. Say not "a lovely time," but "a pleasant or delightful time"; not "a lovely drive," but "an interesting or pleasant drive"; not "a lovely costume," but "a handsome, or dainty, or rich, or striking, or elegant costume." Avoid especially the expression perfectly lovely. Choose the adjective that expresses your meaning definitely.

Luxuriant. Means of rank or vigorous growth. Not to be confounded with luxurious, which is related to indulgence in pleasures of the senses. A luxurious home, but luxuriant vegetation.

Mad. Means insane. Colloquial for angry.

May of. See Of.

Mean. Means lowly or base. Colloquial when used to mean cruel, vicious, unkind, or ill-tempered.

Messrs. The plural of Mr. Like Mr., Messrs. should never be used without a name or names following it. (See Rule 422.)

Vulgar: Messrs., will you come in? [To say this is like saying "Mister, will you come in?" or "Mrs., I have come."] Right: Gentlemen, will you come in?

Right: Messrs. Zangwill and Barrie met the Messrs. McCarthy.

Midst. The expressions our midst, your midst, and their midst preceded by a preposition have been censured by critics and have gathered many ludicrous associations. Instead of "in our midst," say "in the midst of us" or "among us." Instead of "from our midst," many writers use "from the midst of us" or "from among us," or substitute for midst some nouns such as neighborhood, community, fellowship, etc.

Might of. See Of.

Miss. Like Mr., Mrs., and Messrs., Miss, when used as a title, must always be followed by a name. (Cf. Messrs.)

Vulgar: My dear Miss.

Right: My dear Madam; [or] My dear Miss Smith.

Most. Dialectic for almost. (See Rule 29.)

Mrs. The combination of Mrs. with a husband's title is incorrect. Mrs. may be followed only (1) by the woman's surname, (2) by her husband's Christian name (or initials) and surname, or (3) if the woman is a widow, by her own Christian name and surname; the husband's title, if stated at all, should be put in another part of the sentence.

Right: Mrs. Boughton. [1]

Right: Mrs. John C. Boughton. [2]

Right (for a widow): Mrs. Mary Dole. [3]

Wrong: Mrs. Professor Yates. Mrs. Dr. Fairbanks. Mrs. President Hughes. Mrs. Bishop Ross. Mrs. Rev. Fisher. Mrs. Captain Johnson.

Right: Mrs. Richard E. Yates; Mrs. Fairbanks, wife of Dr. Fairbanks; Mrs. Louisa Hughes, widow of President Hughes; Mrs. Jeremiah Ross; Mrs. Noah Fisher; Mrs. C. V. Johnson.

Much. Not to be used for very.

Wrong: My work is much different this year.

Right: My work is very different this year.

Must of. See Of.

Mutual. Incorrect, according to modern usage, in the sense of shared in common; for this meaning the proper adjective is common. Mutual, properly used, means reciprocal, interchanged.

Wrong: As we conversed, we found that we had several mutual friends in Portland. [The title of Dickens's novel Our Mutual Friend is a quotation from some ill-educated persons in the story; it therefore furnishes no good argument for the correctness of the expression "mutual friend."]

Right: As we conversed, we found that we had several common friends in Portland.

Wrong: The two men had a mutual interest in sculpture.

Right: . . . a common interest in sculpture.

Right: They practiced mutual forbearance and aid [i.e., each one helped and bore with the other]. — Their faces showed a mutual hatred [i.e., showed that each hated the other]. — Mutual friendship [i.e., friendship interchanged between two persons]. — Common friendship [i.e., friendship shared by two persons for a third].

Myself. Not to be used for I and not as a rule for me. Himself, herself, and themselves are used like myself.

Right: I myself will attend to it.

Wrong: My wife and myself will go.

Right: My wife and I will go.

Wrong: This is for you and myself.

Right: This is for you and me.

Especially avoid expressions like "yourself and guests," "myself and brother." Say "you and your guests," "my brother and I."

Near-by. A colloquialism when used as an adjective. (See Rule 28.)

Colloquial: A near-by house.

Right: A neighboring, or adjacent, house; [or] A house that stood near by.

Nearly. Often misused for near.

Wrong: He came nearly getting hurt.

Right: He came near getting hurt.

Neither. See Either.

Nice. Means keen and precise in discrimination, or delicately or precisely made; as "nice judge of values," "a nice discrimination." A colloquialism when used to mean pleasant. Say not "a nice fellow," but "an agreeable, or admirable, or conscientious, or honorable fellow"; not "a nice time," but "a pleasant time"; not "He is nice to us," but "He is kind or courteous to us." Choose the adjective that expresses your meaning definitely.

No good. A vulgarism when used adjectively. Say "worthless," "of no value."

No place. See Any place.

No use. Incorrect when used adjectively. Say "of no use," "of no value," or "unsuccessful."

Notorious. Means of bad repute; as "a notorious gambler." Not to be used for famous or celebrated.

Not. A double negative is forbidden by modern usage.

Wrong: I could not find it nowhere.

Right: I could find it nowhere.

Right: I could not find it anywhere.

Not to exceed. Should not be used except in giving or quoting orders or directions. Often misused for not more than.

Right: They were authorized to spend any sum, not to exceed $500,000. [See Rule 360 f.]

Wrong: The trains are composed of not to exceed twenty cars.

Right: The trains are composed of not more than twenty cars.

Nowhere near. A vulgarism for not nearly.

Observance. Means the act of paying respect or obedience. Not to be confused with observation, which means the act of inspecting, looking at.

Right: The observance of Good Friday.

Right: From his observation of the sky, he judged that a storm was approaching.

Observation. See Observance.

Of. Could of, may of, might of, must of, should of, and would of are illiterate corruptions of could have, may have, might have, must have, should have, and would have.

Off of. Incorrect for off.

Wrong: Keep off of the grass.

Right: Keep off the grass.

On the side. Slang for incidental, collateral, occasional, or the corresponding adverbs.

Only. See Hardly.

Or. Should not be correlated with neither; use nor.

Wrong: Neither the long Arctic night or any other cause . . .

Right: Neither the long Arctic night nor any other cause . . .

Oral. See Verbal.

Other times. Sometimes is an adverb; other times is not. Say "at other times."

Ought. The combination of ought with had is conspicuously bad English.

Wrong: You hadn't ought to have entered.

Right: You ought not to have entered.

Wrong: We ought to send, had we not?

Right: We ought to send, ought we not?

Ought to of. Vulgarism for ought to have.

Vulgar: You ought to of waited.

Right: You ought to have waited.

Right: You should have waited.

Out loud. Not a permissible expression. Say aloud.

Outside (1). Does not require of following. Say simply "outside."

Right: Outside the barn the cattle were shivering.

Outside (2). Outside of should not be used for aside from.

Wrong: Outside of this mistake, it is very good.

Right: Aside from this mistake, it is very good.

Over with. With is superfluous.

Wrong: The regatta is over with.

Right: The regatta is over.

Overly. A vulgarism. Say "over."

Vulgar: I'm not overly anxious.

Right: I'm not over-anxious.

Pair, set. Singular, not plural, forms.

Wrong: Two pair of gloves and three set of chisels.

Right: Two pairs of gloves and three sets of chisels.

Part. See Portion.

Partake of. Means to take a part (of something) in common with others, to share with others; as "Good and evil alike partake of the air and the sunshine," "The whole delegation partook of his hospitality." The use of partake of as if it were synonymous with eat is a blunder and usually an affectation.

Party. Means a person or group of persons taking part (in some transaction). Incorrect when used to mean simply person.

Right: The parties to the marriage were both young.

Wrong: The party who wrote that article must have been a scholar.

Per. Use per with Latin words, such as annum, diem, cent; not, as a rule, with English words. Avoid the expression as per; say according to.

Inelegant: Three dollars per day; one suicide per week; seven robberies per month; $3200 per year; two deaths per thousand; thirteen cents per gallon.

Right: Three dollars a day [or per diem]; one suicide a week; seven robberies a month; $3200 a year [or per annum]; two deaths for every thousand; thirteen cents a gallon.

Per cent. It is better to use per cent only after a numeral. (See Rule 28.)

Wrong: A large per cent were Chinese.

Right: Twenty per cent were Chinese. [See Rules 241 b and 385.]

Right: A large percentage were Chinese.

Phase. Means appearance or aspect; as "That phase of the question I haven't considered." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: I began to engage in all the different phases of college pleasure.

Right: I began to engage in all the different kinds of college pleasure.

Phenomena. A plural noun. See Data.

Phone. A colloquialism. Not yet proper in formal discourse.

Piano. Should not be used to mean instruction in piano-playing.

Wrong: She is taking piano.

Right: She is taking piano lessons.

Piece. A provincialism when used in the sense of distance or short distance.

Plan. Should not be combined with on. Say simply "plan."

Wrong: We planned on taking a walk.

Right: We planned taking a walk; [or] We planned to take a walk.

Plenty (1). A colloquialism when used as an adjective. Say "plentiful." (See Rule 28.)

Wrong: Wheat is plenty.

Right: Wheat is plentiful.

Right: There is plenty of wheat.

Plenty (2). Colloquial when used as an adverb. (See Rule 27.)

Wrong: It is plenty good enough.

Right: It is quite good enough.

Portion. Best used in its restricted sense, as a proportionate part or share, and distinguished from part. "A portion of the inheritance"; "a part of the day."

Postal. An adjective. Inelegant for postal card.

Posted. Incorrect for informed.

Wrong: Keep me posted.

Right: Keep me informed.

Wrong: He is well posted about politics.

Right: He is well informed about politics.

Practical. Means related to actual use, as opposed to theoretical or ideal.

Do not confuse with practicable, which means capable of being put into practice. A practical scheme (i.e., valuable or sensible) may not be practicable until a better opportunity.

Prefer. The thing about which something is said to be preferred should be made the object of the preposition to, never put into a than clause.

Wrong: I should prefer to go there than anywhere else.

Right: I should prefer going there to going anywhere else.

Propose. Means to offer. Should not be used for to purpose or to intend, though now approved by good dictionaries.

Inadvisable: I did not propose to divulge the secret.

Right: I did not purpose [or intend] to divulge the secret.

Proposition. Means a thing proposed or the act of proposing; as "He made a proposition to sell." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning. Avoid especially the use of proposition for work or task.

Slang: To sink that shaft was a hard proposition.

Right: To sink that shaft was a hard piece of work.

Bad: The library-buffet car is the most comfortable proposition on wheels.

Right: The library-buffet car is the most comfortable vehicle on wheels.

Prospect. Slang when used to designate a person.

Slang: I think he is a good prospect.

Right: I think he is a possible customer.

Proven. An irregular form, and has enemies. Better "proved."

Providing. Provided is preferable.

Right: I will lend it, provided he agrees to take good care of it.

Put in. A colloquialism for spend or occupy.

Colloquial: I put in three hours in trying to memorize it.

Right: I spent three hours, etc.

Put in an appearance. A legal phrase. In ordinary writing, say appear.

Quality. Means characteristic or trait; as "The qualities of birch bark are lightness of color, thinness, and smoothness." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: The social qualities of college life are more in evidence in the winter. (See Rule 42.)

Right: The social activities of college life are more apparent in the winter.

Bad: He gives three qualities of a business man: Have something to say, say it, and stop talking.

Right: He gives three maxims for a business man: Have something to say, say it, and stop talking.

Quite. Means (a) wholly; as "The stream is now quite dried up"; or (b) greatly, very; as "We could see it quite distinctly." A colloquialism when used in the sense of slightly, not very.

Wrong: The room is quite large, but not large enough for any one to be comfortable in.

Right: The room is moderately large, but not large enough for any one to be comfortable in.

Quite a few. Colloquial for a good many or a considerable number.

Quite a little. Colloquial for a considerable amount or a good deal.

Raise (1). A provincialism when applied to human beings, in the sense of rear, bring up.

Raise (2). Often confounded with rise. Remember that raise is the causative of rise; i.e., to raise means to cause to rise. Therefore raise must always have an object. Remember the principal parts of each verb:

I rise
I raise

I rose
I raised

I have risen.
I have raised.

Real. Colloquial when used for very. (See Rule 27.)

Colloquial: It is real handsome.

Right: It is very handsome.

Reason. Do not complete such an expression as the reason is with (a) a because clause, (b) a because of phrase, (c) a due to phrase, or (d) an on account of phrase; complete it with a that clause. (See Rule 105.)

Illogical: The reason he was offended was because they were arrogant.

Illogical: The reason he was offended was because of their arrogance.

Illogical: The reason he was offended was due to their arrogance.

Illogical: The reason he was offended was on account of their arrogance.

Right: The reason he was offended was that they were arrogant.

Refer. See Allude.

Remember. The name of the thing remembered should not be preceded by of.

Wrong: I remember of meeting him.

Right: I remember meeting him.

Respectful, respectable, respective. "He was respectful to his elders"; "a respectable old woman"; "their respective positions" — i.e., the positions belonging to each. "Yours respectfully" (not respectively) is proper in the complimentary close of a letter.

Reverend, Honorable. Should be preceded by the, and should never be followed immediately by a surname. (See Rules 358 and 367.)

Vulgar: Rev. Carter.

Vulgar: The Reverend Carter.

Right: The Reverend Mr. Carter.

Right: The Reverend Amos Carter.

Right: The Reverend Dr. Temple.

Rig. A provincialism for carriage, buggy, or wagon.

Right away, right off. Colloquial. Say "immediately," "at once," or "directly."

Run. A colloquial Americanism, in the sense of manage or operate.

Said. See Say.

Same (1). No longer in good use as a pronoun except in legal documents.

Wrong: We will repair the engine and ship same [or the same] to you next week.

Right: We will repair the engine and ship it to you next week.

Inelegant: The principal of the bonds was paid and the same canceled. [See Rule 110 a.]

Right: The principal of the bonds was paid and the bonds were canceled.

Same (2). The same as should not be used for in the same way as or just as.

Wrong: The draft is treated the same as a check is treated.

Right: The draft is treated just as a check is treated.

Say. Should not be used to mean give orders, with an infinitive as object.

Crude: The guard said to go back.

Right: The guard ordered us [or told us] to go back.

Scare. See Frighten.

Scarcely. See Hardly.

School. Should not be used for college or university.

Search. The phrase "in search for" is incorrect; say "in search of."

Right: The lion goes in search of sheep.

Seem. "Can't seem" is illogical and improper. Say "seem unable," or "do not seem able."

Seldom ever. Obsolete. Say "seldom" or "hardly ever."

Seldom or ever. A vulgarism. Say "seldom if ever."

Selection. Means a thing selected; as "He played a selection from Wagner." Should not be used where there is no idea of selecting.

Bad: Our class prophet then read an amusing selection, in which he satirized his classmates.

Right: Our class prophet then read an amusing composition [or skit, or squib, or piece], in which, etc.

Set (1). Often confounded with sit. Remember that set is the causative of sit; i.e., to set means to cause to sit. Remember the principal parts of each verb:

I sit	I sat	I have sat.
I set	I set	I have set.

The use of set without an object, as expressing mere rest, is a vulgarism; say "sit," "stand," "lie," "rest," or "is set."

Wrong: The pole sets firmly in the socket.

Right: The pole is set [or sits] firmly in the socket.

Wrong: The vase sets on the mantel.

Right: The vase stands [or rests] on the mantel.

Wrong: The boat sets lightly on the water.

Right: The boat lies [or rests] lightly on the water.

Setting hen, commonly used, is a questionable idiom.

Set (2). Set for sets (plural). See Pair.

Shan't. A colloquialism. A contraction for shall not.

Shape. Should not be used loosely to mean manner or condition.

Wrong: They executed the maneuvers in good shape.

Right: They executed the maneuvers in an expert manner.

Wrong: He is in good shape for the debate.

Right: He is in good condition (or thoroughly prepared] for the debate.

Should of. See Of.

Show (1). Colloquial for play, opera, concert.

Show (2). A colloquialism for chance or promise.

Colloquial: The freshman team had an excellent show of winning.

Right: The freshman team had an excellent chance of winning.

Show up. A colloquialism when used intransitively in the sense of appear, attend, come, or be present; and when used transitively in the sense of show or expose.

Sight of. "A sight of" is a vulgarism for much, many, a great deal.

Size. Never use size as an adjective; say "sized," or "of size."

Wrong: The different size dies are sorted.

Right: The different sized dies are sorted.

Wrong: Any size chain will do.

Right: A chain of any size will do.

Size up. A vulgarism for estimate, judge, pass upon.

Sleeper. See Diner.

Smoker. See Diner.

Snap. See Vim.

So (1). Should not be used for so that.

Wrong: They strapped it so it would hold.

Right: They strapped it so that it would hold.

So (2). Vague and weak when used alone to modify an adjective. (See Rule 114, note.)

Weak: During the first semester I was so lonely.

Right: During the first semester I was very lonely.

So (3). See Too.

Some. A provincialism, when used as an adverb. (See Rule 28.)

Wrong: I worked some last winter.

Right: I did some work last winter.

Wrong: I am some better today.

Right: I am somewhat better today.

Some place. See Any place.

Sort of. See Kind.

Sort of. See Kind of.

Specie. Means gold or silver money. Species, meaning kind, has the same form in the singular and the plural.

Right: The first species is more valuable than the other two species are.

Start. "I started to school in 1908" is wrong, but "I started to school early that morning" is correct. "I started in school in 1908" is correct, though less desirable than "I began to attend school." In the expressions, "He started in to quarrel," and "He started up in business," the in and the up are incorrect, and should be omitted.

Stop. Means to cease or to cease from motion. A colloquialism when used in the sense of stay. Good British usage.

Right: Are you staying [not stopping] with friends?

Strata. A plural noun. See Data.

Such (1). When such is completed by a relative clause, the relative pronoun of the clause should not be who, which, or that; it should be as (see as in a dictionary).

Wrong: I will act under such rules that may be fixed.

Right: I will act under such rules as may be fixed.

Wrong: All such persons present who consent will rise.

Right: All such persons present as consent will rise.

Such (2). When such is completed by a result clause, this clause should be introduced, not by so that, but by that alone.

Wrong: There was such a mist so that we couldn't see.

Right: There was such a mist that we couldn't see.

Such (3). Avoid the vague and weak use of such without a result clause. (See Rule 114, note.)

Weak: We had such a good time.

Right: We had a very good time.

Superior, inferior. Should never be limited by a than clause, but always by a to phrase.

Wrong: It was superior from every point of view than the lathe previously used.

Right: It was superior from every point of view to the lathe previously used.

Suppose. See Expect.

Sure. Incorrect as an adverb.

Wrong: Will you go? Sure.

Right: Will you go? Surely [I will go].

Suspicion. Incorrectly used as a verb.

Wrong: I did not suspicion that he was coming.

Right: I did not suspect that he was coming.

Swell. A vulgarism when used as an adjective. (See Rule 28.)

Take. A colloquialism when used for study.

Colloquial: I took Spanish and chemistry.

Right: I studied Spanish and chemistry.

Take in (1). A vulgarism for attend or go to.

Take in (2). A vulgarism for cheat or deceive.

Take and. Sometimes used redundantly.

Wrong: It will stay if you take and put it on right.

Right: It will stay if you put it on right.

Take it. Should not be used in introducing an example.

Bad: Take it in Wisconsin, the old-fashioned method of logging is becoming extinct.

Right: In Wisconsin, for example, the old-fashioned method of logging is becoming extinct.

Take sick. A colloquialism for become sick.

Take stock in. See Bank on.

Team. Means a couple or group of animals or persons; as "a team of horses," "a team of athletes." A provincialism when applied to one animal or to a vehicle.

Wrong: Will you ride in my team?

Right: Will you ride in my buggy [or carriage, or wagon]?

Than, till, until. Often improperly used for when, as in the following Wrong sentences. (See Rule 105.)

Wrong: Scarcely had he mounted the wagon than the horse started.

Right: Scarcely had he mounted the wagon when the horse started.

Wrong: We had hardly got there and put things in order till Jenks came.

Right: We had hardly got there and put things in order when Jenks came.

That. Colloquial as an adverb. (Cf. This, and see Rule 28.)

Colloquial: He went only that far.

Right: He went only so far.

Colloquial: If it is that bad, we must retreat.

Right: If it is so bad [or so bad as that], we must retreat.

That there. See This here.

These here. See This here.

This. Colloquial as an adverb. (Cf. That, and see Rule 28.)

Colloquial: Having come this far . . .

Right: Having come thus far [or as far as this] . . .

Colloquial: The water hasn't ever before been this high.

Right: The water hasn't ever before been so high as this.

This here, these here, that there, those there. Gross vulgarisms. Say "this," "these," "that," or "those."

Those kind, those sort. See Kind, sort.

Those there. See This here.

Through. Inelegant when used as in the following sentence:

Wrong: He is through writing.

Right: He has finished writing; [or] He has done writing.

NOTE. — Never say "is finished" or "is done" in the sense above shown.

Till for when. See Than.

Too, so, very. No one of these words should immediately precede a past participle; say "too much," "so much," "very much."

Wrong: He is too exhausted to speak.

Right: He is too much exhausted to speak.

Wrong: He felt very insulted.

Right: He felt very much insulted.

Transpire. Means to become known; as "In spite of their efforts at concealment, the secret transpired." It is both affected and incorrect to use the word in the sense of occur.

Treat. Should be followed, when used to mean discuss or speak of, by of, not by on or with.

Wrong: The author treats on two subjects.

Right: The author treats of two subjects.

Trend. Means direction; as "The rivers of this land have a southern trend." Should not be used without regard to its proper meaning.

Bad: The egg business is only incidental to the general trend of the store.

Right: The egg business is only incidental to the general business of the store.

Try and. Colloquial for try to.

Colloquial: I shall try and get a good position.

Right: I shall try to get a good position.

But good British usage.

Ugly. Means repulsive to the eye. A provincialism when used to mean vicious, malicious, or ill-tempered.

Bad: The horse has an ugly temper.

Right: The horse has a vicious temper.

Bad: The conductor acted very ugly.

Right: The conductor acted very discourteously [or un-civilly].

Unique. Means the only one of its kind. Cannot be qualified, as "This is quite unique," or "fairly unique," or "the most unique."

United States. This name should usually be preceded by the. Do not write: We live in United States.

Until for when. See Than.

Up. Should not be appended to the verbs cripple, divide, end, finish, open, polish, rest, scratch, settle.

Wrong: He opened up the box and divided the money up among the men.

Right: He opened the box and divided the money among the men.

Up to date. A colloquialism when used as an adjective; better used as an adverbial modifier.

Colloquial: His house is up to date.

Preferable: His house is modern.

Right: He brought the history up to date.

Verbal and oral. Oral is used of the spoken word only. Verbal, meaning in words, is best restricted to the written word, but has become established, as in "a verbal contract," etc.

Very with past participles. See Too.

Vim, snap. Not in good literary use. Say "vigor," "energy," or "spirit."

Violin. Should not be used to mean instruction in violin playing.

Crude: He has just begun violin.

Right: He has just begun to take violin lessons.

Vocal, voice. Should not be used to mean instruction in vocal music. (See Rule 28.)

Crude: Are you keeping on with your vocal?

Crude: She is taking voice.

Voice. See Vocal.

Wait on. A vulgarism for wait for.

Wrong: If I'm not there, don't wait on me.

Right: If I'm not there, don't wait for me.

Want (1). Should not be limited by a clause as in the following sentence:

Wrong: I want you should be happy.

Right: I want you to be happy.

Want (2). "Want in," "want out," "want through," etc., are unauthorized localisms.

Vulgar: Do you want in?

Right: Do you want to come in?

Want (3). "I want for you to get some water" is a provincialism for "I want you to get some water."

Way (1). Unlicensed abbreviation for away.

Wrong: Way up the hill I saw a deer.

Right: Away [or far] up the hill I saw a deer.

Way (2). Should not be used adverbially without a preposition governing it.

Wrong: When he acts that way . . .

Right: When he acts in that way . . .

Wrong: How could a sane man act the way Beals did?

Right: How could a sane man act in the way in which Beals acted? [or, better] . . . act as Beals did?

Ways for way. See Falls.

Well. This word when used merely to mark a transition (e.g., "You know MacDonald, of course. Well, last night as he stepped into his motor . . .") is a colloquialism, not proper in a formal context.

Where (1). Often misused for that as in the following sentence.

Wrong: I see in this morning's paper where Cronin has been caught.

Right: I see in this morning's paper that Cronin has been caught.

Where (2). Do not use "where to" in the sense of whither; omit the to.

Wrong: Where are you going to?

Right: Where are you going?

Which. Should not be used as a relative pronoun in referring to a person.

Wrong: The people which do that are rascals.

Right: The people that do that are rascals.

While. Means (a) during the time in which, (b) though, or (c) whereas; as (a) "I played while he sang"; (b) "While this may be true, it does not content me"; (c) "Yours is in good condition, while mine is quite worn out." Should not be used loosely without regard to its meaning.

Wrong: On one side was a grove, while on the other was a river.

Right: On one side was a grove, on the other a river.

Who. Should not, as a rule, be used in referring to animals; use which.
Whose. In modern usage, the possessive case of who only, though originally also of which, and sometimes so used.

Doubtful: Soon we came to a swamp, on whose bank stood a hunter's cabin.

Preferable: Soon we came to a swamp, on the bank of which stood a hunter's cabin.

Win out. See Lose out.

Wire. A colloquialism for telegraph or telegram. (See Rule 28.)

With. Often vaguely used in place of more exact connectives.

Vague: With the men he has helping him, Parker seems certain to win.

Better: Taking into consideration the men he has helping him, Parker seems certain to win.

Without. Should not be used as a conjunction for except or unless.

Wrong: He will not do it without he has a good opportunity.

Right: He will not do it unless he has a good opportunity.

Woods for wood. See Falls.

Would better, would best, would rather. Correct, but often used under a misapprehension. See Had better.

Would have. Often incorrectly used in if clauses instead of had.

Wrong: If he would have stood by us, we might have won.

Right: If he had stood by us, we might have won.

Would of. See Of.

Write-up. Newspaper word for a report, a description, an account.

You was. A vulgarism. You, though it may designate one person, is grammatically plural, and its verb must always be plural. Say "You were."

GENERAL EXERCISES ON THE GLOSSARY

*Accept and
except*

I. See Except in the Glossary. Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with accept or except: 1. I would — the offer, — for my religious scruples. 2. He is the best pianist in Europe; I do not — even Liszt. 3. Most of the rebels were offered pardon and —ed it; but the leaders were —ed from the offer. 4. He burned all the household goods, not —ing even the heirlooms. 5. Why did you — Charles from your invitation? He wouldn't have —ed anyway.

*Affect and
effect*

II. See Affect in the Glossary. Write the following sentences, filling the blanks with affect or effect: 1. That statement is true, but it does not — the case. 2. The failure of the bank did not — his equanimity. 3. The admonition of the dean had a good —. 4. The generals —ed a junction, but this action had no — on the enemy. 5. His brooding —ed his health. 6. The utmost efforts of his physician could not — a cure.

Like

III. See Like in the Glossary. Complete the following sentences: 1. I wish I could run like —. 2. If you find him engaged at his gymnastics, like —. 3. She sat for a long time deep in thought, like —.

Copy the following sentences, filling the blanks with as, as if, or like: 4. Don't act — a baby. 5. — all his predecessors, he was despotic. 6. We never quarrel now — we did when we were boys. 7. He was hanged, just — a common spy. 8. He was hanged, just — he had been a common spy. 9. He votes — his father did. 10. She sings — she had a cold. 11. He can run — a race-horse. 12. He can run — a race-horse runs. 13. He takes severe training — a man usually does when he is preparing for a prize fight. 14. He takes very severe training — a prize fighter. 15. She stood — a statue. 16. She stood — a statue might have stood. 17. He whimpered, — a spoiled child, about every little inconvenience. 18. He whined, — a spoiled child does, at every inconvenience. 19. — his father did, he saved his money. 20. — all his predecessors had been, Henry VIII was despotic. 21. We do not quarrel now — we were still unfriendly. 22. They quarrel constantly, — boys usually do. 23. They quarrel — cats and dogs. 24. He was hanged, — many another spy caught in such an enterprise. 25. He was hanged ——— many another spy has been. 26. I vote, ——— my father, for the Conservative party. 27. I vote, ——— my father did, for the Conservatives. 28. She sings ——— a person afflicted with goitre. 29. She sings ——— a person with goitre might sing.

IV. The following sentences are ungrammatical. Rewrite them, correcting the errors. 1. She sings like she had a cold. 2. They executed him like he had been a common spy. 3. The sky looks like we should have rain. 4. He acts like he was the master of ceremonies. 5. The game isn't played like we used to play it. 6. He counted out the money dexterously, like a bank teller does. 7. These waves roar just like the ocean waves do. 8. She walks clumsily, like a duck waddles. 9. He turns his toes in, like an Indian does. 10. He grew white like he feared the boat would capsize. 11. I felt like I must scream. 12. It seemed like I was in a nightmare. 13. She cried out, like she had been struck. 14. Move your hand just like I move mine. 15. It stretches like a rubber band does.

V. See Real in the Glossary. Correct the following Real sentences: 1. You are real generous. 2. The room is real comfortable. 3. It was a real hard storm. 4. She writes a real pretty hand. 5. I felt real lonesome. 6. She told us a real sad story. 7. Hanksburg is a real pleasant town.

VI. Study Due to in the Glossary. Correct and rewrite Due to the following sentences: 1. Hamlet treated her rudely due to his mental distraction. 2. Shop work is easy for me due to a natural talent for manual work. 3. Due to some one's carelessness the valve had been left open. 4. Due to bad weather the game is postponed. 5. He refused to buy due to the high price asked. 6. Due to his ignorance of French he misunderstood the letter. 7. I was put in the bow due to my light weight. 8. He had to sell his house due to need of ready money. 9. Due to his long exposure he became sick. 10. I kept warm and comfortable due to my fur coat.

VII. Study Falls, Ways, Woods in the Glossary. Correct Falls, ways, and woods and rewrite the following incorrect sentences: 1. It is a long ways from here. 2. We carried our boat around a falls. 3. Is there a woods on your farm? 4. This falls is not very high. 5. Walk a little ways with us. 6. He lost himself in a woods. 7. The woods is on fire.

Write three sentences using the expression a little way, three using a long way, three using a wood, three using the woods are, three using the falls were.

Whose

VIII. Study Whose in the Glossary. Rewrite the following sentences: 1. I sat on the roof, whose slope was not very steep. 2. I selected a cloth whose texture was woven loosely. 3. I perceived a steeple on whose top revolved a gilded vane. 4. It was an antique table, whose legs bore the pineapple decoration. 5. He exhibited a painting in whose execution he had evidently expended much labor. 6. Get some of those matches whose ends are tipped with red. 7. A verb whose subject is a collective noun may properly be in the plural. 8. He lit a fire, whose heat was very comfortable. 9. A chain any of whose links are weak is a weak chain. 10. You sold me a book whose type is too small.

"Could of," "may of," etc.

IX. Study Could of, Should of, Would of, May of, Must of, Might of in the Glossary. Correct the following sentences: 1. You should of seen me. 2. I would of come if I could of spared the time. 3. He may of lost his way. 4. I might of lost mine, and then I should of lost this pleasure. 5. If I could of seen him, I would of told him. 6. She must of suspected treachery, or she would not of stayed away. 7. If he could of known, the outcome might of been different. 8. I would not of accepted the offer even if I could of named my own price.

"Would have" and "had have" for had in past perfect.

X. Study Had have and Would have in the Glossary. Correct the following sentences: 1. If we would have started back fifteen minutes later, we should probably have perished in the blizzard. 2. If he would have found the way, he would have gone. 3. If I would have known how it would end, I never would have begun. 4. If he would have been at his post, the accident would not have occurred. 5. If the weather would have been colder, the ice would now be safe. 6. If the boat would have tipped only a little more, it would have been swamped. 7. If she would have been a second later, she would have missed the train. 8. If the wind would have been north, the barn would certainly have caught fire. 9. If the bridge would have been properly built, it would not vibrate as it does. 10. If the old gentleman would have caught the boys, they would have repented sorely. 11. If the alarm clock would have been set, you would have waked in time.

XI. Study You was in the Glossary. Also write the "You was" following sentences, filling each blank with a word to indicate past tense: 1. ——— you satisfied? 2. You ——— generous. 3. You ——— content, ———n't you? 4. You ——— mistaken. 5. ——— you happy, or ———n't you? 6. You ——— never pleased. 7. ——— you sure? 8. ——— you as severe as you ——— justified in being? 9. ———n't you sterner than you ——— authorized to be? 10. You ——— treacherous, you ——— deceitful; therefore you ——— punished.

XII. Study Different in the Glossary. Correct and re-Different write the following sentences: 1. They speak very differently than you speak. 2. Plumbing is entirely different than steam-fitting. 3. This machine is somewhat different than the one I bought. 4. To sail a brig is widely different than to sail a schooner. 5. He is a different man today than he was when you knew him. 6. His purpose is different than I thought it was. 7. My reward was very different than what I deserved. 8. They did it differently then than they do now. 9. Your machinery is different than what I use. 10. Conditions were radically different than what I expected. 11. His character was different, as a matter of fact, than what the historian says it was. 12. You need a different sort of manager than you now have. 13. The state of affairs in Nicaragua is no different than in Bolivia. 14. The Witching Hour deals with a different subject than Mr. Thomas, the author, has used hitherto.

XIII. Study Such (1) in the Glossary. Write ten Such . . . sentences containing severally the following expressions: as all such men as hold this belief, such tools as are necessary, such books as I find interesting, such men as seem to be in earnest, such members as desire to dance, all such citizens as love their country, such as are in need of money, for such as keep His covenant, with such fruits as the season afforded, such as prefer horses to motors, such influence as he may have.

XIV. Study Such (2) in the Glossary. Complete each Such . . . of the following sentences with a that clause: that
 1. He is such a coward . . . 2. There was such a drought . . .
 3. He has such skill . . . 4. There is such a crowd . . .
 5. We made such a protest . . . 6. Such a tempest arose . . . 7. He came with such an army . . . 8. She exercised such tact . . . 9. The lawyer displayed such eloquence . . .

Superior and inferior

XV. Study Superior, Inferior in the Glossary. Complete the following sentences, beginning each added member with a to phrase: 1. This method is superior, in the opinion of all who have used it, . . . 2. His style is inferior, so the critics all agree, . . . 3. The team was inferior, both in weight and in experience, . . . 4. This year's class play will be inferior, unless I am much mistaken, . . . 5. The street-car service here is inferior, however you may regard it, . . . 6. The present system is superior, so far as one can judge, . . . 7. His present situation is superior, so far as salary is concerned, . . .

Prefer and preferable

XVI. Study Prefer in the Glossary. The "prefer . . . than" fault can be corrected by the substitution of prefer . . . to or by the substitution of prefer . . . rather than.

Right: I prefer building to leasing.

Right: I prefer to build rather than to lease.

Rewrite each of the following sentences twice, correcting in the two ways shown above: 1. I prefer to miss the train than to run for it. 2. Do you prefer to be expelled than to apologize? 3. He preferred to write a letter than to explain in person. 4. I prefer to enter business at once than to go to college. 5. I should much prefer to pay the money than to dispute with you. 6. They prefer to take their ease than to work. 7. She prefers to go to a party than to study her lessons. 8. I preferred to freeze my nose than to be suffocated by the bad air. 9. I prefer to risk the journey alone than to have your company. 10. He preferred to kill the horse than to let it suffer.

*No sooner
. . . than*

XVII. Study Than, Till, Until in the Glossary. Also notice this: "No sooner . . . when" is bad English; say no sooner . . . than.

Wrong: No sooner had we arrived when the play began.

Right: No sooner had we arrived than the play began.

[That is, We had arrived no sooner than the play began.]

But note:

Right: Hardly had we arrived when the play began.

*Hardly
. . . when*

Complete the following sentences, using a when clause or a than clause as the sense requires: 1. No sooner did the boat touch the wharf . . . 2. The clock had scarcely finished striking . . . 3. Hardly had I seated myself . . . 4. No sooner had Bassanio departed . . . 5. The policeman had no sooner turned his back . . . 6. Our hero had hardly opened his eyes . . . 7. She no sooner reached the bridge . . . 8. Scarcely had the buck emerged from

- the brush . . . 9. I had hardly laid down the pen . . .
 10. No sooner did the King show signs of yielding . . .
 11. I no sooner overcome one obstacle . . .

XVIII. Study Too, Very in the Glossary. The following sentences are unidiomatic. Rewrite them, correcting each by inserting an adverb (much, greatly, seriously, gravely, sadly, happily, deeply, or any other appropriate adverb) after the "too" or the "very." Too and very with participles

1. He seemed very moved by the appeal. 2. I am very delighted to hear it. 3. They are too offended to forgive us. 4. He is too injured to walk. 5. I am very grieved by this news. 6. She lay down again, feeling very relieved. 7. We are too involved in this affair to withdraw. 8. You need not feel too discouraged. 9. I don't feel very elated. 10. He can't judge fairly; he is too misled by his prejudices.

APPENDIX B

A Grammatical Vocabulary explaining Grammatical and Other Technical Terms used in this Book

Absolute. A substantive with a modifier (usually a participle) attached to a predication but having no syntactic relation to any noun or verb in the predication is called an absolute substantive. An absolute substantive and its modifier are together called an absolute phrase. The italicized part of the following sentence is an absolute phrase: "The wind being favorable, they embarked." For other examples see Rule 55.

Active voice. See Voice.

Adjective. A word used to modify or limit the meaning of a substantive; e.g., black, human, old, beautiful, metallic, dry.

Adjective clause. A clause used to modify a substantive in the manner of an adjective; *e.g., "The rain that fell yesterday was a blessing" (the italicized clause modifies the noun "rain"); "The house where he used to live is vacant" (the italicized clause modifies the noun "house"); "There was once a city on the outskirts of which lay a pestilential morass" (the italicized clause modifies the noun "city"). Adjective clauses are often called relative clauses.*

Adjunct. Modifiers and predicate substantives or predicate adjectives have the general name of adjuncts. A modifier is said to be an adjunct of the sentence-member it modifies; a predicate substantive or adjective is said to be an adjunct of the verb it completes.

Adverb. A word used to modify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs; e.g., slowly, politely, accurately, very, too, then, up, down, out.

Adverbial clause. A clause used to modify an adjective, an adverb, or a verb; *e.g., "He is greater than his father was" (the italicized clause modifies the adjective "greater"); "He walked faster than I did" (the italicized clause modifies the adverb "faster"); "I will come if my salary is paid when it is due" (the clause "if . . . paid" modifies the verb "will come"; the clause "when . . . due" modifies the verb "is paid").*

Adverbial objective. A substantive used to limit adverbially an adjective, an adverb, or a verb; *e.g., "It is worth ten cents" ("ten* cents" limits the adjective "worth"); "He walked two miles farther" ("two miles" limits the adverb "farther"); "He walked two miles" ("two miles" limits "walked" adverbially).

Antecedent. The word, as used in this book, means the substantive to which any pronoun refers. In the sentence, "He who runs may read," "he" is the antecedent of "who." In the sentence "He picked up a stone and threw it," "stone" is the antecedent of "it."

Anticlimax. See Climax.

Appositive. A substantive attached to another substantive and denoting the same person or thing by a different name is called an appositive, or is said to be in apposition with the substantive modified. In the sentence "George the king is enjoying his favorite sport — yachting," "king" is in apposition with "George," and "yachting" is in apposition with "sport."

Article. The word the is called the definite article; the word a or an is called the indefinite article.

Auxiliary. The verbs be, have, do, shall, will, may, can, must, and ought, with their inflectional forms (e.g., was, am, did, should, might, could, etc.) when they assist in forming the voices, modes, and tenses of other verbs, are called auxiliaries. The italicized words following are auxiliaries: "Have you gone?" "I did not see," "He has not been heard," "I should be grieved if it was broken."

Cardinal number. The words one, two, three, and the corresponding words for other numbers are cardinal numbers; the words first, second, third, etc., are ordinal numbers.

Case. The different forms that a substantive takes when it stands in different syntactic relations are called cases. The subject of a finite verb is in the nominative case. A substantive that modifies another substantive by indicating a possessor is in the possessive (genitive) case. The object of a verb or a preposition is in the objective (accusative) case. The three cases of typical nouns and of the principal pronouns that are inflected are shown in the tables of declension under Substantive. It will be observed that in the nouns the nominative and objective (accusative) cases are identical, but that in the pronouns they are, with the exception of the nominative and objective (accusative) singular of it, distinct.

Causal conjunction. A conjunction that introduces a statement of cause or reason; e.g., for (coördinating); because and since (subordinating).

Clause. A clause is a group of words that is part of a sentence and contains a subject and a predicate. In the sentence (a) "When I awake, I am still with thee," the two groups of words separated by the comma are clauses. A subordinate clause is used like a noun, an adjective, or an adverb. All other clauses, which make independent assertions, are principal clauses. The italicized groups of words in the following sentences are principal clauses: (b) "If the rope breaks, he is lost." (c) "The bell sounded, and every one rose." Clauses that play the same part in a sentence, whether they are alike principal or alike subordinate, are called coördinate clauses. See, e.g., the two principal clauses in sentence c, above; and the two subordinate clauses in the following sentence: (d) "Though I am tired, and though my shoes pinch, I am going on."

Climax. A series of assertions or coördinate sentence-elements so arranged that each one is stronger or more impressive than the preceding one. See, e.g., the sentences marked Improved under Rule 89. A series of assertions or sentence-elements decreasing in strength or impressiveness is an anticlimax. See, e.g., the sentences marked Weak under Rule 140.

Common noun. A noun used to designate any member of a class; e.g., man, ruler, country, city, street, building. A noun used to distinguish an individual member of a class from other members is a proper noun; e.g., John, Anderson, Caesar, Germany, Boston, Broadway, Acropolis. A proper name is an appellation of any kind (including proper nouns) used to distinguish an individual person or thing; e.g., Henry the Second (or Henry II.), Revolutionary War, First National Bank, Democratic Party, Second Presbyterian Church, Domesday Book, Forty-first Street, Ohio River, Niagara Falls, Edgar County, Caledonian Literary Society, Sumner High School, Columbia College, Morningside Park.

Comparative. See Comparison.

Comparison. An adjective or an adverb is in the positive degree when it simply designates a quality or manner without indicating the degree in which that quality or manner is present; this form is, with a few exceptions, the shortest form the word can have, — e.g., sweet, strong, fast, hard. An adjective or an adverb is in the comparative degree (1) when it is in the form which indicates that the quality or manner is present in a greater measure relatively to some standard. It is commonly formed by adding er to the positive or combining it with more. The superlative degree is regularly formed by adding est to the positive or combining it with most. The formation of the three degrees of an adjective or an adverb is called comparison.

Complex sentence. A sentence that contains a dependent clause. See, e.g., sentences a, b, and d under Clause.

Compound sentence. Two or more principal clauses connected by coördinating conjunctions; or two or more principal clauses not connected by conjunctions, but written with such punctuation and capitalization, or spoken with such slight pauses between them, as will indicate that they are combined. See, e.g., sentence c under Clause, and the following sentences: (a) "I came, I saw, I conquered." (b) "Must I obey you? must I crouch before you?"

Conditional. See Mode.

Conjunction. A word used to connect one word with another or one group with another; e.g., and, if, for. Conjunctions may be distinguished from prepositions (q.v.) by the following fact: Any conjunction can be used to connect one predication with another (e.g., "I opened the door when he rapped") — an office which a preposition cannot perform; one of the two elements connected by a preposition must always be a substantive (e.g., "He fell into the cold water"). — Coördinating conjunctions are those which, when they join two predications, make those predications of equal rank — neither dependent on the other; e.g., "I called and they came." The principal coördinating conjunctions are the simple conjunctions, and, but, or, nor, neither, and for; the correlative conjunctions, both . . . and, either . . . or, neither . . . nor; and the conjunctive adverbs, so, also, therefore, hence, however, nevertheless, moreover, accordingly, besides, thus, then, still, and yet. — Subordinating conjunctions are those which, when they join two predications, make one of those predications subordinate to the other; e.g., "They came when I called." The principal subordinating conjunctions are if, though, whether, lest, unless, than, as, that because, since, when, while, after, whereas, provided.

Conjunctive adverbs. Words that are used sometimes as adverbs and sometimes as conjunctives. See Conjunction.

Consonant. See Vowel.

Construction. The grammatical office performed by any word in a given sentence is called the construction of that word. For example, in the sentence "He walks fast," the construction of "he" is that of subject of "walks"; the construction of "walks" is that of predicate of "he"; the construction of "fast" is that of adverbial modifier of "walks."

Coördinate. Sentence-elements that are in the same construction within a sentence are coördinate. In the sentence "He and she talked long and earnestly and at last agreed," "he" and "she," "talked" and "agreed," "long" and "earnestly" are coördinate.

Coördinate clause. See Clause.

Coördinating conjunction. See Conjunction.

Copula. The verb to be, or any of its forms.

Correlative conjunctions. Conjunctions that are used in pairs; e.g., both . . . and, either . . . or, neither . . . nor, whether . . . or.

Declension. See Inflection.

Demonstrative adjectives. The words this and these, that and those, when they are used as adjectives; e.g., "this man," "those men."

Demonstrative pronouns. The words this and these, that and those when they are used as substantives; e.g., "That is not true," "What is this?"

Dependent clause. See Clause.

Direct address. Discourse in the second person (see Person); e.g., "Sir, I salute you." The expression a substantive used in direct address means a substantive that indicates to whom the discourse is addressed; e.g., "Sir" in the foregoing example.

Direct question. See Direct quotation.

Direct quotation (often called direct discourse). Quotation of discourse exactly as it was spoken or written; e.g., He said, "I will help." Statement of the substance of quoted discourse without the use of the exact words is indirect quotation (or indirect discourse), e.g., He said that he would help. A question indirectly quoted is called an indirect question; e.g., He asked whether I would help. A question directly quoted, or not quoted but directly asked, is a direct question; e.g., Will you help?

Factitive adjective. An adjective, when it denotes a quality or state produced by the action of a verb, is called a factitive adjective; e.g., "It will make you strong."

Figure of speech. Certain devices of expression that may be used for making discourse interesting, effective, or beautiful are called figures of speech; others are not included under this term.

Which of them are included cannot be stated briefly, for the application of the term is arbitrary, being based simply on custom and not on any common peculiarity of the devices included. Of the devices mentioned in this book, the following are figures of speech: simile, metaphor, climax, irony (see these words in this vocabulary), and the use of the historical present (technically called vision).

Finite. See Mode.

Future tense. See Tense.

Future perfect tense. See Tense.

Gerund. A verb-form ending in ing is called a gerund when it is used as a noun. When such a form is used as an adjective, it is called a participle. In the sentence, "Coming close, he whispered," "coming" is used as an adjective modifying "he" and is therefore a participle. In the sentence "His coming was expected," "coming" is used as a noun, the subject of "was expected," and is therefore a gerund. A gerund may fulfill the principal offices of a noun. It may be the subject of a verb (e.g., "Fishing is tiresome"); the object of a verb (e.g., "I hate fishing"); the object of a preposition (e.g., "I have an aversion to fishing"); a predicate noun (e.g., "What I most detest is fishing"); an appositive (e.g., "That detestable amusement, fishing, I cannot endure"); or an absolute noun (e.g., "Fishing being my aversion, let us not fish").

Gerund phrase. See Phrase.

Govern. The relation between a verb and its object may be stated either by saying that the substantive is the object of the verb, or by saying that the verb governs the substantive. Likewise the relation between a preposition and its object may be stated by saying that the preposition governs the substantive. A clause, whether principal or subordinate, on which another clause depends, is said to govern the latter clause. In the sentence "She wept when she saw the injury that had been done," the clause "she wept" governs the clause "when she saw the injury," and the latter clause governs the clause "that had been done."

Grammar. The science that deals with (1) the classification of words with reference to the functions they perform in discourse (see Parts of speech); (2) the inflection of words (see Inflection); and (3) the relations that words bear to one another in discourse (see Syntax). Grammar is distinguished from rhetoric by the following fact: The statements comprising the science of grammar tell us how words may be inflected, used singly and combined. The statements comprising the science of rhetoric tell us how words should be used and combined in order to make discourse clear and effective.

Indefinite pronoun. The words each, either, neither, some, any, many, few, all, both, one, none, aught, naught, somebody, something, somewhat, anybody, anything, everybody, everything, nobody, and nothing, when they are used as substantives, are called indefinite pronouns.

Indicative. The set of inflectional forms and of combinations with auxiliary verbs that a speaker uses when he conceives the action of a verb as a fact, is not the same as the set he uses when he conceives the action as doubtful. Compare, for example, the sentences "He is a coward" and "If he be a coward, he should be dismissed." The former set is called the indicative mode of a verb; the latter the subjunctive mode. The indicative and subjunctive forms of a typical verb are shown on pages 355 ff.

Indirect question. See Direct quotation.

Indirect quotation. See Direct quotation.

Infinitive. That inflectional form of a verb which may be combined with to (as in the sentences "To err is human," "I wish to go," "He refused to move," "It is impossible to see") is called an infinitive when it is used in one of the following ways: (1) in combination with to, as illustrated above; (2) in combination with an auxiliary verb (e.g., "I will go," "I can see"); (3) as the predicate of a substantive, the whole predication being the object of another verb (e.g., "It made me gasp," "I saw him smile"); (4) in one of the constructions of a substantive (e.g., "Do you dare go in?" in which "go" is the object of "dare"). The word to, when it is combined with an infinitive, is not a preposition; it is merely a sort of prefix, serving no grammatical purpose except to show that the verb-form following is an infinitive. For this reason it is called the sign of the infinitive or the infinitive-sign. The infinitive-sign is not a necessary part of the infinitive. In the sentences "I cannot see," "I dare go," "Will you come?" "I heard the clock strike," "You had better speak," the words "see," "go," "come," "strike," and "speak" are infinitives, though the infinitive-sign does not accompany them. In mentioning an infinitive, the infinitive sign may with equal correctness be put before the infinitive or be omitted; thus we may say either "The verbs to stand and to sit are intransitive," or "The verbs stand and sit are intransitive." — The use of infinitives in various substantive constructions is an important matter for the student to understand. An infinitive may be used (1) as the subject of a verb (e.g., "To read history is instructive"); (2) as the object of a verb (e.g., "I like to read history"); (3) as a predicate noun (e.g., "An instructive occupation is to read history"); (4) as an appositive (e.g., "It is instructive to read history"); (5) as an absolute noun (e.g., "To read history being so instructive, let us read it"); (6) as an adverbial noun (e.g., "History is instructive to read").

Infinitive-sign. See Infinitive.

Inflection. Change in the form of a word to show variation of meaning (as with inflections of number, comparison, and tense), or to show the relation of a word to another word (as with the inflections of case and person). The inflection of substantives is called declension, that of adjectives and adverbs comparison (q.v.), and that of verbs conjugation. The various forms that a word receives in inflection are its inflectional forms; e.g., love, lovest, loveth, loved, lovedst, and loving are the inflectional forms of the verb to love; man, man's, men, men's, are the inflectional forms of the noun man; see also the tables under Substantive and opposite Verb.

Intensive. The pronouns myself, thysself, himself, herself, itself, ourselves, yourself, yourselves, themselves, and oneself, when they are used in apposition, are called intensives (e.g., "I myself will do it," "He saw the bishop himself"). When they are used as the object of a verb and designate the same person or thing as the subject of that verb, they are called reflexives (e.g., "I hurt myself," "They benefit themselves").

Interjection. A word that expresses emotion and that has no syntactic relations with other words; e.g., oh, alas, ha, ah, hello, hurrah, huzza.

Interrogative pronoun. The words who, what, which, and whether (archaic), when they are used as substantives and in an interrogative sense (e.g., "Who are you?" "What do you want?" "Which do you choose?" "Whether of the twain is justified?"), are called interrogative pronouns. What and which, when they are used as adjectives and in an interrogative sense (e.g., "What song did you sing?" "Which book do you choose?"), are called interrogative adjectives.

Intransitive. See Transitive.

Irony. The suggestion of a thought or fact by an expression which, if taken literally, would convey the opposite of what is meant.

"You are very kind," spoken in a certain tone to a bully who has been abusing the speaker, is irony. In the expression "arsenic, corrosive sublimate, prussic acid, and other mild and harmless drugs" the italicized words are ironical. — Sarcasm, as applied to discourse, is contemptuous, taunting, or intentionally irritating discourse. Sarcasm may or may not be ironical, and irony may or may not be sarcastic.

Metaphor. The denoting of a person or thing or the stating of a thought or fact by the use of an expression which, if taken literally, would designate not what is meant but something resembling it, is called metaphor, or is said to be metaphorical; e.g., (a) "These words cut me to the heart." A single word or expression used metaphorically is said to be a metaphor; e.g., the word cut in example a and the italicized words in the following sentences are metaphors: (b) "He poured out a flood of eloquence." (c) "That is a knotty problem." — An explicit statement that a person or thing or fact is like another is a simile; e.g., (d) "The enemy are fleeing like frightened rabbits." — Metaphor and simile both show resemblance — metaphor by suggestion or implication, simile by explicit statement (usually by the use of like, as, seem, or some other such word). For this reason any metaphor may be changed to a simile, and vice versa. The metaphors in a, b, and c, above may be changed to similes thus: (a) "On hearing these words, I felt as if I had been cut to the heart." (b) "Eloquence seemed to pour like a flood from his lips." (c) "It is as difficult to deal with that problem as it is to saw a knotty log." And the simile in example d may be changed to a metaphor thus: (d) "The enemy are fleeing — the frightened rabbits!"

Mode. A mode of a verb is that set of inflectional forms and verb phrases which a speaker uses to represent the action of the verb in a certain mode (i.e., manner). The set which he uses to represent the action as a fact is the indicative mode; that which he uses to represent the action as doubtful, the subjunctive mode; that which he uses to represent the action as permitted or possible, the potential mode; that which he uses in giving a command, the imperative mode; that which he uses when he employs the verb as a substantive, the infinitive mode (of the forms constituting this mode some are called infinitives and others gerunds); that which he uses when he employs the verb as an adjective, the participial mode (the forms constituting this mode are called participles). The indicative, subjunctive, conditional, potential, obligative, and imperative modes are called finite (predicative) modes; the others, non-finite (non-predicative)

modes. (See also Indicative, Infinitive, Gerund, and Participle.)
The different modes of a typical verb are shown on pages 355 ff.¹

Modifier. See Modify.

Modify. A word which, by being combined in discourse with another word or expression, is made to mean something different from what it would mean if it stood alone, is said to be modified by that other word or expression. Thus, the meaning of the sentence "I dislike oranges" is changed if we insert sour, so that the sentence reads "I dislike sour oranges"; it is changed because "sour oranges" means something different from "oranges"; "sour" is therefore said to modify (i.e., change) "oranges." Likewise "many men" and "few men" mean something different from "men"; "many" and "few" modify "men." "Call softly" means something different from "call"; "softly" modifies "call." "I hate women who use slang" means something different from "I hate women"; "who use slang" modifies "women." A word or expression which thus changes the meaning of another word is called a modifier. — The modifiers of substantives are adjectives (including participles), adjective-phrases, adjective clauses, appositives, and substantives in the possessive case. The modifiers of adjectives, verbs and adverbs are adverbs, adverb-phrases, adverbial clauses, and adverbial objectives. Vocatives (nominatives of address) and absolute phrases may be considered modifiers of predications.

Monosyllabic. See Monosyllable.

Monosyllable. A word of one syllable (e.g., word, one, stop, strength) is said to be a monosyllable, or to be monosyllabic.

Nominative. See Case.

Noun. See Substantive.

Number. When a substantive is in an inflectional form which shows that one person or thing is designated (e.g., boy, boy's), it is said to be in the singular number; when in an inflectional form which shows that more than one person or thing are designated (e.g., boys, boys') it is said to be in the plural number. The forms constituting the singular and plural numbers of typical nouns and of the principal inflected pronouns are shown in the tables under Substantive. When a verb is in an inflectional form properly used with a singular subject (e.g., am, was, takes, goest), the verb is said to be in the singular number; when in a form properly used with a plural subject (e.g., are, were, take, go), it is said to be in the plural number.

¹ The classification of certain verb-phrases as the conditional mode and the obligative mode has been omitted here and in the paradigm on pp. 315 ff., on philological grounds. The considerations on which these modes are still retained in some grammatical treatises are stated in Whitney's Essentials of English Grammar, pp. 120 ff., particularly 126; and MacEwan's The Essentials of the English Sentence, p. 53. The Report of the Joint Committee on Grammatical Nomenclature recognizes only three modes (moods), the indicative, imperative, and subjunctive.

Object. A substantive used in connection with a verb and designating the person or thing upon whom or which the action of the verb is represented as taking effect is called the object of the verb. In the following sentences the italicized words are the objects of the respective verbs: "I built a house," "I wrote a letter," "Whom do you wish?" A substantive that designates the person or thing directly affected by the action of a verb (as the objects in the foregoing examples do) is called a direct object; one that designates the person or thing indirectly affected is called an indirect object (dative); e.g., the italicized words in the sentences following: "I built my wife a house," "I wrote him a letter." — Regarding the object of a preposition, see Preposition.

Objective (accusative). See Case.

Part of speech. A part of speech is a body of words all of which perform the same function in discourse. The parts of speech generally recognized by grammarians, as the classes into which all words in the English language are divided, are eight in number; viz., nouns, pronouns, adjectives, verbs, adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections.

Participle. The word participle as ordinarily used means a verb-form like moving or moved, when that form is used with the value of an adjective, as in "We are moving today," "The piano has been moved." For further information see Gerund, Mode, and Verb.

Passive. See Voice.

Past tense. See Tense.

Past perfect. See Tense.

Perfect. See Tense.

Person. The words I (with its inflectional forms — me, we, etc.; see the tables under Substantive), myself, ourselves, and the relative who, when its antecedent is one of the foregoing words, are called pronouns of the first person. The words thou (with its inflectional forms — thee, you, etc.; see Substantive), thyslf, yourself, yourselves, and the relative who, when its antecedent is one of the foregoing words, are called pronouns of the second person. The relative who, when used otherwise than as above mentioned, all other pronouns than those above mentioned, and all nouns, are said to belong to the third person. — A verb-form or verb-phrase that may correctly be used with a subject in the first person is said to belong to the first person of the verb (e.g., am, are bound); one that may correctly be used with a subject in the second person is said to belong to the second person of the verb (e.g., art, hast gone); one that may correctly be used with a subject in the third person is said to belong to the third person of the verb (e.g., is, does, has gone). (See pages 355 ff.) — Discourse is said to be in the first person when the speaker designates himself by pronouns of the first person (e.g., the Twenty-third Psalm); in the second person when the speaker addresses some person or thing, using pronouns of the second person (e.g., the Lord's Prayer); in the third person when neither pronouns of the first person nor pronouns of the second person are used (e.g., the first three letters under Rule 439).

Personal pronouns. The words I, thou, he, she, and it, together with their inflectional forms (see the tables under Substantive), are called personal pronouns.

Phrase. The term phrase is often used to mean any short group of words; as "the slang phrase 'That's hard lines.' " But as the term is used in grammar, a phrase is a group of words not constituting or containing a predication. A verb-phrase is a combination of a principal verb and one or more auxiliaries that is analogous to a single inflectional form (e.g., has gone, shall have done). A preposition-phrase is a combination of words analogous to a single preposition (e.g., in regard to, as for). An adjective-phrase is a phrase used to modify a substantive (e.g., "A machine of great value"). An adverb-phrase is a phrase used analogously to an adverb (e.g., "He fell into the water"). Any phrase consisting of a preposition and its object is a prepositional phrase (a term not to be confused with preposition-phrase); e.g., the adjective- and adverb-phrases above quoted are prepositional phrases. A participial phrase is a phrase consisting of a participle and its adjuncts (e.g., "Looking to the north, I saw the lake"). A gerund-phrase is a prepositional phrase in which the preposition governs a gerund (e.g., in talking, instead of shooting). Concerning absolute phrases, see Absolute.

Plural. See Number.

Possessive adjective. The words my, mine, our, ours, thy, thine, your, yours, his, her, hers, its, their, theirs, and whose are called possessive adjectives, or possessives, as well as inflectional forms of the personal pronouns.

Possessive (genitive) case. See Case.

Predicate. See Subject.

Predicate adjective. See Predicate substantive.

Predicate complement. See Predicate substantive.

Predicate substantive. A substantive designating what a verb asserts a person or thing to be is a predicate substantive (e.g., "He is a carpenter," "These are strawberries"). An adjective designating a quality which a verb asserts belongs to a person or thing is a predicate adjective (e.g., "He is skillful," "These berries are sweet"). A predicate substantive, or a predicate adjective, or a phrase or clause used as the one or the other, is said to be the predicate complement of the verb it completes.

Predication. Any group of words consisting of a single subject and predicate, whether a simple sentence or a clause.

Preposition. A word used to show the relation of a substantive to another word; e.g., in, on, into, toward, from, for, against, of, between, with, without, within, before, behind, under, over, above, among, at, by, around, about, through, throughout, beyond, across, along, beside. A preposition always requires to complete its meaning a substantive, with which it combines into what is felt to be a unit of expression; e.g., "in the water," "into the house," "among the leaves," "behind the house." This fact distinguishes prepositions from adverbs, which do not require a substantive to complete them; e.g., "Go out," "Come in," "Please walk before." (In, before, on, for, but, across, and many other English words belong each one to several parts of speech; there is a preposition across and an adverb across, a preposition for and a conjunction for, etc.) For the distinction between prepositions and conjunctions, see Conjunction. The substantive combined with a preposition in the manner illustrated above is called the object of the preposition.

Preposition-phrase. See Phrase.

Present. See Tense.

Principal clause. See Clause.

Principal parts. The principal parts of any verb are (1) the present infinitive, (2) the past first singular, and (3) the past participle (see Verb); e.g., flee, fled, fled; choose, chose, chosen; love, loved, loved; set, set, set.

Principal verb. A verb not used as an auxiliary, including the auxiliaries themselves when they are used independently (e.g., "I have a boat," "he did wonders").

Pronoun. See Substantive.

Proper name. See Common noun.

Proper noun. See Common noun.

Relative adjectives. See Relative pronoun.

Relative clause. See Adjective clause.

Relative pronoun. The words that, who, what, which, whoever, whatever, and whichever, when they are used as substantives and in such a way that the clauses in which they stand are made adjective clauses (q.v.), are called relative pronouns. The words what, which, whatever, and whichever, when they are used as adjectives and in such a way that the clauses in which they stand are made adjective clauses, are called relative adjectives.

Rhetoric. See Grammar.

Sentence. The word sentence means (1) a group of words composed of a subject (with or without adjuncts) and a predicate (with or without adjuncts) and not grammatically dependent on any words outside itself (e.g., "I will go," "I, being the person best acquainted with the situation, will go as soon as the carriage which I ordered has come"); or (2) two or more such groups joined by coördinating conjunctions or presented in such a way as to show that they are to be taken as a unit. A sentence of type 2 is called a compound sentence. Sentences of type 1 are divided into two classes, — simple sentences and complex sentences. All sentences are therefore usually said to fall into three classes — simple, complex, and compound. These are described in this vocabulary under their several names.

Sentence-element. A subject, a predicate, a predicate substantive or adjective, an absolute phrase, a modifier, a clause, or any other unit of sentence-structure. Any sentence-element other than a principal clause falls under the term subordinate sentence-element, as used in this book.

Sign of the infinitive. See Infinitive.

Simile. See Metaphor.

Simple conjunction. See Conjunction.

Simple sentence. A simple sentence has one subject and one predicate, either or both of which may be compound.

Singular. See Number.

Subject. A substantive combined in discourse with a verb (except a gerund or a participle) and representing the person or thing regarding which the verb asserts something is called the subject of the verb; and the verb, in turn, is called the predicate of the substantive, or is said to be predicated of the substantive. Thus, in the expression "He goes," "he" is the subject of "goes," and "goes" is the predicate of "he." The words subject and predicate are often (in this book and elsewhere) used to designate respectively a subject and a predicate, as above defined, together with any adjuncts they may have. Thus in the sentence "The ploughman homeward plods his weary way," the phrase "the ploughman" may be said to be the subject and the phrase "homeward plods his weary way" the predicate; or the noun "ploughman" alone may be said to be the subject and the verb "plods" the predicate.

Subjunctive. See Mode and also Indicative.

Subordinate clause. See Clause.

Subordinate sentence-element. See Sentence-element.

Substantive. A substantive is a word by which, as by a name, some person or thing is called; e.g., man, house, happiness, beauty, song, speech, Jupiter, Charlemagne, he, she. A few substantives are called pronouns; these are as follows: I, thou, he, she, it, and their compounds ending in self or selves; this, that, who, what, which, whether, and their compounds ending in ever, or soever; each, either, neither, some, any, many, few, all, both, aught, naught, such, other, one, none, and a few others. The pronouns are divided into five classes: personal, demonstrative, interrogative, relative, and indefinite pronouns (see these headings in the Vocabulary). All substantives other than pronouns are called nouns. — The declension of typical nouns and of the principal pronouns that are inflected is shown in the following tables:

DECLENSION OF NOUNS

	Singular	Plural
Nom.	boy	boys
Poss. (Gen.)	boy's	boys'
Obj. (Acc.)	boy	boys
Nom.	man	men
Poss. (Gen.)	man's	men's
Obj. (Acc.)	man	men

DECLENSION OF PRONOUNS

	Singular	Plural
Nom.	I	we
Poss. (Gen.)	my, mine	our, ours
Obj. (Acc.)	me	us
Nom.	you	you
Poss. (Gen.)	your	your, yours
Obj. (Acc.)	you	you
Nom.	he	they
Poss. (Gen.)	his	their, theirs
Obj. (Acc.)	him	them
Nom.	she	they
Poss. (Gen.)	her, hers	their, theirs
Obj. (Acc.)	her	them
Nom.	it	they
Poss. (Gen.)	its	their, theirs
Obj. (Acc.)	it	them
Nom.	who	who
Poss. (Gen.)	whose	whose
Obj. (Acc.)	whom	whom

A substantive may be used syntactically in the following ways (which are explained in this Vocabulary under the appropriate headings): (1) as a subject, (2) as a predicate substantive, (3) as an appositive, (4) as a possessive (genitive) substantive, (5) as the object of a verb, (6) as the object of a preposition, (7) as an adverbial substantive, and (8) as an absolute substantive.

Substantive clause. A clause may be used as the subject of a verb (e.g., "That he is a scholar is certain"); as the object of a verb (e.g., "I know that he is a scholar"); as the object of a preposition (e.g., "There is no doubt as to whether he is a scholar"); as a predicate substantive (e.g., "Truth is that he is a scholar"); as an appositive (e.g., "This is certain — that he is a scholar"); as an adverbial substantive (e.g., "I am sure that he is a scholar"); and as an absolute substantive (e.g., "Granted that he is a scholar, he may yet be mistaken"). A clause used in one of these ways is a substantive clause.

Superlative. See Comparison.

Syntactic. See Syntax.

Syntax. The relations that words, when they are combined in discourse, bear to one another (e.g., the relation of "he" to "goes" in the sentence "He goes," or of "carpenter" to "Nelson," in the sentence "Nelson, the carpenter, is here") are called syntactic relations, or collectively syntax. Syntactic relations comprise (1) the relations a single word may bear to another word or to a group of words (e.g., the relation of a subject to a verb, of an adjective to a substantive, of a noun to an adjective-phrase, of a vocative substantive to a sentence); and (2) the relations a predication may bear to another predication (viz., the relation between a principal and a dependent clause and the relation between coördinate clauses).

Tense. The several sets of forms and combinations that a verb has when it represents action as occurring at different points of time are called its tenses. Of these sets there are six, called respectively the present tense, the past tense, the future tense, the perfect (present perfect) tense, the past perfect tense, and the future perfect tense. The tenses of a typical verb are shown on pages 355 ff.

Transitive. A verb representing an action that necessarily affects some person or thing in such a way that the name of that person or thing may be made the direct object of the verb, is called a transitive verb; e.g., love, hate, have, carry, build. A verb representing an action of such a kind that a direct object cannot logically be used with the verb is called an intransitive verb; e.g., stand, arise, become, whimper, bark, quarrel. Many verbs may be used either transitively or intransitively; e.g., "The fire burns brightly" ("burns" is intransitive); "He burns the paper" ("burns" is transitive); "The corn has grown" ("has grown" is intransitive); "He has grown a beard" ("has grown" is transitive).

Verb. A word used to assert an action, a condition, or the undergoing of an action; e.g., stand, strike, choose, be, become, remain, suffer, undergo.

The various inflections and combinations (see Voice, Mode, Tense, Person, and Number) of a typical verb are shown in the table on pages 355-359. The words I, you, he, we, they, and it are inserted merely to show the way in which the forms they precede are used; they should not be regarded as necessary parts of those forms, for they are not parts at all. Words inclosed in parentheses are variants of the words they follow.

Vocative substantive (nominative of address). A substantive used in direct address. See Direct address.

Voice. A verb is said to be in the active voice when it asserts that the person or thing represented by the subject is, does, or undergoes something; e.g., "He strikes," "He heard," "I see." A verb is said to be in the passive voice when it asserts that something is done to the person or thing represented by the subject; e.g., "He is struck," "He was heard," "I am seen." With one exception all the passive forms of any verb are composed of the several forms of the auxiliary to be, and the past participle of the principal verb; the one exception is the past participle itself. See the table on page 355.

Vowel. The letters a, e, i, o, and u are vowels. The letters b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, x, and z are consonants. W when used as in weak, and y when used as in young are consonants; w when used as in how, and y when used as in try are vowels.

CONJUGATION OF THE VERB *TO TAKE*¹

PRINCIPAL PARTS: take, took, taken

ACTIVE VOICE			PASSIVE VOICE
Indicative mode
	SINGULAR	PLURAL	SINGULAR	PLURAL
PRESENT TENSE	SIMPLE		1. I am taken 2. you are taken 3. he is taken	we are taken you are taken they are taken
	1. I take	we take
	2. you take	you take
	3. he takes	they take
PRESENT TENSE	EMPHATIC
	1. I do take	we do take
	2. you take	you do take
	3. he takes	they do take
PRESENT TENSE	PROGRESSIVE
	1. I am taking	we are taking
	2. you are taking	you are taking
	3. he is taking	they are taking
PAST TENSE	SIMPLE		1. I was taken 2. you were taken 3. he was taken	we were taken you were taken they were taken
	1. I took	we took
	2. you took	you took
	3. he took	they took
PAST TENSE	EMPHATIC
	1. I did take	we did take
	2. you did take	you did take
	3. he did take	they did take
PAST TENSE	PROGRESSIVE
	1. I was taking	we were taking
	2. you were tak- ing	you were taking
	3. he was taking	they were taking
FUTURE TENSE	SIMPLE		I shall (will) be taken, etc.
	1. I shall (will) take	we shall (will) take
	2. you will (shall) take	you will (shall) take
	3. he will (shall) take	they will (shall) take
FUTURE TENSE	PROGRESSIVE
	I shall (will) be taking, etc.

¹ See the explanatory remarks under Verb.

		ACTIVE VOICE	PASSIVE VOICE
Indicative mode — continued
PERFECT TENSE	SINGULAR	PLURAL	I have been taken, etc.
	SIMPLE
	1. I have taken	we have taken
	2. you have taken	you have taken
	3. he has taken	they have taken
	PROGRESSIVE
	I have been taking, etc.
PAST PERFECT TENSE	SIMPLE		I had been taken, etc.
	1. I had taken	we had taken
	2. you had taken	you had taken
	3. he had taken	they had taken
	PROGRESSIVE
	I had been taking, etc.
FUTURE PERFECT TENSE	SIMPLE		I shall (will) have been taken, etc.
	I shall (will) have taken, etc.
	PROGRESSIVE
	I shall (will) have been taking, etc.

Subjunctive mode

PRESENT TENSE	SINGULAR	PLURAL	SINGULAR	PLURAL
	SIMPLE		1. if I be taken	if we be taken
	1. if I take	if we take	2. if you be taken	if you be taken
	2. if you take	if you take	3. if he be taken	if they be taken
	3. if he take	if they take
	EMPHATIC
	1. if I do take	if we do take
2. if you do take	if you do take
3. if he do take	if they do take
PROGRESSIVE
1. if I be taking	if we be taking
2. if you be taking	if you be taking
3. if he be taking	if they be taking

		ACTIVE VOICE		PASSIVE VOICE
Subjunctive mode — continued
		SINGULAR		PLURAL
		SINGULAR		PLURAL
PAST TENSE	SIMPLE
	1. if I took	if we took	1. if I were taken	if we were taken
	2. if you took	if you took	2. if you were taken	if you were taken
	3. if he took	if they took	3. if he were taken	if they were taken
	EMPHATIC
	1. if I did take	if we did take
	2. if you did take	if you did take
	3. if he did take	if they did take
	PROGRESSIVE
	1. if I were taking	if we were taking
2. if you were taking	if you were taking
3. if he were taking	if they were taking
FUTURE PERFECT TENSE	[The future subjunctive is exactly like the future indicative.]
	[The perfect subjunctive is exactly like the perfect indicative.]
PAST PERFECT TENSE	[The past perfect subjunctive is exactly like the past perfect indicative.]
FUTURE PERFECT TENSE	[The future perfect subjunctive is exactly like the future perfect indicative.]

	ACTIVE VOICE	PASSIVE VOICE
Potential mode ¹
	SINGULAR	PLURAL
PRESENT TENSE	SIMPLE
	1. I may or can take	we may or can take
	2. you may or can take	you may or can take
	3. he may or can take.	they may or can take
	PROGRESSIVE
	I may or can be taking, etc.
PAST TENSE	SIMPLE
	1. I might or could take	we might or could take
	2. you might or could take	you might or could take
	3. he might or could take	they might or could take
	PROGRESSIVE
	I might or could be taking, etc.
PERFECT TENSE	SIMPLE
	I may or can have taken, etc.
	* PROGRESSIVE
	I may or can have been taking, etc.
PAST PERFECT TENSE	SIMPLE
	I might or could have taken, etc.
	PROGRESSIVE
	I might or could have been taking, etc.
Imperative mode
	SIMPLE: take EMPHATIC: do take PROGRESSIVE: be taking	be taken

¹ See the footnote on page 306.

	ACTIVE VOICE	PASSIVE VOICE
--	--------------	---------------

Infinitive mode

PRESENT TENSE	SIMPLE INFINITIVE: to take PROGRESSIVE INFINITIVE: to be taking GERUND: taking	INFINITIVE: to be taken GERUND: being taken
PAST TENSE	SIMPLE INFINITIVE: to have taken PROGRESSIVE INFINITIVE: to have been taking GERUND: having taken	INFINITIVE: to have been taken GERUND: having been taken

Participial mode, or participles

PRESENT TENSE	taking	being taken
PAST TENSE	[There is no past participle in the active voice.]	taken
PERFECT TENSE	SIMPLE: having taken PROGRESSIVE: having been taking	having been taken

APPENDIX C

A List of Words Often Mispronounced

IN the case of a few words in the following list, pronunciations different from those indicated in the right-hand column are admitted by some authorities; these words are marked with an asterisk (*). The pronunciations given opposite such words are those favored by the great majority of lexicographers. In the case of all the words not marked with an asterisk, the pronunciations indicated are the only correct ones.

The accentual and diacritical marks are not intended to give an exhaustive description of the pronunciation of each word, but only to point out common errors. Of the signs that are not self-explanatory the meanings are shown in the following table:

ǎ	is pronounced like	a in at .
ā	is pronounced like	a in mate .
ǎ	is pronounced like	a in climate .
ä	is pronounced like	a in arm .
ä	is pronounced like	a in ask .
ě	is pronounced like	e in men .
ē	is pronounced like	ee in see .
ē	is pronounced like	e in the first syllable of event .
ē	is pronounced like	e in fern .
ī	is pronounced like	i in tin .
ī	is pronounced like	i in wine .
ō	is pronounced like	o in lot .
ō	is pronounced like	o in host .
ô	is pronounced like	o in orb .
ū	is pronounced like	u in bun .
ū	is pronounced like	u in use .
ū	is pronounced like	u in unite .
ū	is pronounced like	u in bull .
ōō	is pronounced like	oo in tool .
ōō	is pronounced like	oo in foot .
ou	is pronounced as in	thou .
zh	is pronounced like	z in azure .

Words often accented on the wrong syllable

abdomen *
accent (verb)
acclimate *
acumen
address admirable adult adverse adversary albumen alias alloy
ally *
alternate * (adjective and noun)
ancestral applicable
apropos brigand choleric comparable condolence construe *
contour * contrary conversant cuckoo defects deficit despicable detail detour dirigible discharge discourse
divan

Correct pronunciation

ab dō'men
ac cent'
ac clī'mate
a cū'men
ad dress'
ad'mirable
a dult'
ad'verse
ad'ver sa ry
al bu'men
ā'lias
al loy' al ly'
al tēr'nate

an ses'tral ap'plicable
ăp'rō pō'
brīg'and kōl'eric
com'par a ble
con dō'lence
con'strue
con tour'
con'tra ry
con'ver sant kōōk'ōō
de fects'
def'i cit
des'picable
de tail'
de tour'
dir'i ji ble
dis charge'
dis course'
di van'

	Correct pronunciation elevated	el'e vat ed
encore	en core'
entire	en tire'
exquisite	ex'quisite
extant *	ex'tant
formidable	for'midable
gondola	gon'dola
grimace	gri māce'
guardian	guard'i an
harass	hār'ass
Herculean	Her cū'le an hospitable	hos'pitable
illustrate *	il lus'trate
impious	im'pī ous
incognito	in cog'nito
incomparable	in com'parable
inevitable	in ev'itable
inquiry	in qui'ry
lamentable	lam'entable
mediocre	mē'di o cre
mischievous	mis'chie vous
misconstrue *	mis con'strue
municipal	mu nis'i pal
obligatory *	ob'ligatory
orchestra	or'chestra
orchestral	or kes' tral
pariah *	pā'riah
peremptory *	pěr'emptory
pianist *	pī an'ist
piquant	pēk'ant or pīk'ant
positively	pos'i tive ly
precedence	prē cēd'ence
precedent (adjective)	prē cēd'ent
precedent (noun)	prēs'e dent
presage (noun)	prē'sage or prēs'age
presage (verb)	pre sāge'

		Correct pronunciation primarily	pri'ma ri ly
	recall	re call'
	recourse	re course'
	research	re search'
	robust	ro bust'
	romance	ro mance'
	sepulture	sěp'ulture
	theater	the'a ter
	vagary	vá gǎ'ry
Words in which certain vowels are often mis- pronounced	Adonis	A dō'nis
	accurate	accûrate
	alma mater	alma mā ter altercation *	ăltercation
	amenable	a mē'nable
	apparatus	apparātus
	apricot *	āpricot
	aviator	a'vi a tor
	Basil	Bǎz'il
	because	becôs
	biographical	bīographical
	biography	bīography
	bouquet	bōō kǎ' or bōō'kǎ (not "bō-")
	brooch *	brōch
	brougham	brōō'am or brōōm
	brusque *	brōōsk
	cantaloupe *	can'ta lōōp
	catch	cǎtch (not "cětch")
	chock-full	Pronounced as spelled; not "chuck-full."
	choler	kǎl'er
	Cleopatra	Cleopātra
	clique	klēk
	constable	kŭn stable
	coupon	kōō'pon

	Correct pronunciation
courtesan *	kūr te zan
creek	krēk
crotch	Pronounced as spelled; not "crutch."
culinary	kū'linary
defalcate	dē fāl'cate (not "-fawl-")
defalcation	dē fāl cation or dēf āl ca- tion (not "-fawl-")
data	dā'ta (not dat ta)
demise	dē mīz'
describe	dē scribe'
destruction	dē struc'tion
directly	dī rect'ly
extol *	ex tōl'
faucet	faw'set
gape *	gāp
garrulous	gār ru lous (not "gār yu- lous")
genealogy	jēn e ālogy or jē ne ālogy (not "-ology")
genuine	jēn u ĩn (not "-ĭn")
ghoul	gōol
gratis	grā tis
hearth	hārth
heinous	hā nous
historian	his tō' ri an hoof	hōof
hypocrisy	hī poc'ri sy
ignoramus	ig no rā'mus
implacable	im plā'cable
Italian	Ī tal yan (not "Ī-")
joust	jūst or jōost
jugular	jū gū lar (not "jūg-")
literature	lit er a tūre (not "-toor")
mineralogy	min er āl ogy (not "-ology")

	Correct pronunciation
nape	nāp
new	nū (not "nōo")
Pall Mall	Pəl Məl
panegyric	pan e jĭr ic or pan e jĕr ic
pathos	pā thos
penalize	pē'nal ize
premise (noun)	prēm'iss
premise (verb)	prĕ mĭz'
presentation	prĕz entation
pretty	prĭt y
programme	prō'grām (not "-grum")
quay	kē
radiator	rā'di a tor
regular	reg yu lar
rinse	Pronounced as spelled; not "rense."
roily	Pronounced as spelled; not "rī ly."
roof	rōōf
root	rōōt
route *	rōōt
sacrilegious	sac ri lĕ'jus
salve *	sāv
simultaneous *	sĭmultaneous
sinecure	sĭ ne cure
sleek	slĕk
slough (noun, mire)	slōō
slough (noun, cast skin)	slŭf
slough (verb)	slŭf
status	stā tus
throw	trō
ultimatum	ul tĭ mā tum
verbatim	ver bā'tim
virulent	vĭr'ŭ lent (not "-yulent")
xylophone	zĭ lophone
zoölogy	zō ōl ogy (not "zōo-")

	Correct pronunciation archipelago	ar ki pel'a go	Words in which certain consonants are often mispronounced
aversion	a ver shun (not "-zhun")
banquet	bang'quet
bequeath	be queath' (to rhyme with "breathe")
cello	chel'o
chaise	shāz
English	ing'glish
flaccid	flak'sid (See Rule 306, note.)
handkerchief	hang' ker chief has (in expressions like He has to go)	hăz (not "hăss")
have (in expressions like I have to go)	hăv (not "hăf")
oleomargarine	The g is hard, as in get . (See Rule 306, note.)
partner	Pronounced as spelled; not "pard ner."
schism	sizm
turgid	tur jid (See Rule 306, note.)
used (when followed by to)	ūzd (not "ūst")
version	ver shun (not "-zhun")
with	The th is pronounced as in thus .
accidentally	ac ci dent'al ly	Words from which certain sounds are often incorrectly omitted
arctic	arc'tic
artistically	ar tis'ti cal ly
authoritatively	au thor'i ta tive ly
auxiliary *	aux il i ary
cemetery	cem'e ter y
considerable	con sid'er a ble
cruel	cru'el
different	dif fer ent factory

facts February geometry government laboratory library
Messrs.*

piano-forte pumpkin recognize what whether which while white

Words to which an additional sound is often incorrectly added

almond * athlete athletic buoy casualty cerement chasm column conduit daguerreotype electoral elm enthusiasm falcon *
film grievous helm

Correct pronunciation

fac'to ry
fakts
Feb ru ary
ge om'et ry
gov'ern ment
lab'o ra to ry
li'bra ry
mësh yērz or mēs'yērz ("Messerz" is wholly unauthorized.)

piano-for'te
pump kin
rec'og nize
hwōt hwether hwich hwile hwite ă'mond ath'lete

ath let'ic
bwoi or boi
caz'u al ty (not "-al'i ty") sēr ment kasm
kol um (not "-yum")
kōn'dit or kŭn'dit
da ger' o type
e lec to ral (not "-ri al")
One syllable
en thū zi asm
faw con
One syllable
grēv'ous
One syllable

mischievous often poignant * salmon

Correct pronunciation
mis'chēv ous
of en
poi'nānt or poin'yānt
să mon

ad infinitum cherivari

ad in fi nī'tum sha rē'va rē' (not "shiveree")

Words often mispronounced in various ways

debut dishabille *
dishevel

dă'bū'
dis'a bīl or dīs à bēl'
di shev'el

dramatis personæ finis

dram'a tis per sō'nē fī'nis foyer * (e.g., the foyer of a theater)

fwā'yā' or foy'er

gaol irrelevant

jāl
Pronounced as spelled;
not "irrevelant."

larynx

lār'inx or lā'rinx (not "lar nix")

posthumous

pöst'humous or pös'tu-mous

rendezvous sarsaparilla

rěn de voo or rōn de voo sār sa pa ril la (not "sässparilla")

sough *
vaudeville viz.

sűf vōd'vīl
An arbitrary sign for the Latin word videlicet (pronounced vi dēl'i set).
In reading viz. aloud, say either "videlicet" or
"namely" (the English equivalent of videlicet);
do not say "vizz."

APPENDIX D

CONNECTIVES

Connectives as an aid to coherence

1. The following list of transitional words and phrases may aid in gaining coherence within the sentence and within the paragraph. Inexperienced writers often fail to make clear the precise relationship of their ideas either because they fail to use connectives or because they use the wrong ones. Their vocabulary of transitional words is limited to a small group, such as and, but, so. Connectives should, of course, not be overused; the relationship in the thought may be so clear that transitional words are not necessary.

Connectives and punctuation

2. A study of connectives may also be an aid to the understanding of the rules of punctuation. (See Rules 73, 253, 255 b.) The grossest errors in punctuation are due to the writer's failure to recognize the relative rank of the parts of a sentence. He must be able to distinguish between independent and subordinate parts, and to recognize coördinate relationship. Transitional words indicate to the reader whether parts of a sentence are independent or subordinate, and whether they are coördinate with one another. (The following lists are in no way complete.)

Connectives within the sentence
(i) coördinating words

TRANSITIONAL WORDS WITHIN THE SENTENCE

3. I. Coördinating words

A. Classification according to meaning

1. Addition: and, further, furthermore, besides, also, moreover, likewise, nor (and not), too, again, and then, finally.

2. Contrast: but, however, yet, and yet, still, nevertheless, notwithstanding, on the contrary, on the other hand.
3. Result: therefore, hence, consequently, so, accordingly, thereupon, thus, wherefore, then.
4. Alternation: or, nor, otherwise, else, either . . . or, neither . . . nor, as . . . so, both . . . and, not only . . . but also, the one . . . the other, on the one hand . . . on the other hand.
5. Cause: for.
6. Repetition, exemplification, intensification: in fact, indeed, in other words, that is, namely.

B. Grammatical classification

1. Pure conjunctions; and, but, for, or, neither, nor.
2. Correlatives: either . . . or, neither . . . nor, as . . . so, both . . . and, not only . . . but also, the one . . . the other, on the one hand . . . on the other hand.
3. Conjunctive adverbs: further, furthermore, besides, also, moreover, likewise, again, then, finally, however, yet, still, nevertheless, notwithstanding, therefore, hence, consequently, so, accordingly, thereupon, thus, wherefore, indeed, namely. The phrases on the con- trary, on the other hand, etc., are used as conjunctive adverbs.

NOTE. — It is possible for a conjunctive adverb to connect parts that are not coördinate.

Right: Although it was stormy, yet we decided to go.

Right: If you follow the directions carefully, then you will have no trouble.

Misuse of coöordinat-
ing words:
and and but

4. Distinguish between and and but. Note carefully whether the statements are in the same line of thought or are in opposition.

Wrong: After I finished high school, I wanted to work in my uncle's shop, and my father wanted me to go to college.

Right: After I finished high school, I wanted to work in my uncle's shop, but my father wanted me to go to college.

But

5. Be certain that but connects statements that are really adversative.

Illogical: For an examination, a student cannot review all of the work covered, but he must have the ability to select the most important points in the course and concentrate on them.

Right: For an examination, a student cannot review all of the work covered, but he should select the most important points in the course and concentrate on them.

Illogical: In vain we begged her to stay at home, but she was determined to go.

Right: We begged her to stay at home, but she was determined to go.

Illogical: The complaints have come not from the faculty, but they have come from the students.

Right: The complaints have come not from the faculty, but from the students.

Illogical: He was impetuous and self-confident, but always courageous.

Right: He was impetuous and self-confident and always courageous.

6. Do not confuse for and because. The for-clause gives the reason for the belief in a statement; the because-clause gives the reason for the statement. For and because

Wrong: They did not come yesterday because I met the train.

Right: They did not come yesterday, for I met the train. (The writer's reason for knowing that they did not come.)

Right: I was absent from class yesterday because I had not done the assigned reading. (Either for or because may be used in this sentence. Because states explicitly an immediate cause or reason felt to be closely related to the principal clause; for is less explicit and introduces a statement felt to be relatively independent.)

7. The use of so to express sequence or result is best limited to informal writing. (See Rule 65.) Therefore, wherefore, consequently, accordingly, so, then, all denote a succession usually causal, but they differ in these respects: therefore is the most formal and is used in strict reasoning; consequently is used in close logical sequence; accordingly is less formal and does not indicate so close a logical sequence as therefore and consequently; so and then are the least formal of all and do not necessarily imply a close causal sequence. So

Right: The teaching of law as a profession should no more be irrational than the teaching of it as part of a liberal education or as a preparation for law studies. The case method, therefore, falls short and is slavish if it stops in each instance with the first case in a series.—WOODROW WILSON.

Right: From still earlier centuries had come down an inordinate fondness for allegorizing everything on which allegory could lay its hands. And so there sprang up the Bestiaries, amazing compilations of beasts, and birds, and fishes, endowed with qualities they never had, and allegorized into types of sacred things.— J. L. LOWES.

*That is,
that is to
say*

8. Be certain that that is, that is to say, i.e., introduce material that is the equivalent of or the explanation of what precedes rather than the correction of it.

Wrong: I have asked all of the class to come; that is, all that I could reach by telephone.

Right: I have asked all of the class to come; at least, all that I could reach by telephone.

Right: He makes frequent use of feminine rhyme; that is, a rhyme in which two syllables, one accented and one unaccented, occur at the end of each line.

(ii) Subordinating
words

9. II. Subordinating words

A. Relative pronouns: who, which, what, that, as.

B. Subordinating conjunctions

1. Time: when, whenever, while, before, after, until, till, since, as soon as, as long as, as often as, now, now that, prior to, once.
2. Place: where, wherever, whence, whencesoever, whither, whithersoever, whereto.
3. Cause: because, as, since, inasmuch as, seeing that, now that, owing to the fact that, due to the fact that.
4. Purpose: that, so that, in order that, lest, for the purpose that.
5. Degree or comparison: as, than, more than, rather than, as . . . as, not so . . . as, such . . . as, just as . . . so.

6. Condition: if, so, unless, on condition that, provided that, supposing, in case that, but that, so that.

7. Concession: though, although, even if, no matter how.

8. Result: that, so that, so . . . that, such . . . that, and so, but that, such that.

9. Manner: as, as if, as though.

10. Do not use as for that or whether; as if for that; so as for so that.

Misuse of subordinating words: as Wrong: I don't know as I am going.

Right: I don't know that I am going; [or] I don't know whether I am going.

Awkward: It seems as if he ought to do his share.

Improved: It seems that he ought to do his share.

Wrong: We went early so as we could see the parade.

Right: We went early so that we could see the parade.

11. Be certain that as and since are not used ambiguously. They may express both time and cause.

As and since used ambiguously

Ambiguous: Since she has been ill, we have been very much worried about her.

Clear: We have been very much worried about her because she has been ill; [or] Since her illness, we have been very much worried about her.

12. Distinguish between because, since, as. Because gives an immediate cause or reason; since is less formal and more incidental than because; as gives a reason even more incidental than since. The since- and as-clauses often begin their sentences. The conjunctions for, because, since, are often to be preferred to as to express cause.

Because, since, as

Right: I returned the book because it was due.

Right: Since you are ready, we may as well go.

Right: As we have gone thus far, we might as well go farther.

But what for but that, that

13. Do not use but what for but that or that.

Wrong: I do not know but what I had better go to see her.

Right: I do not know but that I had better go to see her.

Wrong: I have no doubt but what she would like to go.

Right: I have no doubt that she would like to go.

*How for
that*

14. Do not use how for that.

Wrong: I had heard how it was possible to reach there in two days.

Right: I had heard that it was possible to reach there in two days.

If for whether

15. Do not use if for whether to introduce a noun clause used as the object of a verb.

Wrong: Please let me know if you received the check. (Do not let me know if you did not receive it.)

Right: Please let me know whether you received the check.

*Like for as,
as if*

16. Do not use like (a preposition) for as or as if, as though (conjunctions), to express manner.

Wrong: He acted like he had made a great mistake.

Right: He acted as though he had made a great mistake.

So for so that

17. Do not use so for so that to express purpose.

Wrong: We went early so we could see the parade.

Right: We went early so that we could see the parade.

Than for when

18. Do not use than for when.

Wrong: We had hardly started than she began to cry.

Right: We had hardly started when she began to cry.

*That and
which*

19. That is generally used to introduce a restrictive clause and which, a non-restrictive clause. (See Rule 245.)

Right: Stories that deal with crime are not suitable for children.

Right: Those stories, which deal with crime, are not suitable for children.

20. Do not use until for when.

Until for when

Wrong: He had been gone only a few minutes until a high school friend of mine came in.

Right: He had been gone only a few minutes when a high school friend of mine came in.

21. Do not use when for although or even though, because, that, or whereupon. When Bad: When they granted all of her requests, she was not satisfied.

Right: Even though they granted all of her requests, she was not satisfied.

Bad: We were worried when he had not written.

Right: We were worried because he had not written.

Bad: It was at this time in my life when I most appreciated giving to my friends the things they desired.

Right: It was at this time in my life that I most appreciated giving, etc.

Bad: She tore the letter open and read it hastily; when she ran from the room.

Right: She tore the letter open and read it hastily; whereupon she ran from the room.

22. When indicates a point in time; while a duration of time. When and while

Wrong: She was working every possible moment when her classmates were loafing.

Right: She was working every possible moment while her classmates were loafing.

Right: She was working when we went to see her yesterday.

23. Do not use where for that.

Where for that

Wrong: I saw in the paper where a man had been arrested for forgery.

Right: I saw in the paper that a man had been arrested for forgery.

While

24. While may mean (1) during the time that, (2) at the same time that, (3) although. Avoid the loose use of while.

Misleading: She read to the children while I sang to them.

Clear: She read to the children and I sang to them.

Vague: While she was the most popular girl on the campus, she held no office.

Clear: Although she was the most popular girl on the campus, she held no office.

Vague: Mary enjoyed going to dances and parties while her sister preferred to stay at home.

Clear: Mary enjoyed going to dances and parties but her sister preferred to stay at home.

Right: She read to me while I sewed.

Right: I lived with them while I was in college.

*Who, which,
that*

25. Use the relative pronoun who to refer to persons, which to animals and inanimate objects, that to persons, animals, and inanimate objects.

TRANSITIONAL WORDS WITHIN THE PARAGRAPH

26. (The transitional words within the sentence may be used to link sentences together. (See p. 370.) These words will not be repeated here.)

1. Addition: in addition to what has been said, more than this, equally important, etc.
2. Contrast: in contrast to this, at the same time, for all that, after all, although this may be true, etc.
3. Result: since this is true, under these circumstances, under these conditions, it follows that, etc.
4. Purpose: for this purpose, with this end in view, etc.

5. Repetition, exemplification, intensification: to be sure, as I have said, in other words, in the same way, in short, that is to say, as has been noted, etc.
6. Time: at length, after a lapse of time, after a few days, in the meantime, meanwhile, immediately, etc.
7. Place: on the opposite side, near by, adjacent to, yonder, beyond, etc.
8. Series: first, second, third, etc.
9. Reference to a word or group of words in a preceding sentence: he, she, it, etc.; this, that, etc.; in this manner, in this way, thus, etc.

INDEX

- Abbott, W. C., 129.
 Abbreviations, colloquial, 27 (b)
 257 ff.; use of period with, 241
 (b), 356, 357; in titles, 358;
 objectionable in letters, 406, 419, 425; of name of city, 436 (j); in dictionaries, 55.
About, at, 299.
Above, 299.
 Absolute phrases, 55; set off by comma, 242 (c).
 Absolute pronoun, 55.
 Absolute substantive, 337.
 Academic degrees, when capitalized,
 367.
 Accent, wrong, in words, 362 ff.
Accept and except, 299.
Accordingly, punctuation with, 255
 (b).
Ad, 299.
A.D., 299, 356.
Addicted to, subject to, 299.
 Address, punctuation with, 242 (e), 420; in heading of letter, 398;
 inside — of letters, 413 ff.
 Adjective clause, 337.
 Adjective-phrase, 348.
 Adjectives, 173 ff.; defined, 337;
 agreement of, with substantive, 209; and adverbs, 220 ff.; consecutive, use of comma with, 243;
 comparative and superlative degree of, 221 ff.
 Adjunct, 337.
 Adverb-phrase, 348.
 Adverbial, clause, 337; objective, 337; phrases, comma with introductory, 242 (i).
 Adverbs, 173 ff., 337; position of some, 92; and adjectives, 220 ff.;
 comparative and superlative degree of, 221 ff.
Æson, 23.
Affect and effect, 299.
 Affectations, 42.
After, redundancy with participle,
 299.
 Age, numbers designating, 362.
Aggravate, 299.
 Agreement, grammatical, 166 ff.;
 of sentence members, 105; of subject and verb, 206; with singular and plural substantives, 206 (e);
 and predicate noun, 207; of adjective or pronoun with its substantive, 209.
 Alignment in outlines, 196.
All day, idiom, 93.
All night, idiom, 93.
All right, 299.
All-round, 299.
All the, 299.
 Alliteration, 53 (a).
Allude, 300.
 Allusions, hackneyed, 43.
Almost, position of, 92.
Already, all ready, 300.
Also, position of, 138; punctuation with, 255 (b); used to join verbs, 64.
 Alterations in Ms., 251 ff.
Alternative, 300.
Altogether, all together, 300.
A.M., 356.
 Ambiguous words, 35.
 Anachronous participles, 238.
 Analogous elements, parallel forms
 for, 115.
And, misuse of, 372, 122 ff.; subjects joined by, 206 (c).
And etc., 300.
And oblige, 436 (k).
And which construction, 122 (a).
Anent, 300.
 Antecedent, 338; in parenthesis, 82.
 Anti-climax; see Climax.
 Antithesis for emphasis, 142.
 Antonyms, books of, listed, 5.
Any one, concord of, 208.
Any place, for anywhere, 300.

- Anybody*, concord of, 208.
 Apostrophe, the, 216 ff.; shape of, 333.
 Appositive, 338; case of, 215; use of comma to set off, 242 (b); use of dash before, 264, (f).
Appreciate, 300.
 Archaic words, 24.
Arnold, 210, 267.
 Arrangement of Ms., 250.
 Articles, 338; omission of, 112, 113.
As and since used ambiguously, 375.
As clause, other or else in, 107 ff.
As, misuses of, 300, 375; case of substantive after, 216.
As or than clause in double capacity, 110 (d).
As, since, because, distinguish between, 375.
As if, misuse of, 375.
As to, misuse of, 110 (g).
As well as, subject not made plural by, 206 (b).
Asset, 300.
At about, 300.
Aught, 301.
 Author card, 1.
Auto, 301.
 Auxiliary, 338; and copulas in double capacity, 110 (a).
 Auxiliary verbs, repetition of, 118.
Avail, 301.
Ave., 356.
Awful, 301.
 Awkwardness, caused by repetition, 57; by avoidance of repetition, 58; by omission of that, 111; by excessive division, 355; collocation, 91; by separating preposition from object, 98; by use of absolute construction, 55; by parenthesizing antecedent, 82; by double use of auxiliaries, 110 ff.; by use of passive voice, 224; by shifting tense, point of view, etc., 184 ff.; by overlapping dependence, 67; by lack of balance, 115; by improper parallelism, 123.
Badly, 301.
Balance, 301.
 Balanced sentence, 142.
Bank on, 301.
 Barbarisms, 29.
Barbarous, barbaric, 301.
Barn, 301.
B.C., 356.
Be, as both principal and auxiliary, 110 (b).
Because, distinguished from for, 373; since, as, distinguish between, 375; clause as noun clause, 104.
Because of, 90.
 Beebe, William, 133, 134.
Beg, 301.
Besides, punctuation with, 255 (b); and beside, 301.
Between and among, 301.
Bibliography, making a, 10; specimen card, 20; finished form of, 11; arrangement of, 12; aids in making, 13.
Blame . . . on, 301.
 Blanks used for names or dates, 48.
 Bold-face, how to designate, 272.
 Books, classification of, 3; reference, 4.
Borrow and lend, 302.
 Brackets, 207 ff.
 Brevity, 37.
 Bryce, James, 131, 132, 204.
Bunch, 302.
 Burke, Edmund, 132, 133.
 Business letter, specimen of, 289.
But, 309; introducing consecutive statements, 66; misuse of, 122 ff., 372.
But that, but what, 302, 376.
 Cacophony, 53.
Calculate, 302.
 Call slip, library, 2.
Can, 302.
 Canceling a paragraph division in Ms., 345.
Can't seem; see Seem, 302.
 Capitals, 262 ff.; how to mark for, 272.
 Card catalogue, defined, 1.
 Cardinal number, 338.
 Careless pronunciation, 301.
 Carlyle, 36, 265.
 Case, 338; after pure conjunctions, 214; matters of, 170 ff.
 Causal conjunction, 338.
Cause, 302.

- Caused by*, 90.
Certainly, 302.
 Change of point of view in narration, 185, 187.
Characteristic, 302.
Charge, use with of and with, 302.
Claim, 302.
Class, number of, 209.
 Classification of books, systems of, 3.
 Clauses, 339; dependent: so, used as a connective, 65; overlapping, 67; defined, 73; mistaken for sentence, 73; dangling elliptical, 88 (d); elliptical in titles, 88 (d); misplaced, 93; modifying, position of, 93; relative, position of, 93; because, for noun clause, 104; when or where, used as predicate noun, 103; than or as, in double capacity, 110 (d); other or else in than or as, 107 ff.; "and which," 122 (a); substantive, incongruous junction of, 124; relative, number with, 206 (g); punctuation between, 239 ff.; period between, 239 (d); weight of, suggesting punctuation, 240; punctuation between coördinate, when joined by conjunctions, 242 (g); subordinate, as set off from principal, 242 (h); restrictive and non-restrictive, defined, 245 (a); clearness of coördination, 116 ff. Principal: introduced by so, 65; consecutive, introduced alike by but and for, 66.
 Clearness of sentences: reference, 71 ff.; relation of participles, gerunds, infinitives, and elliptical clauses, 75 ff.; coördination, 116 ff.; parallelism, 93 ff. Of whole compositions: gained in narration by use of names, 49; coherence, 147 ff. Of paragraphing, 117. Of punctuation, 251 ff.
 Climactic order in sentence, 140.
 Climax, 339; in emphasis, 193.
 Close, complimentary, of letter, 284; vulgar, 430.
 Close of a sentence, 241.
 Coherence, 75; connectives as an aid to, 370; exercises for, in the sentence, 112 ff.; in paragraph, 125 ff.; gained by connectives, 132; gained by summarizing words, 133; gained by omission of unnecessary words, 134; in whole composition, 142 ff.; gained by arrangement of sentences, 166; of a contradiction, 183.
 Coherent beginning, 181.
Coincidence, 303.
 Collective nouns, number with, 206 (g).
 Colloquialism, 27 ff.
 Colon, the, 201 ff.
 Comma fault, 72, 239, 253.
 Commas, 239 ff.; uses of, 242 ff.; use of semicolon in place of, 255 ff.; use of dash with, 265.
 Commercial envelope, 446 (b).
 Common noun, 339; elements of proper names, capitalized, 368.
Company, misuse of, 303.
 Comparative; see Comparison.
 Comparative degree, 339; of an adjective or adverb, 221.
 Comparison, 339, 344; omission of standard of, 114.
Completed, 303.
 Complements, sentences as, 102.
 Complex sentence, 340.
 Complimentary close, of letter, use of capitals in, 374; in business letters, 428; in letters of friendship, 429.
 Compound numerals, use of hyphen with, 297.
 Compound sentence, 340.
 Compound words, 292.
 Conclusion, paragraphs of, 153; misuse of term——in outline, 197.
 Concrete narration, 163.
 Conditional mode; see Mode.
 Conditional, perfect, 237 (b).
 Confused structure, 100.
 Confusing it, 86.
 Confusing words, 33.
 Conjectural statement, use of question mark with, 262.
 Conjugation, 344; of verb to take, 355.
 Conjunction, 340; subordinating, 70, 374; of time, place, cause, purpose, degree or comparison, condi-

- tion, concession, result, manner, 374 ff.; repetition of subordinating for clearness, 117; correlative, 121; misuse of coördinating, 122; pure, 185; pure, case after, 214.
- Conjunctive adverbs, 340; distinguished from pure conjunction and adverb, 239 (b); distinguished from simple conjunctions, 255 (b); punctuation with, 255 (b).
- Connection, between parts of composition, 145 ff.
- Connective words or phrases, 182 (b).
- Connectives, 370 ff.; coherence by, in sentence, 132; before contradictions, 183.
- Conscience, consciousness, conscious, conscientiousness, 303.
- Consecutive adjectives, use of comma with, 243.
- Considerable, misuse of, 303.
- Consistent punctuation, 254.
- Consonant; see Vowel, 340.
- Consonants, mispronounced, in words, 367 ff.; doubled, 352 (d).
- Construction, stringy, 63; 340; illogical, 83 ff.; parallel, 171.
- Contemplate, bad use of, with preposition, 303.
- Contemptible or contemptuous, 303.
- Contingent statements, use of shall and will in, 231.
- Continual or continuous, 303.
- Contractions, 27; use of period after, 241 (b); use of apostrophe in, 290.
- Contradiction, coherence of a, 183.
- Contrast, for emphasis, 142.
- Coördinate, 341.
- Coördinate clause; see Clause.
- Coördinate clauses joined by conjunction, 242 (g).
- Coördinate modifiers, separation of, 96.
- Coördinating conjunctions, 340; misuse of, 122; use of comma with, 242 (g).
- Coördinating words, 371; misuse of, 372.
- Coördination, clearness of, 116 ff.
- Copula, 341.
- Copy, 389 ff.; preparation of, for printer, 271 ff.
- Correction of proof, 271 ff.
- Correlative conjunctions, 341.
- Correlatives, 121.
- Could of, 303.
- Couldn't seem; see Seem.
- Credible, credulous, creditable, 303.
- Criticize, 303.
- Cross-strokes on t's and x's, 330, 331.
- Crowd, for party, 303.
- Crowding, of punctuation, 326; in Ms., 327; the page, 327.
- Cunning, misuse of, 303.
- Cute, 304.
- Dangling, elliptical clauses, definition of, 88 (d); gerund phrases, 88 (b); infinitive phrases, 88 (c); modifiers, 88; when allowed, 89; participial phrases, 88.
- Dash, the, 203 ff.
- Data, 304.
- Date, 304.
- Dates, in letters, complete, 403; representation of numbers in, 359; punctuation with, 242 (e).
- Deal (noun), misuse of, 304.
- Deal (verb), used with with, 304.
- Declension; see Inflection, 344.
- Definite it, 86.
- Degree, comparative and superlative, 221.
- Demand, 304.
- Demean, 304.
- Demonstrative adjectives, 341; reference of, 87.
- Demonstrative pronouns, 341.
- Dependent clause; see Clause.
- Depot, 304.
- Description, shift of tense in, 186.
- Desire, future of, 227.
- Determination, future of, 227.
- Dewey, 128, 129.
- Dewey Decimal system, 3.
- Dialogue, paragraphing of, 156; punctuation of, 272, 274, 275.
- Dickens, 120, 195.
- Dickinson, G. L., 205.
- Diction, colloquialisms in, 27; improprieties in, 28; barbarisms in, 29; slang, 30; poetic and legal, 46.
- Dictionaries, list of, 4; unabridged, list of, 32; exercises in use of, 51.

- Different, 304.
 Digraphs not to be divided, 352 (e).
Diner, for dining car, 304.
 Direct address, 341; use of comma in, 242.
 Direct object, 347.
 Direct question, question mark with, 261.
 Direct quotation, 341; paragraphing of, 155.
Disinterested, 304.
 Dissimilar elements in series form, 125.
 Division into paragraphs, 117.
 Division of word, at end of line, use of hyphen in, 297; between syllables only, 352; excessive, 355.
Done, misuse of, 304.
Don't, contraction, 305; ungrammatical use of, 304.
 Dots of i's and j's, 330, 331.
 Double capacity, words used in, 110; auxiliaries and copulas in, 110 (a); be in, 110 (b); principal verbs in, 110 (c); than or as clause in, 110 (d); other modifiers in, 110 (e); a noun in, 110 (f); to in as to, in regard to, etc., in, 110 (g).
 Double negative, 317.
 Doubled consonants, 352 (d).
Dove, for dived, 305.
Due to, 305, 90.
Each, every, etc., concord of, 208.
Each other, 305.
 Effectiveness in diction, 56.
E.g., 241 (b); punctuation with, 299, 356.
Either, concord of, 208.
Either, neither, 305.
Effect; see Affect.
Elegant, 305.
Element, 305; sentence, set apart by dash, 264 (e).
Ellipsis, 436 (a); marks, 276 (f).
 Elliptical clauses, dangling, 88 (d); in titles, 88 (d).
 Elliptical sentences, how punctuated, 246.
Else, 305.
Else or other in than or as clause, 107 ff.; restricting of, 109 (c).
 Emerson, 136.
 Emphasis, 105 ff.; gained by transposition, 134; in paragraph, 128 ff.; in sentence, 135, 142 ff.; exercises in, 114 ff.; in whole composition, 148 ff.; paragraphing for, 163; use of italics for, 387.
Enormity, enormousness, 306.
Enough that, or so that, 306.
Enthuse, 306.
 Envelope, 440; commercial, 446 (b); official, 447 (a); square, 447 (c); writing on the, 296 ff.
 Erasure in Ms., 342.
Esq., use of, 282.
Etc., 241, 356; indicating omission, 276 (f); bad use of and with, 300; vague use of, 306.
 Etymology, exercises in, 52.
 Euphony, 53.
Ever, position of, 92.
Every one, concord of, 208.
Every place, for everywhere, 300; see Any place.
Every so often, 306.
Everybody, concord of, 208.
 Examples, introducing, 299.
Except and accept, 306.
Exceptional, exceptionable, 306.
 Excessive coordination, 65.
 Excessive division in syllabication, 355.
 Excision in sentence, 144.
 Exclamation mark, 263; comma used instead of, 247; relative positions of quotation marks and, 276 (b).
 Exercises in diction, 51: use of dictionary, 51; parts of speech, 51; inflectional forms, 51; verb, transitive or intransitive, 52; etymology, 52; good usage, 52, 53; definitions of words, 53, 54; idiomatic construction, 54; synonym distinctions, 54, 55; abbreviations, 55; use of hyphen, 55; precision, 55, 56; effectiveness, 56, 57, 58.
 Exercises in grammar, 181, 182, 183.
 Exercises in mechanics, 269: syllabication: miscellaneous, prefixes, suffixes, doubled consonants, and digraphs, 269, 270; abbreviations, numbers, capitals, italics, 270, 271.

- Exercises in punctuation, 221, 222, 223, 224.
- Exercises in spelling, 240: doubling final consonants, 240; dropping final e, 240; retaining final e, 240; change of y to i in plurals, 240; change of y to i in verbs, 240, 241; change of ie to y, 241; adverbs in ly, 241; plurals in s and es, 241; present third singulars in s and es, 241; in ie and ei, as in receive, believe, etc., 241; in principal and principle, 241, 242; endings in le and el, 242; adjective ending ful, 242; adjective ending ous, 242; adverb prefix al, 242; disappear and disappoint, 242, 243; prefix pro as in professor, 243; endings in ede and eed, 243; endings in ness, 243; lose and loose, 243; lead and led, 243; to, too, and two, 244; accept and except, 244, 330; affect and effect, 244, 330; advice, advise, device, devise, 244; awhile and a while, 245; sometime and some time, 245; anyway and any way, 245.
- Exercises in the composition as a whole, 158: unity, 158, 159; unity and coherence, 159, 160, 161; outlining, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165.
- Exercises in the paragraph, 134: paragraph division, 134, 135, 136; unity, 136, 137; unity, coherence, and emphasis, 137, 138, 139.
- Exercises in the sentence, 109; unity, 109, 110, 111, 112; coherence, 112, 113, 114; emphasis, 114, 115.
- Exercises on glossary: miscellaneous faulty expressions: 330 ff.; as, if, and like, 330, 331; real, really, 331; due to, 331; falls, ways, and woods, 331, 332; whose, 332; could of, may of, 332; would have and had have for had in past perfect, 332; you was, 333; different, 333; such as, 333; such that, 333; superior and inferior, 334; prefer and preferable, 334; no sooner . . . than, 334; hardly . . . when, 334.
- Expect*, misuse of, 306.
- Expectation, future of, 226.
- Explanations, introducing, 299.
- Expressions to be written as single words, 321.
- Extemporized words, 31.
- Extended quotations, set apart on page, 349.
- Extra*, 306.
- Factitive adjective, 341.
- Factitive adjective or adverb, 223.
- Factor*, 306.
- Falls*, used in singular, 307.
- Faulty expressions, miscellaneous, exercises on, 330 ff.
- Faulty idioms, 23 (c).
- Faze*, 307.
- Federal Constitution, 83.
- Fellow*, 307.
- Figure of speech, 341; defined, 50 ff.
- Fine*, 307.
- Finite mode, 345.
- Finite verb, predicate substantive with, 211.
- Firstly*, 307.
- First-rate*, 307.
- Fix*, 307.
- Folding of letters, 445.
- Folios, represented by numbers, 359.
- Footnotes, purpose of, 14; place, 15; form, 16; text with, 24; abbreviations used in, 18.
- For*, 373; introducing consecutive statements, 66; comma before, 242 (g).
- Force in sentence, 139.
- Foreign nouns, 313 (e).
- Foreign words and phrases, 22; use of italics with, 385.
- Formal notes in third person, 439.
- Former*, latter, 307.
- Forms, repetition of, 60.
- Fractions, number with, 206 (i); use of hyphen in writing, 294.
- Friendly letter, specimen of, 289.
- Frighten*, scare, 307.
- Future perfect tense; see Tenses.
- Future tense, misused for present in letters of acceptance or regret, 439; see Tenses.
- Future tense, simple, 226; to indicate termination, 227.

- Galley proof, 394.
 Gaps between letters in Ms., 328.
Genial, congenial, 307.
Gent, for gentleman, 308.
Gentleman, 308; gentleman friend, 308.
 Geographical names, punctuation with, 242 (e).
 Gerund, 342; possessive with, 219.
 Gerund phrase, 348; dangling, 88 (b); see Phrase.
Get, as in get to go, 308.
Get up, for prepare, 308.
 Glossary of miscellaneous faulty expressions, exercises on, 330 ff.
Going on (e.g. "going on five or six"), 308.
Good, misuse of, as adverb, 308.
 Good taste, 50 (c).
 Good usage, defined, 19; means of learning, 32; exercises in, 52.
Got, in sense of obtained, 308.
Gotten, got preferable to, 309.
 Govern, 342.
 Grammar, 342.
 Grammatical agreement, 166 ff.
 Grammatical vocabulary, 336.
Grand, 309.
 Greenough, 139.
Grip, 309.
 Grouping of related parts, 159.
Guess, 309.
- Habitual action, would expressing, 226 note.
 Hackneyed expressions, 43.
Had better, had best, 309.
Had have or had of, 309.
Had ought; see Ought.
Had rather, 309.
Hardly, misuse with negative, 309; position of, 92.
Have got, see got, 309.
 Heading, position of, in letters, 408; punctuation of, in letters, 412.
Heap, heaps, 309.
Hear to it, 309.
Help but, 309.
Help, for servants, 309.
Hence, punctuation with, 239 (b), 255 (b).
 High-flown language, 45.
Hired girl, 310.
 Historical present, 47.
Home, 310; misuse of, 113.
Honorable (title), 321.
 Hours of the day, to be spelled out, 362.
 House numbers, 400.
How clauses not to be set off by commas, 252.
How, for that, 376.
However, position of, 138; punctuation with, 255 (b).
 Humor, improper use of italics for, 388.
Hung, for hanged, 310.
Hustle, 310.
Hustler, 310.
 Huxley, 126, 130.
 Hyphen, the, 218 ff.; exercises in, 55.
- i*, dotting of, 330.
I, the writer and we used for, 49; use of, 437; not to be avoided by ellipsis, 438; shift to one, 187.
I would, will, or can say, 436 (e).
 Idiomatic use of prepositions, 28; exercises in, 54.
 Idioms, 23.
I.e., 241 (b); 356; correct use of, 310; punctuation with, 299.
If, for whether, 310, 376.
Ilk, 310.
 Illogical comparisons, 107.
 Illogical construction, 83 ff.
 Illogical practices in outlining, 154.
 Imperative mode, 345.
 Imperative sentence, closed with period, 241 (a).
 Implied reference of pronouns, 80.
 Improperities, 28.
In, for into, 311.
In back of, 311.
In fact, punctuation with, 255 (b).
 Inflectional forms, exercises in, 51.
In front of, 311.
In our midst; see Midst.
In regard to, misuse of, 110 (g).
In reply would say, 436 (d).
 Including, subject not made plural by, 206 (b).
 Incomplete figures of speech, 52.
 Incongruous figures of speech, 51.

- Incongruous substantives, junction of, 124.
 Incorrect omissions, 89.
 Incorrect parallelism, 123.
 Incorrect spacing out, 150.
 Incorrect uniting of separate words, 320.
Incredible, incredulous, 311.
 Indefinite narrative, 163.
 Indefinite pronoun, 343.
 Indefinite you, 83; they, 84; it, 85; that and those, 87.
 Indentation, of paragraphs, 146 ff.; after a quotation, 157; in midst of sentence, 158; in tabulated lists, 350; of dialogue, 156.
 Indexes, for magazines, 6.
 Indicative mode, 345.
 Indirect discourse, quotation marks not to be used with, 272.
 Indirect object, 347.
 Indirect question, 343; question mark not to be used with, 261.
 Indirect quotation, 343; use of auxiliary, 230.
Individual, 311.
 Individuals in firms, how to address in letters, 416.
Indulge, 311.
 Ineffective pronouns, 182 (d).
Inferior; see Superior.
Inferior than, 324.
 Infinitive, 343; case of subject and predicate complement of, 212; perfect, 237; split, 97; mode, 345; phrases, dangling, 88 (c); sign, 344; repetition of the, 120.
 Inflection, 344.
 Inflectional forms, 344.
-ing, dropping e before, 306.
Ingenious, ingenuous, 311.
 Initials used for names in narration, 48.
 Ink, 440.
 Insertion in manuscript, 341; 392.
Inside, 311.
 Inside address of letter, 280.
Inside of, 311.
Instance, instant, incident, 311.
 Intensives, 344.
 Interjection, 344; use of comma with, 247.
 Interpolation, use of brackets with, 271.
 Interrogation point, after direct, not indirect question, 261; use of, within parenthesis, 262; misuse of, denoting humor, 262; relative position of quotation marks and, 210 ff.
 Interrogative adjective, 344.
 Interrogative pronoun, 344.
 Interruptions, use of dash with, 264 (a).
 Intervening words, obscuring grammatical subject, 206 (a).
 Intransitive verb, 353.
Introduction, misuse of term in outline, 197; paragraphs of, 153.
 Introductory adverbial phrases, comma with, 242 (i).
 Irony, 344.
It, 356; used indefinitely, 85; definitely, 86; confusing it, 86.
 Italic capitals, how to designate, 272.
 Italicize, for emphasis, 270 (a); words discussed, 270 (b); to indicate title, 270 (c).
 Italics, 267 ff.; how to mark for, 272.
Its, no apostrophe with, 288.
j, dotting of, 330.
 James, William, 131, 197.
 Jowett, Benjamin, 199.
 Junction, mistaken, prevented by commas, 242 (j); of incongruous substantives, 124.
Just, 311; position of, 92.
 Key words, coherence gained by conspicuous placing of, 146.
Kind, sort, 312.
Kind, type, etc., number of, 209.
Kind of, 312.
Kindly, misuse of, 312.
 Kipling, 195.
 Kittredge, 139.
 Labeling humor or irony, 262, 283 (b), 388.
Lady, lady friend, 308, 312.
Lady Clare Vere de Vere, 65.
 Lamb, 210.

- Lang, Andrew, 137, 138.
 Latin words in footnotes, use of italics with, 386.
 Latinistic phrases, 55.
Latter, former, 307.
Lay and lie, 312.
Learn, 312.
Leave go of, 312.
 Legal diction, 46.
 Legibility in Ms., 246 ff.
Less, for fewer, 312.
 Letter-paper, 441.
 Letter, use of capitals in salutation and complimentary close of, 374; making simple, 335.
 Letter writing, 276 ff.
 Lettering and numbering in outlines, 195.
 Letters, specimen, 438; of acceptance, use of present tense in, 439; of regret, use of present tense in, 439; folding of, 445.
 Lewisohn, L., 187.
Liable, 313.
 Library of Congress system, 3.
 Library, use of, 1.
Lie and lay, 312.
Like, 313.
Like, for as, as if, 376.
Liked, would, 313.
Likely, 313.
 Limiting subject for unity, 178.
Line, lines, 313, 314.
 Literary ornament, 44 (b).
LL.D., 241 (b).
Loan, 314.
Locate, 314.
 Logical agreements, 105.
 Loose sentences, 139.
Lose out, 314.
Lot, lots, a whole lot, 314.
Lovely, 314.
Luxuriant, luxurious, 314.
-ly, added to adjective, 293.
 Macaulay, 108, 127, 187.
Mad, 314.
 Magazines, 5; list of, 13; indexes, 6.
Malaprops, 33.
 Mansfield, Katherine, 69.
 Manuscripts, alterations in, 251 ff.; arrangement of, 250 ff.; sending of, 393; spacing in, 322.
 Margin, in letters, 442; in manuscripts, 339, 340.
 Marked copy, sample of, 391.
 Marks of punctuation, relative position of, 276.
 Married women, signatures of, in letters, 434.
May of; see Of.
Mean (adjective), 314.
 Mechanics of writing, 246 ff.
 Members, order of, 79.
 Meredith, 134, 195.
Merely, position of, 92.
Messrs., 315.
 Metaphor, 345, 51.
Midst, 315.
Might of; see Of.
 Mills, L. S., 211.
 Misplaced clauses, 93; passages in composition as whole, 180.
 Mispronounced, list of words often, 361.
Miss (title), 315.
 Misspelled, list of words commonly, 319.
 Mistaken junction, avoided by commas, 242 (j).
 Mixed figures of speech, 51.
 Mode, 345; subjunctive, 225.
 Modifiers, 346; dangling, 88; dangling, allowable, 89; position of, 91; squinting, 95; coördinate, separation of, 96; in double capacity, 23 (b), 110 (e); parenthetic position of, 137; restrictive and non-restrictive, 245 ff.
 Modify, 346.
 Modifying clause, position of, 93.
 Money, sums of, method of representing, 360; parenthetic repetition of, 364.
 Monosyllable, 346; not to be divided, 353.
 Monotony of sentence structure, 60; and frequent use of I, 438.
 Mood, shifting of, 128.
Moreover, position of, 138; punctuation with, 239 (b), 255 (b).
Most for almost, 315.
Mrs., 315, 241 (b).
Much, for very, 315.
 Multiples, number with, 206 (h).
Must of; see Of.

- Mutual*, 315.
Myself, for I, 316.
- Namely*, punctuation with, 299.
- Names, in narration, represented by initial or dashes, 48; a means to clearness and smoothness, 48; of ships, to be italicized, 383.
- Narrative, shift of tense in, 184; shift of point of view, 185; use of names in, 48; concrete and indefinite, 163.
- National usage of words, 27.
- Naught* and aught, 301.
- Near by*, 316.
- Nearly*, misused for near, 316; position of, 92.
- Negative, double, 317.
- Neither*; see Either; concord of, 208.
- Nevertheless*, position of, 138; punctuation with, 255 (b).
- Newman, 104, 105, 108.
- Newspaper, mannerisms of, 44; current rhetoric of, 44.
- Nice*, 316.
- Nicknames of states and cities, 44; use of quotation marks with, 283 (a) (c).
- No good*, 316.
- No less than*, subject not made plural by, 206 (b).
- No place*, for nowhere, 300; see Any place.
- No use*, 316.
- Nobody*, concord of, 208.
- Nominative case for subject, 210 ff.
- Nominative of address; see Direct address, 341.
- Non-finite mode, 345.
- Non-predicative mode, 345.
- Non-restrictive and restrictive modifiers, 245 ff.; phrases, 245 (b); clause, defined, 245 (a).
- No one*, concord of, 208.
- None*, number of verb with, 208.
- Nor*, subjects joined by, 206 (d); use of singular verb with, 206 (d).
- Not*, double negative, 317.
- Not to exceed*, 317.
- Note-taking in library, 9; form, 9.
- Notorious*, 316.
- Noun, in double capacity, 110 (f); see Substantive, 346.
- Nouns, 351; declension of, 352; ending in s, use of apostrophe with, 287; collective number with, 206 (g); proper, 365.
- Novelty of phrase, straining for, 44.
- Nowhere near*, 317.
- Number, 346; shifting of, 130; of kind, type, sort, class, etc., 209; agreement in, of verbs and pronouns, 206 (b) ff.; not affected by with, 206 (b); affected by and, 206 (c); of verb in a relative clause, 206 (j); with there is and there are, 206 (f); with collective nouns, 206 (g); with quantities, sums, multiples, 206 (h); with fractions, 206 (i); with relative clause, 206 (j); number with each, every, etc., 208.
- Numbering and lettering in outlines, 195.
- Numbers, parenthetic repetition of, 364; representation of, 259 ff.; when to spell, 361.
- Numerals, use of colon with, 259; use of hyphen with, 296.
- O* and oh, 318; when to capitalize, 373.
- Oblique and, 329.
- Object, 347; of of, 109 ff.; of verb or preposition, case of, 213.
- Objective case, 212 ff.
- Obligation, should expressing, 226 note.
- Observance* and observation, 317.
- Obsolete and archaic words, 24.
- Of*, for have, 317; object of, 109 ff.; phrase limiting a superlative, 109.
- Off of*, 317.
- Omission, incorrect, 89; of articles and possessives, 112, 113; of prepositions, 113; of standard of comparison, 114; of unnecessary words, 134.
- On account of*, 90.
- On the side*, 317.
- One*, concord of, 208; shift from I to, 187; preferable to you, 83.
- Only*, 317; position of, 92.

- Onomatopoeic words, 36.
Or, misuse of, 122 ff.; misused for nor, 317; subjects joined by, 206 (d); use of singular verb with, 206 (d).
Oral; see Verbal ornaments.
 Order, of members of a sentence, 79; smooth, 98; climactic, 140.
 Organization, of whole composition, 179 ff.; of sentences, 68, 69, 75, 100, 105.
 Ornament, verbal, 44 (b); conspicuous, in handwriting, 335.
Other or else in than or as clause, 107 ff.; restricting of, 109 (c).
Other times, 317.
Otherwise, punctuation with, 255 (b).
Ought, misuse of had with, 317.
Ought to of, 317.
Out loud, 318.
 Outlines, 150 ff.; defined, 194; topic, 150; sentence, 151.
Outside of, 318.
Over with, 318.
 Over-frequent paragraphing, 162.
 Overlapping dependence, 67.
 Overlapping topics, 202.
Overly, 318.
 Over-minuteness in outline, 199.
 Overuse of figures of speech, 50 (e).
Owing to, 90.
 Page numbers, in manuscript, 337.
 Page proof, 395.
Pair, singular, 318.
 Paper, for letters, 440.
Paradise Lost, 172.
 Paragraph, 116 ff.; transitional, 182 (a); developments, 130; indicating in Ms., 344.
 Paragraph divisions, canceling, 345.
 Parallel construction, 171; emphasis gained by, 174.
 Parallel forms for analogous elements, 115.
 Parallelism, 93 ff.; incorrect, 123.
 Parentheses, 205 ff.; frequent use of, 71; use of, with antecedent, 82; commas preferred to, 242 (d).
 Parenthetic members, use of comma with, 242 (d).
 Parenthetic position of modifiers, 137; position of therefore, however, etc., 138; use of dash, 264 (b); repetition of numbers, 364.
 Part; see Portion.
Partake of, 318.
 Participial close, to a letter, 436 (k).
 Participial gerund, designating general action, 89.
 Participial mode, 345.
 Participial phrase, 348; dangling, 88 (a); of result, 88 (a).
 Participles, 347; used for sentences, 74; anachronous, 238; used for verbs, 74.
 Parts of a composition, misplacing of, 180; order of, 179; coherence in, 182.
 Parts of speech, 347; exercise in, 51; errors regarding, 28.
Party, 318.
 Passive; see Voice, 354.
 Passive voice, misuse of, 224.
 Past perfect; see Tenses, 353.
 Past tense; see Tenses, 353; misused for present perfect, 234; misused for past perfect, 235; undated, 233.
Per, 318.
Per cent, 318.
 Perfect; see Tenses, 353.
 Perfect conditional, 237 (b).
 Perfect infinitive, 237.
 Period, the, 188 ff.; fault, 73, 239; between clauses, 239 (d); uses of, 241.
 Periodic sentence, 139.
 Person, 347; shifting of, 131; concord of a person, 208; use of third, in formal notes, 439.
 Personal pronouns, 348.
Phase, 319.
 Phenomena, 304.
Phone, 319.
 Phrase, 348; defined, 73; absolute, set off by comma, 242 (c); comma with introductory adverbial, 242 (i); dangling participial, 88 (a); dangling gerund, 88 (b); begun by thus or thereby, 88 (a); participial of result, 88 (a); dangling infinitive, 88 (c); transitional,

- 167, 189; restrictive and non-restrictive, 245 (b).
Piano, misuse of, 319.
Piece, for distance, 319.
Plan on, 319.
Please find enclosed, 436 (h).
Please, will you please preferable to, 436 (f).
Plenty, 319.
Pleonasm, 40.
Plural; see Number, 346.
Plurals, of nouns, 313 (a) (b) (c); of letters and symbols, formed by adding 's, 291, 313 (d); of some foreign nouns, 313 (e).
P.M., 356.
Poetic diction, 46.
Poetry, correct method of putting on paper, 348.
Point of view, shifting of, in narrative, 185, 187.
Polk, James K., 25.
Portion, 319.
Position, of heading in letters, 408; of members in sentence, 91 ff., 137; of modifiers, 91; of only, 92; parenthetic, of modifiers, 137; of marks of punctuation, 276; emphasis in paragraph, 173; for emphasis in composition as a whole, 191.
Possessive adjective, 349.
Possessive case, 217 ff., 285, 338.
Possessive pronouns, misuse of apostrophe with, 288.
Possessives, omission of, 112.
Postage stamp, place for, 451.
Postal, 319.
Posted, for informed, 319.
Potential mode, 345.
Pp., 241 (b).
Practical, 319.
Precision in diction, 34; exercises in, 55, 56.
Predicate; see Subject, 351.
Predicate adjective; see Predicate substantive, 349.
Predicate adjective and adverb, rule concerning, 220.
Predicate complement; see Predicate substantive, 349.
Predicate complement, sentence as, 102.
Predicate noun, when or where clause used as, 103; agreement and, 207.
Predicate substantive, 349; with finite verb, case of, 211; with infinitive, case of, 212; verb attracted from correct number by, 207.
Predication, 349.
Predicative mode, 345.
Prefer, 319.
Prefixes, 352 (b).
Preparation of copy for printer, 271 ff.
Preposition, 349; case of object of, 213; separated from object, 98; ending a sentence, 107; omission of, 113; repetition of, 119.
Prepositional phrase, 348.
Present, historical, 47; see Tenses, 353.
Present participle used anachronously, 238.
Present tense, 232; use of, in letters of regret or acceptance, 439.
Pretentiousness of style, produced by high-flown language, 45; by poetic diction, 46; by the use of historical present, 47; by using we and the writer for I, 49.
"Primer style" of sentences, 41.
Principal clause; see Clause.
Principal parts of verb, 350.
Principal verbs, 350; in double capacity, 110 (c).
Promise, future of, 227.
Pronoun, agreement with its substantive, 209; 351; declension of, 352; relative, list of, 70; reference of, 76 ff.; ineffective, 182 (d).
Pronunciation, accurate, 301; of words often mispronounced, 361 ff.
Proof, correction of, 271 ff.; galley, 394; page, 395.
Proofreaders' marks, 396.
Proper name, 339; capitals with, 365.
Proper noun, 339, 365.
Proportion, for emphasis, 143, 190; in paragraph, 172.
Propose, for purpose, 320.
Proposition, 320.

- Prospect*, 320.
Proven, 320.
 Proverbs, hackneyed, 43.
Providing, for provided, 320.
 Provincialisms, 20.
 Punctuation, 184 ff.; consistent, 254; marks of, relative position of, 276; crowding of, 326; of addresses of letters, 420; of heading in letters, 412, 420, 426.
 Pure conjunctions, 185; case after, 214.
Put in, for spend, 320.
Put in an appearance, 320.
- Quaife, M. M. 25.
Quality, 320.
 Quantities, number with, 206 (h).
 Question mark, 202 ff.
 Questions, shall and will in, 229; punctuation of, 261.
Quite, 320; position of, 92.
Quite a few, 321.
Quite a little, 321.
 Quotation marks, 208 ff., 155-158, 371; shape of, 333.
 Quotations, as coherent part of sentence, 106; indentation after, 157; paragraphing of, 158; use of comma before, 248; use of brackets and parentheses in, 271; within quotation, 274, 278.
 Quotations, extended, set apart on page, 253; hackneyed, 43; paragraphing of direct, 155; punctuation before, 248, 257, 272-276; indirect, shall and will in, 230.
q.v., 356.
- Raise*, for rear, 321; confounded with rise, 321.
 Raleigh, Sir Walter, 128.
Real, for very, 321.
Reason, illogical use of, 321.
 Receding accent, 303.
 Redundance, 39.
 Reeves, J. S., 24, 25.
Refer; see Allude.
 Reference books, 4; for special subjects, 5; guides to, listed, 12; use of, 7, 8.
 Reference, of pronouns and pronominal expressions, 76 ff.; remote, 78; obscure, 79; unexpressed word, 80; to whole statements, 81.
 References, punctuation with, 242 (e); use of colon with, 259.
 Reflexives, 344.
 Related parts, grouping of, 159.
 Relation of subordinate and principal verbs, 237.
 Relative adjective; see Relative pronoun, 350.
 Relative clause, number with, 206 (j); position of, 94; see Adjective clause, 337.
 Relative pronouns, 350; list of, 70.
 Relevancy, shown by expression, 177; by limiting the subject, 178.
Remember of, 321.
 Remote reference of pronoun, 78.
 Repetition, awkward avoidance of, 58; of that, 59; of forms, 60; for emphasis, 145; of subordinating conjunctions, 117; of auxiliary verbs, 118; of prepositions, 119; of the infinitive sign, 120; of word, with change of meaning, 56; of words for coherence, 169; use of dash before, 264 (d); parenthetic, of numbers, 364.
Respectful, respectable, respective, 321.
 Restrictive and non-restrictive modifiers, use of comma with, 245 ff.; phrases, 245 (b).
Reverend (title), 321.
 Rhetoric; see Grammar, 342.
 Rhetorical expressions, triteness in, 42.
 Rhyme, 53 (a).
 Rhythm in prose, 54.
Rig, 322.
Right away, right off, 322.
Rise and raise, 321.
 Robinson, J. A., 133.
 Roman numbers, shape of, 334.
Run, for operate, 322.
 Run-on sentence, 69.
 Run-over lines, 346.
 Ruskin, 187, 206.
- Said*, 322.
Said he, punctuation with, 275 ff.
 Salutation of a letter, colon with, 258; use of capitals in, 374; in

- business letters, 421; how punctuated, 426; letters of friendship, 422; improper, 423; name used for, 424; position of, 427.
- Same*, used as a pronoun, 436 (f), 322; as an adverb, 322.
- Sarcasm, distinguished from irony, 344.
- Say*, for give orders, 322.
- Scarcely*, position of, 92; negatives incorrectly used with, 309; incorrectly used with than, till, until, 325.
- Scare*, for frighten, 307.
- School*, for college, 322.
- Scrappy sentences, 41.
- Search*, in search of, 322.
- Seem*, can't or couldn't, 322.
- Seldom ever*, 322.
- Seldom or ever*, 322.
- Selection*, misuse of, 322.
- Semicolon, the, 199 ff., 239 (b) ff.
- Sentence outline, 151.
- Sentences, unity of, 61 ff.; stringy, 63, 350; ——— element, 350; omitted, 99; set apart by dash, 264 (e); complete, defined, 73; uncompleted, 101; as subject, or predicate complement, 102; quoted sentences as part of, 106; coherence in, 132 ff.; emphasis in, 135; loose and periodic, 139; force in, 139; climactic order in, 140 ff.; upside-down subordination in, 140 ff.; balanced, 142; indentation within, 158; topic, 165; arrangement of, for coherence, 166; transitional, 182 (a); elliptical, how punctuated, 246; members, logical agreement of, 105; straggling, 68; run-on, 69; choppy, 70; use of parenthesis in, 71; subordinate element mistaken for, 73.
- Separation of coördinate modifiers, 96.
- Sequence of tenses, 236.
- Series, punctuation of: comma before the conjunction in, 244, 250.
- Set*, singular, 318.
- Set* and sit, 322.
- Shall* and will, 226 ff.
- Shan't*, 323.
- Shape*, misuse of, 323.
- Shelley, 265.
- Shifting of mood, 128; of tense, 129; of number, 130; of person, 131; of subject, 126; of voice, 127; of tense, in narrative and description, 184, 186; of point of view in narrative, 185.
- Shifting, unnecessary, 102 ff.
- Ships, names of, to be italicized, 383.
- Should* and would, 227 ff.
- Should of*, 323.
- Show*, misuses of, 323.
- Show up*, 323.
- Showy language, 45.
- Sight of*, 323.
- Sign of the infinitive, 343; repetition of, 120.
- Signature, to a letter, position of, 433 ff.
- Simile; see Metaphor, 345.
- Simple conjunction; see Conjunction, 340.
- Simple sentence, 351.
- Since* and as used ambiguously, 375.
- Since*, because, as, distinguish between, 375.
- Singular number, 346.
- Sit* and set, 322.
- Size*, used as adjective, 323.
- Size-up*, 323.
- Slang, avoid, 30; use of quotation marks with, 283; apology for, 283.
- Sleeper*, for sleeping car, 304.
- Small capitals, how to mark for, 272.
- Smoker*, for smoking car, 304.
- Smooth order, 98.
- Snap*, 327.
- So*, expressing sequence or result, 374, 65; for so that, 323, 376; for very, 323; preceding a participle, 326; used to join verbs, 64; punctuation with, when used to compound sentences, 255 (b).
- So* habit, the, 65.
- So as*, misuse of, 375.
- "Solid" words, 218, 321.
- Some*, used as adverb, 324.
- Some one*, concord of, 208.
- Some place* for somewhere, 300.
- Somebody*, concord of, 208.
- Somebody else*, 306.
- Somebody's else*, 306.

- Sort, kind*, 312; number of, 209.
Sort of, 312.
 Space in manuscript, between lines, 322; between words, 323; between sentences, 324; in type-written copy, 325.
 Spacing out, 150.
Specie, for species, 324.
 Specimen letters, 438.
 Spelling, 225.
 Split infinitives, 97.
 Squinting modifiers, 95.
St., 356.
 Standard of comparison; omission of, 114.
 Standard usage, 19.
Start, for begin, 324.
 Statements, introduced by but or for, 66; contingent, use of shall and will in, 231; permanently true, present tense with, 232.
 Stevenson, 92, 130, 131, 132, 187, 205.
Still, punctuation with, 255 (b).
Stop, for stay, 324.
 Stragglings sentences, 68.
Strata, 304.
 Street numbers, 401.
 Stress, 107.
 Stringy construction, 63.
 Strong close of a sentence, 139.
 Structure, confused, 100; uncompleted, 101.
 Subject, 351; shifting of, 126; in nominative case, 210; of an infinitive, in objective case, 212; not made plural by with, together with, including, as well as, no less than, 206 (b); joined by and, 206 (c); joined by or or nor, 206 (d).
 Subject card, 2.
 Subject complement, sentence as, 102.
 Subjunctive; see Mode and also Indicative.
 Subjunctive mode, 225, 345.
 Subordinate clause; see Clause.
 Subordinate clauses, defined, 73; use of comma with, 242 (h).
 Subordinate sentence element, 350; mistaken for sentence, 73.
 Subordinate verbs, relation of, 237.
 Subordinating conjunctions, 70, 340, 374; repetition of, 117.
 Subordinating words, 374; misuse of, 375.
 Subordination, upside-down, 141.
 Substantive clause, 352; misuse of comma before, 252.
 Substantives, 351; after than or as, case of, 216; predicate, with finite verb, 211.
 Substantives, junction of incongruous, 124; used for sentences, 74; singular and plural, 206 (e).
Such, 324.
Such and so used for very, 114.
Such as, punctuation with, 298.
 Suffixes, 352 (c).
 Summarizing words, for coherence, 133; use of dash before, 264 (c).
 Sums, number with, 206 (h).
 Sums of money, method of representing, 360.
Superior than, 324.
 Superlative, the of phrase limiting a, 109.
 Superlative degree, 339; of adjective or adverb, 221.
 Superscriptions of letters, 449.
Suppose; see Expect.
Sure, 325.
 Suspense, in emphasis, 192.
Suspicion, used as verb, 325.
Swell, used as an adjective, 325.
 Syllabication, 255 ff.
 Synonyms, books of, listed, 5; exercises in, 54.
 Syntax, 353.
t, crossing of, 332.
 Tabulated lists, 254; indention in, 350; set apart on the page, 351.
Take, for study, 325.
Take and, 325.
Take in, for attend, 325; for cheat, or deceive, 325.
Take it, introducing an example, 325.
Take sick, 325.
Take stock in, 301; see Bank on, 325.
 Tautology, 39.
Team, 325.
 Technical terms, use of quotation marks with, 282.
 Technical words, 21.
 Tenses, 353; sequence of, 236; shifting of, 129; shifting of, in

- narrative, 184; shifting of, in description, 186; simple future, 226; of statements permanently true, 232; future, to indicate determination, 227.
- Than*, case of substantive after, 216; for when, 325, 376.
- Than* clause, other or else in, 107 ff.
- Than* or as clause in double capacity, 110 (d).
- Than* whom, 216.
- That* and which, 376.
- That*, awkward omission of, 111; after so, 111; clause, use of comma with, 253; conjunction, careless repetition of, 59; used as adverb, 325; weak reference of, 77.
- That is*, punctuation with, 299.
- That is, that is to say*, 374.
- That there*, 326.
- Then*, punctuation with, 255 (b); used to join verbs, 64.
- There is, there are*, noun following, 206 (f); number with, 206 (f).
- Thereby*, beginning a participial phrase, 88 (a).
- Therefore*, position of, 138; punctuation with, 239 (b), 255 (b).
- These here*, 326.
- They*, used indefinitely, 84.
- This*, used as adverb, 326; weak reference of, 77.
- This here*, 326.
- Those kind*; see Kind, 209.
- Those sort*; see Sort, 209.
- Those there*, 325.
- Through*, misuse of, 326.
- Thus*, beginning a phrase, 88 (a); punctuation with, 255 (b).
- Till*, used for when, 325.
- Title card, 1.
- Title, position of, in manuscript, 338; to be italicized, 270 (c); quoted or italicized, 277; abbreviation of, 358; colon with, 259; of persons, when capitalized, 367; literary, principal words in, to be capitalized, 370; to be italicized, 380.
- To in as to, in regard to*, etc., used in double capacity, 110 (g).
- To take*, conjugation of, 355.
- Together with*, subject not made plural by, 206 (b).
- Too*, preceding a participle, 326.
- Topic*; see Subject, 326.
- Topic outline, 151.
- Topic sentence, 165.
- Transition, paragraphs of, 154, 182 (a).
- Transition sentence, 182 (a); in paragraph, 118.
- Transitional, words and phrases, 167, 182; words within the paragraph, 378; within sentence, 370 ff.; phrases, 189.
- Transitive verb, 353.
- Transpire*, 326.
- Transposition in manuscript, 343; to gain emphasis, 136.
- Treat on, treat with*, for treat of, 326.
- Trend*, 326.
- Trite expressions, 42.
- Try and*, for try to, 326.
- Twain, Mark, 224.
- Type*, number of, 209.
- Ugly*, 327.
- Uncompleted structure, 101.
- Undated past tense, 233.
- Unique*, 327.
- United States, use of the with, 327.
- Unity of sentences, 61 ff.; in sentences, exercises in, 109 ff.; of paragraph, 123 ff.; of whole composition, 140 ff.
- Unnecessary commas, 249.
- Unnecessary shifting of subject, 126; voice, 127; mood, 128; tense, 129; number, 130; person, 131.
- Unnecessary words, omission of, 134.
- Until*, for when, 325, 377.
- Up*, combined with certain verbs, 327.
- Up to date*, 327.
- Upside-down subordination, 141.
- Usage, good, 19 ff.
- Verbal ornaments, 44 (b).
- Verb-phrase, 348.
- Verbs, auxiliary, repetition of, 118, 353; number of, in a relative clause, 206 (j); case of object of, 213; agreement of, with subjects

- 206 ff.; relation of subordinate and principal, 237; exercises in, 52.
- Verse writing, 252.
- Very*, preceding a participle, 326; such and so used for, 114.
- Vim*, 327.
- Violin*, 327.
- Viz.*, 241 (b), 356; punctuation with, 299.
- Vocabulary, grammatical, 336.
- Vocal, voice*, used as noun, 327.
- Vocative substantive, 354.
- Voice, 354; shifting of, 127; misuse of passive, 224.
- Vowel, 354; mispronounced, in words, 364 ff.
- Vulgar closes to letters, 430.
- Vulgarisms in letters, 436.
- Wait on*, 327.
- Want for you*, 328.
- Want in, want out*, etc., 328.
- Want you should*, 327.
- Way*, for away, 328; used adverbially without a preposition, 328.
- Ways*, used as singular, 307.
- We*, for I, 49.
- Weak reference of this and that, 77.
- Weight of clauses, suggesting punctuation, 240.
- Well*, 328.
- When* clause, used as predicate noun, 103.
- When*, use of, 377; when and while, 378.
- Where* clause, used as predicate noun, 103.
- Where*, for that, 328, 377.
- Where to*, 328.
- Which*, applied to persons, 328; referring to whole statement, 81; which and construction, 122 (b).
- While*, meaning of, 378; misuse of, 328.
- Who*, applied to animals, 329; with he says, 210 (a); and preceding words, 210 (b); whom used for, 210 (b).
- Who, which, that*, 378.
- Whose*, 329.
- Wilde, Oscar, 195.
- Will* and shall, 226 ff.
- Willingness, future of, 227.
- Wilson, Woodrow, 266.
- Win out*, 314.
- Wire*, colloquial use of, 329.
- With*, subject not made plural by, 206 (b); vague connective, 329.
- Without*, for unless, 329.
- Woods*, used as singular, 307.
- Wordiness, 41.
- Words, technical, 21; foreign, 22; idiomatic, 23; obsolete and archaic, 24; extemporized, 31; confusion of, 33 ff.; of similar meanings, 34; ambiguous, 35; specific and concrete, 36; omission of unnecessary, 134; commonly misspelled, 319; not to be united, 320; expressions to be written as single—, 321; often mispronounced, 361; connective or transitional, denoting addition, addition with intensification, repetition, exemplification, comparison, purpose, resumption after digression, consequence, abatement, and contrast, 145, 146; tone of, 38; used in two senses in same sentence, 56; repetition of, 57, 58; used in double capacity, 110; transitional, 167, 370 ff.; in pairs, use of comma in, 242 ff.; compound, 292; mispronounced often, list of, 361 ff.; of addition, contrast, result, purpose, repetition, exemplification, intensification, time, place, series, reference, 378 ff.
- Would* and should, 227 ff.
- Would better, would best, would rather*; see Had better.
- Would have*, for had, 329.
- Write-up*, 329.
- Writer, the*, for I, 49.
- Writing materials, 336.
- Writing-paper, 441.
- Writing verse, 252.
- You*, used indefinitely, 83.
- You was*, 329.
- Your favor*, 436 (b).
- Yours*, 436 (b).
- Yours received*, 436 (c).

DICTION		Provincial Foreign 20-22	Obsolete or too new 24, 25	Colloquialism Impropriety 27, 28	Barbarism Slang 29, 30
Sentences	UNITY	Completeness 61	Singleness 62	Stringiness 63	Looseness 64-67
	COHERENCE	Reference of pronouns 76-87	Dangling modifiers 88-90	Order of members 91-94	Squinting 95-96
		Parallelism: 115-125	of Analogous elements 115	Coördination 116	Repetition 117-120
	EMPHASIS	Position 136-137	Placing however , etc. 138	Strong close 139	Climactic order 140
Paragraph	DIVISION	Indention 146-149, 160	Point of division 151	Parts 152	Special kinds 153-158
	UNITY COHERENCE EMPHASIS	Singleness 164	Topic sentence 165	Order of sentences 166	Transitions 167
Whole	UNITY COHERENCE	Singleness 176	Relevancy 177	Limiting of subject 178	Planning 179
	EMPHASIS	Shift of tense 184, 186	Shifting point of view 185	Shifting person 187	Emphasis by clarity 188
GRAMMAR		Agreement 206, 207	Each, either , etc. 208	Adjectives 209	Case 210-219
PUNCTUATION		Between clauses 239-240	Period 241	Comma 242-253	Semicolon Colon 255-260
SPELLING		Accurate pronouncing 301	Doubling final con- sonant 302, 303	Dropping final e 305-306	Plurals 313
MECHANICS		Legibility 322-335	Arranging manuscript 336-340	Alterations 341-345	Quotations 349

Vague and confusing 33-35	Exact and forceful 36-38	Wordiness 39-41	Triteness 42-44	Affectation 45-49
Straggling 68-69	Fragments 70	Comma fault 72	Period fault 73	Participles for verbs 74
Split infinitive 97	Smooth order 98	Illogical construction 99-109	Double meaning 110	Faulty omissions 111-114
And which and which and 122	Wrong parallel 123	a, b, c series 125	Unnecessary shifts 126-131	Various aids 132-134
Faulty subordination 141	Balance 142	Proportion 143	Excision 144	Repetition 145
Grouping parts 159	Within topics 160	Too long 161	Too frequent 162	For emphasis 163
Repetition of words 169	Position 170, 173	Parallelism 171, 174	Proportion 172	Methods of development 175
Arranging 180	Beginnings 181	Marking new parts 182	Connectives 183	Outlines 194-205
Emphasis by label 189	Proportion 190	Position 191	Suspense 192	Climax 193
Adjectives vs. Adverbs 220-223	Voice 224	Mode 225	Shall and Will 226-231	Tense 232-238
Question Mark Exclamation Mark 261-263	Dash 264-266	Parentheses Brackets 267-271	Quotation Marks 272-284	Apostrophe Hyphen 285-297
Singular in s 314	Verbs ending eed 315	ei and ie 316	List of mis- spellings 319	Uniting and separating 320, 321
Syllabication 352-355	Abbreviation 356-358	Numbers 359-364	Capitals 365-378	Italics 379-388

Y0-DCZ-096

